29. Pre-emption—Purchaser with right of pre-emption equal to plaintiff's joining in the purchase of an undivided share of a village, certain persons with rights of pre-emption inferior to plaintiff's—Right of such purchaser to defeat plaintiff's claim.

Where certain vendees with rights of pre-emption equal to the plaintiff's right associated with themselves certain other persons whose rights were inferior in the purchase of an undivided share of a village, held, that as the Punjab Laws Act recognizes no equal or superior rights in a pre-emptor joined with a stranger on a joint sale, plaintiff's right of pre-emption was superior under the Act to that of the vendees collectively.

Held, further, that the sale, being of an undivided share in which the only specification was as to the proportions in which the several vendees should be regarded as joint owners, was bad in its entirety as against the plaintiff.

Plaintiff sued for pre-emption in respect of certain sales of land, but his suits were dismissed by the Divisional Judge on the ground that the sales included a share of shamilat, and that as plaintiff did not expressly sue for this in his plaints he was really suing for less than was sold, which he could not legally do. It appeared, however, from a statement made by plaintiff's agent in Court, that it was the intention to sue for the shamilat as well as the principal land.

Held, that the procedure of the Divisional Court was erroneous. The dismissal of the suits would only have been justifiable if the plaints had expressly shown, or plaintiff's agent had expressly stated, that a share in the shamilat was purposely excluded from the suits. Inasmuch, moreover, as none of the faults enumerated in clause (b) of section 53 of the Civil Procedure Code could be found with the plaints, amendment thereof could only have been made under clause (c) of the same section which was practically done by the Court ascertaining from plaintiff's agent that the shamilat also was claimed.

Held, further, that plaintiff, as proprietor of certain waste land in the village, had under section 12 (e) of the Punjab Laws Act, 1872, a right of pre-emption against the vendee, who was an entire stranger without any interest whatever in the village, although the land of which plaintiff was proprietor was unfit for cultivation and was not assessed with revenue. JASMIR SINGH v. RAHMATULLAH.

31. Pre-emption—Mortgage by conditional sale—Plaintiff in pre-emption suit acting banami—Joint suit for pre-emption by numerous occupancy tenants.

Held, that, though when it is proved that a plaintiff in a pre-emption suit is acting banami the Court should refuse the nominal plaintiff a decree, a plaintiff in such a suit is not disentitled to a decree merely because, in order to raise funds for the maintenance of his suit, he has entered into an agreement with other persons as to what he will do with the land if he gets it, any subsequent transfer of such land by the plaintiff after he has obtained it giving rise to a fresh cause of action to the other pre-emptors.

In a joint suit for pre-emption by several occupancy tenants and others it was objected on appeal that (1) the occupancy tenanss had joined strangers in the plaint, (2) that plaintiffs were not the whole body of the occupancy tenants, and (3) that as individual tenants they could not combine their claims in a single suit.

Held, that the said objections were unfounded. If the list of plaintiffs included any persons who were not occupancy tenants, the proper course was to take the objection at the first hearing and have their names struck out, which could be done without altering the plaint generally or affecting the right of the remaining plaintiffs to claim the whole property. Moreover, as it was not disputed that each occupancy tenant could sue separately for the whole property, or that the whole property would be divided equally among those tenants who succeeded in obtaining a decree there was no reason why the plaintiffs could not sue jointly, even upon the assumption that they did not represent the whole body of the tenants. RAM SUKH DAS v. FAZAL-UD-DIN. 19 P R 1898

32 Pre-emption—Sale to two co-sharers and a stranger—Subsequent acquisition of stranger's share by third co-sharer—Suit by a fourth co-sharer for pre-emption.

The land in suit was in the first instance sold to three persons, of whom two were co-sharers in the joint holding, but one was not. Subsequently plaintiff, who was also a co-sharer in the said holding, sued for pre-emption in respect of the sale, but shortly before the institution of his suit, the stranger vendee sold his share to one K. C., another co-sharer in the same holding. Accordingly at the time when the suit was instituted the land was in the hands of three vendees against no one of whom plaintiff could assert a superior right. It was, however, contended on behalf of plaintiff that regard must be had to the original transaction in which two vendees, who had equal rights with plaintiff, had joined with them in the purchase a third whose right was inferior to that of plaintiff, and that the right of pre-emption which plaintiff would in consequence have had as against the original vendees could not be defeated by the subsequent elimination of the stranger and the substitution of a person against whom plaintiff had not a superior right.

Held, overruling the said contention, that the mere fact that at one stage a stranger had a share in the bargain could not be held to vitiate the right of the three persons who were the vendees at the date of suit and resisted plaintiff's claim with one that was not inferior to his own. A, having sold certain property, in respect of which X. and Y. had equal rights of pre-emption to B., X. privately purchased the said property from B. Subsequent to such re-sale, Y. sued A. and B. for pre-emption.

Held, that X, by his purchase from B. had asserted his pre-emptive title in so efficacions a form as to be entitled to have his bargain secured to him against every one not having a superior right of pre-emption.

the village, their father being alive and proprietor of ancestral land—Consequence of such Act—Punjab Laws Act, section* 12.

In a suit for pre-emption where it appeared that the purchasers were two brothers, of whom one was a proprietor by purchase in the village, and the other had no property of his own, but based his rights on the ground that he was the brother of the other vendee and heir with vested reversionary rights to ancestral property situate in the village which was in possession of his father.

Held, that a son is not as such a co-sharer of his father within the meaning of section 12 of the Punjab Laws Act, and has no right of pre-emption, and that one brother by joining with himself in the purchase another brother who has no right of pre-emption has placed himself in no better position than that held by the latter.

On 4th March 1898, G sold to F the land now in dispute. The deed was attested as a witness by one J who was the Lambardar of the parties' village. On 24th February 1899, N instituted the present suit for pre-emption against the vendor and purchaser. On 13th March 1899, the vendee stated that he had sold the land to J on 23rd January 1899, thereupon the Court added J as co-defendant, who pleaded that the suit against him was barred by time, and that his right of pre-emption was equal to that of plaintiff.

Held, that attesting the deed and taking an active part in its registration amounts to a distinct waiver by J of his right to pre-empt, and having once waived his right with respect to the bargain J was estopped from asserting it against the present pre-emptor whose claim to pre-emption was superior to that of the original vendee.

Held, also, that as the plaintiff in order to succeed against J notwithstanding his (J's) waiver, if his purchase was a genuine one, had to seek to enforce his right of pre-emption against him, the provision of the Limitation Act applicable was article 10 of the second Schedule; and although the suit against F, the original vendee, was instituted within the period prescribed by that article J having been added as a co-defendant three days after the period allowed, the suit should be held barred unless the plaintiff could prove that the sale to J was fictitious.

Where pre-emptor with superior rights agreed with a vendee, who was a stranger, that in consideration of his receiving a portion of the property sold he would waive his objections to the sale, held, that as the transaction was equivalent to that of taking over only a portion of the original bargain or associating a stranger in the purchase, it was not permissible by law and could not therefore defeat the rights of other pre-emptors.

Held, that the doctrine of lis pendens does not apply to a sale of immovable property subject to a right of pre-emption by the original vendee in favour of a pre-emptor with superior rights, who had instituted a suit to enforce his rights during the pendency of similar suits by other claimants with inferior rights.

FAZAL-DAD KHAN v. SAWAN SINGH. 37 P R 1908

41. Pre-emption—Sale completed by execution of decree for specific performance of contract—not subject to pre-emption—Punjab Pre-emption Act II of 1905, sections 3 (5) and 4.

In 1900 one J. sold certain land to defendants 2 and 6. One of the owners of the land happened to be a minor and J. his uncle, as his de facto guardian agreed that if at any time the minor repudiated the sale, he (J.) would give the vendees a like amount of land out of his own property. Subsequently the minor did repudiate the sale and recovered his share from the vendees by suit. Thereon the vendees and J for the land which he had agreed to give them in lieu of the minor's share. This claim was strenuously contested by J. but the vendees obtained a decree. The present plaintiffs who were the sons of J. sued for pre-emption of the land decreed to the vendees.

Held, that the vendee's suit against J. was in its essence one for specific performance of contract and the decree per se did not effect "a sale" of the land even though the price may have been previously paid. The sale (if it could be so called) was not completed until the decree holders executed the decree and so obtained possession of the land, and that it thus fell within the exception given in section 3 (5) of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, as a sale in execution of a decree and consequently no right of pre-emption arose in respect of it. 40 P R 1911

2. Pre emption—Punjab Laws Act, 1872 section 9—Rights to use water of perennial stream—" Immovable property "—General Clauses Act, 1868, section 2 (5.)

Held, that inasmuch as the water of a perennial stream comes out of land the right to use such water is "a benefit arising out of land," and is, therefore, "immovable property" within the meaning of section 2 (5) of the General Clauses Act, 1868, so as to found a suit for pre-emption in respect of a sale thereof under section 9 of the Punjab Laws Act, 1872. ALAM SHER v. RAM CHAND. 11 P R 1898

3. Pre-emption—Sale of immovable property—Exchange—Punjab Laws Act, 1872, section 9.

Held, that an exchange which is intended to be an exchange is not a sale for the purposes of secfion 9 of the Punjab Laws Act merely because the value of the properties exchanged is equalised by the addition of a comparatively small sum of money, or by the mere fact that the two deeds of sale were drawn up contemporaneously which was merely the method employed to arrange the transfer.

The provision of sectiou 10, Punjab Laws Act, 1872 (as amended), that the right of pre-emption shall prima facie be presumed to exist in all village communities, and to extend to all transferable rights of occupancy affecting such lands, applies not only to sales by occupancy tenants, but is also applicable to transactions under which proprietors create a right of occupancy in another for a consideration.

A right of occupancy may be transferable within the meaning of section 10, Punjab Laws Act, 1872 (as amended), either because a power to transfer is given by the Tenancy Act, or because there is an agreement between the landlord and tenant excluding the operation of such of the provisions of the Act as would otherwise prevent alienation. In the present case the right of occupancy being created by con-

3. Pre-emption—Agricultural land—Punjab Pre-emption Act, II of 1905, section 4—No right of pre-emption arises on mortgages or on foreclosure of a right to redeem a mortgage.

One L. mortgaged his agricultural land by way of conditional sale to B. D. B. D. had notice issued on L. under Regulatton XVII of 1806, the year of grace expired on 5th June 1901. In 1905 B. D. brought a suit to obtain possession of the land. The claim was contested by L. but a compromise was arrived at, and it was agreed that the land should remain in the possession of the mortgagee (B. D.), and that if L. (the mortgagor) failed to redeem the mortgage within two years on payment of the mortgage debt together with costs, the mortgagee should on the expiration of that period be deemed to be the absolute owner of the land. The Court passed a decree in conformity with the said compromise on 3rd March 1905. The mortgagor failed to redeem the land within the said period. His brother, the present plaintiff, now brings a suit for pre-emption.—Held, (1) that if the said decree conferred upon the mortgagee no more extensive rights than that of a mortgagee, the plaintiff's suit must fail, as the Punjab Pre-emption Act of 1905 does not recognise the right of pre-mortgagee, and (2) if the mortgagee by virtue of the decree become entitled after the expiry of two years to absolute ownership, the plaintiff's suit must also fail, as, in that event, he must be taken to be suing for pre-emption in respect of a transaction which amounts to a foreclosure of the mortgagor's right to redeem the land, and under section 4 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act of 1905 no right of pre-emption arises on the foreclosure of a right to redeem in respect of agricultural land. 2. And section 12—Pre-emption—Sale of agricultural land by a non-zamindar to a proprietor in the village not covered by the proviso to section 11 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1905—Suit by a member of an agricultural tribe—Superior right—Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1905, sections 11 and 12.

Held, that by virtue of the provisions of sections 11 and 12 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1905, a member of an agricultural tribe has a preferential right of pre-emption in respect to a sale of agricultural land by a vendor who is not a member of an agricultural tribe against a vendee who is a proprietor in the village but who does not come within the purview of the proviso to section 11 of the Act.

3. Held, that the expression " tribe " in section 11 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1905, means the main tribe and not the sub-division of a tribe and consequently Sheikhs of all denominations constitute one tribe for the purposes of that section. ALI MUHAMMAD v. SHAMAN. 112 P R 1908

4. Punjab Laws Act, 1872—Punjab Pre-emption Act, II of 1905—"Agricultural tribes" Lis pendens.

K. D. sold the laid in suit to M. B.—Separate suits for pre-emption were brought by K. B. and A. B. on 22nd October, 1902, and summonses were served on 24th October for 7th November. On 29th October M. K. filed a suit for pre-emption, and on 7th November obtained from M. D. vendee, a deed of sale of the land for the full price mentioned in the previous sale-deed. M. D. then allowed his own suit to go by default and was made defendant in the other two suits.

Held, (i) that inasmuch as K. B. belonged to the Kureshi tribe, which was not notified as an agricultural tribe under Act XIII of 1901 until 1904, he had no right of pre-emption at all at time of suit, and therefore his suit must fail;

(ii) that A. B and M. K. must share the bargain neither being in the circumstances in a better position than the other, inasmuch as (a) A. B.'s suing a week earlier than M. K. does not amount to " superior diligence " (b) A. B. and M. K. had under pre-emption law, equal rights ab initio; (c) M. K's. not obtaining a decree but taking a transfer out of Court instead does not tell against him; (d) M. K.'s purchase being pendente lite does not operate to put him in a better position than A. B.

5. Punjab Pre-emption Act II of 1905, section II and proviso—Aroras of Multan not a sub-division of Khatri tribe—Onus probandi.

Held, that plaintiff on whom the onus lay had failed to prove that Aroras of the Mooltan District are a sub-division of Khatries and members of the same tribe within the meaning of the proviso to section 11 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1905. CHOUDHRI KHUSHI RAM v. ASU RAM. 87 P R 1910

6. Punjab Pre-emption Act. II of 1905, section 3, sub-section (2)—Village immovable property.

I. D. sold a house situate in the abadi, known as Parao Lala Musa to D. D.—M. A., I. D's son, sued for pre-emption alleging that the abadi was part of a " viliage." It appeared that many years ago Government established a halting ground or parao in the immediate vicinity and constructed a number of shops. Since then the bazar had grown and a number of houses were built close by and, at time of suit, this abadi contained 143 residential houses and 110 shops. The land occupied by the parao belonged to mauza Dhaman and the abadi or bazar included land within the limits of that village as well as of the village of Said Gul. It was contended that the house was not "village immovable property" nor subject to pre-emption inasmuch as the abadi parao Lala Musa lay at a distance from what was generally known as the abadi of mauza Dhaman and Said Gul.

Held, by the Division Bench, that if extensions are made to the existing abadi of a village or if a hitherto unoccupied site within the boundaries of the village is built over and settled upon, such new buildings would become "village immovable property."

Held, by Ryves J., that the word "village" in section 3, sub-section (2), Punjab Pre-emption Act, II of 1905, does not mean a collection of houses but means the whole estate or mauza and includes everything within the boundaries of the village area.

Held, also by Ryves, J. (Scott-Smith, J., dissenting) that the definition in this sub-section applies to all immovable property within the limits of a village.

Held, by Scott-Smith, J., that the expression "village site" in the above sub-section could not be considered synonymous with "village" or "estate" but meant the inhabited part of the village or "abadi deh." DEVI DIAL v. MUHAMMAD AMIN. 89 P R 1910

Section 12.

1. The expression "in the order of relationship" in this section has no reference to degrees of propinquity but is equivalent to "order of succession" in cases of inheritance of landed property under the Customary Law of the Punjab. KARIM BAKHSH v. JEHANDAD KHAN. 74 P R 1906 F. B.

2. Custom of pre-emption exists in respect of shops in villages subject to the provisions of this section. KIRPA RAM v. KHUSHALI MAL. 80 P R 1907

3. Held by a majority (Johnstone, J., doubting) that the priorities given by section 12 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1905, are applicable to a claim to the right of pre-emption with reference to a sale executed before the commencement of that Act. SURTA v. FATEH CHAND. 17 P R 1908 F. B.

4. And section 14 (b)—Pre-emption—Sale of agricultural land to a remote heir in the presence of nearer heirs—Suit by another remote heir of equal degree with the vendee—Right of such claimant to share the bargain—Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1905, sections 12 (a) 14 (b).

Held that clause (a) to section 12 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1905, confers the right of pre-emption on the whole line of heirs and not merely on the next and nearest heirs at the time of sale it being provided inter se that the right will be determined by the order of succession, that is, the nearer heir would exclude the more remote, and that in case of a sale to a remote collateral in the presence of nearer heirs a collateral of equal degree with that of vendee has no right in respect to that sale and cannot even avail himself of the provisions of section 14 of the Act.

Section 14 applies to cases where several pre-emptors are equally entitled against the vendee, it does not refer to the case of a claimant who has no preferential right of purchase as against the vendee. JANG BAHADAR KHAN v. KARAM KHAN. 21 P R 1908

5. Pre-emption—Sale of agricultural land by the descendant of a donee—Suit by the heirs of the donor in presence of other descendants of the donee.

2. Pre-emption—Rival claimants equally entitled—Preference.

Held, that where rival claimants are found by the Court to be equally entitled to the right of pre-emption, preference must be given to him who is elected by the vendor under clause (e) of section 14 of the Pre-emption Act, 1905. IBRAHIM v. ILAHI BAKSH. 88 P R 1908

—Pre-emption—Punjab Pre-emption Act, II of 1905—Court's power to extend the time fixed under section 19.

Held, that under section 19 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1905, the Court has power to extend the period originally fixed by it, even after expiry of that period. Provided (1) that the Court should not extend the period save for good and sufficient reason; and (2) that in any event the extension of the period cannot in certain cases suffice to bring a claim within limitation when it would, save for such extension, have been barred by limitation. NARSINGH DAS v. GHULAM NABI. 78 P R 1909

Section 22.

1. Pre-emption—Purchase-money—Good faith.

Held, that a person who in his anxiety to purchase a particular plot of land or to purchase land in a particular village gives a fancy price is acting in good faith within the terms of section 22 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1905, although his intention is to render it practically impossible for any one with a superior right of pre-emption to oust him. NIADAR MAL v. MUKH RAM. 13 P R 1908

2. Pre-emption — Purchase-money—Good faith.

Held, that the price entered in a deed of sale is fixed in good faith within the terms of section 22 of the Pre-emption Act, if it is actually paid for the property sold, but in the case of a transfer in satisfaction of old debts it is for the Court to find out whether the actual value of the debts amounted to its face value or not, and in case of its arriving at the latter conclusion, it should ascertain the market value of the property. HOA RAM v. RANA PALIA. 47 P R 1909

3. Proviso—Option to take market value or have sale cancelled, when to be granted by Courts.

See PRE-EMPTION—10. PURCHASE-MONEY. 54 P R 1911

Section 28.

1. This is not a substantive section, it only provides a period of one year from the 11th May 1905 during which, in spite of the shorter period provided by section 29, parties might exercise rights of pre-emption which had already accrued to them and which might be barred under the latter section. LADHU v. SARDAR MUHAMMAD. 131 P R 1907

2. It applies to every suit where the right to sue for pre-emption had not expired at the date of the commencement of the Act.

The fact that where under the old Act a special custom for the enforcement of a right was required to be substantiated by a plaintiff, the new Act relieves him of the burden of proving that custom and confers those rights on him by Statute has no effect as on the applicability of the section to rights which were not barred by the law of limitation at its commencement. THAKARIA v. DAYA RAM. 143 P R 1907

3. Pre-emption—Limitation—Rights accrued before and after commencement of Punjab Pre-emption Act, II of 1905, sections 28 and 29.

Held, that every claim to the right of pre-emption made after the commencement of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, II of 1905, (i.e., the 11th May 1905), is governed by the provisions of that Act whether that right has accrued before or after its commencement.

Held, also, that the Act purports to fix one year as the period of limitation for every claim to pre-emption, and that any one whose cause of action arose and against whom limitation has begun to run under article 120 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, but which has not expired before the commencement of the Act, will have one year within which to sue from the date of the commencement of the Act under section 28 and any one, whose cause of action arises or whose right to sue accrues after the commencement of the Act or against whom limitation began to run for the first time after the commencement of the Act, will have one year within which to sue, such year to be computed from the periods laid down in that section.

Held, therefore, that a suit for pre-emption brought on the 8th February 1907, in respect of a sale, dated the 2nd September 1904, is barred by limitation under section 28 of the Act, notwithstanding that mutation was not effected till the 23rd February 1906. IMAM BAKSH v. NUR MUHAMMAD. 74 P R 1909

Section 29.

—This is the substantive section fixing the period of limitation, and by section 2 (3) it applies to every claim to the right of pre-emption whether that right has accrued before or after its commencement. LADHU v. SARDAR MUHAMMAD. 131 P R 1907

Defendants were merchants at Sialkote, and plaintiff was their correspondent or agent at Mooltan. Defendants came to Mooltan to purchase goods, and to pay for them drew hoondies for Rs. 2,000 in favour of plaintiff on certain Amritsar firms at premium of Rs. 26-4, plaintiff sold the hoondies at the same rate to Tara Chund and Asanund, a Mooltan firm, on ten days' credit. The hoondies were duly paid by the Amritsar firms, and Rs. 1,000 were recovered from T. C. and A. of Mooltan, who then became bankrupt, and only Rs. 315-2 more were recovered from the bankrupt firm. Held, that as it had not been shown that plaintiff acted without reasonable care and prudence or had deviated from any known usage of trade, the firm of T. C. and A. being at the time of the sale of the hoondies in good credit, and the grant of 10 days' credit to them being in accordance with the usage of trade in Mooltan, the plaintiff was not liable to defendants on account of the hoondies in question unless he acted as a del credere agent. Held, also, that plaintiff did not, either by express or implied contract, act as a del credere agent, for he did not expressly become, for a higher remuneration than was generally given, responsible for the solvency of the firm of T. C. and A. and there was nothing in the usages of exchange brokers at Mooltan or the general course of dealing between plaintiff and defendants from which such a guarantee could be implied. Quære,—Whether delay on the part of the drawees at Amritsar in honoring the hoondies, if such delay were the cause of non-payment by T. C. and A. would have absolved the plaintiff from his guarantee as a del credere agent.

Upon payment of a hoondi it is customary with native firms for the drawee, to return the hoondi to the drawer and it is material to consider this custom when the drawer complains of want of notice of dishonour from an intermediate party to the instrument. HARDIAL v. KHILLOO MULLICK.

the purchase "to the extent of funds available;" but afterwards, before any contract was signed on behalf of the Government denied that there were funds available. Held, that so far as the statements of A. gave rise to an implied contract they were subject to the condition that there should be funds available in his hands for repairs of the 8th Division, Grand Trunk Road, and that as in fact A. had no funds available in his Division the Local Government was not bound by the course which A took in the matter, the precise extent of his authority having been communicated to the plaintiff.

The Local Government may contract by the head of a department or through subordinate agents; but the latter contracts to bind the Government must clearly be within the particular agent's authority, express or implied, with due regard to the character in which such agent has been held out. 21. Appointment of Road Overseer to superintend building—Liability of, as agent for negligence.

The defendant, a Road Overseer, was appointed by the Deputy Commissioner to superintend the building of a kutcharry. He received money as advances, but after completion of the building it was alleged that the materials were bad and the work defective, and he was sued for a refund of Rs. 3,726 as damages occasioned by his neglect.

Held, that the defendant was, under section 194 of Act IX of 1872, an agent, and responsible to the Government.

Held, also, that he was bound to act with reasonable diligence and to use such skill as he possessed, though, as Road Overseer, he could not be expected to conduct the business with as much skill as was generally possessed by professional builders and that with reference to the question of his inefficient superintendence, regard must be paid to his other work and duties.

Held, also, that as to the supply of bad materials, the question was whether they were so bad that reasonable diligence in securing proper materials could not have been exercised by defendant.

Held, also, that the duty of defendants superiors to supervise the work as it was being done, and the ratification by the Deputy Commissioner from time to time of what defendant did, should be considered.

Case remanded under section 351, Civil Procedure Code. BALMOKAND v. SECRETARY OF STATE.

22. Public agent—Scope of authority—Liability of Government for unauthorized acts of agent.

B., negotiating with the Government for the building of certain public works, communicated with the Secretary to Government through the Superintending Engineer and received through the latter replies to his letters. In forwarding one of the replies the Superintending Engineer led B. to understand that his contract had been accepted, whereas the Govenment had not authorized the Superintending Engineer to make a final or specific contract with B.

Held, that the Government was not bound by the mistake or unauthorized act of the Superintending Engineer, and that there was no such contract made between the Government and B., as the latter relied on, inasmuch as the Government had by the practice of forwarding to B. copies of the Secretary's letter to the Superintending Engineer, made known that the scope of the latter's employment in the matter was limited to his express instructions. 24. Authority of Agent to confess judgment—Decree on confession—Review—Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), sections 98 and 376—Circumstances under which principal is entitled to relief.

On 24th February 1877, plaintiff instituted a suit against defendant to establish his right to the office of Diwan of the khangah of Mirah Sahib at Thuska, and to share in the management of the institution. Defendant was summoned for 20th March 1877 for settlement of issues. On 7th March 1877, before the summons was served, defendant's general agent or mukhtar, Mahamda Shah, appeared and confessed judgment, upon which a decree was passed in favour of plaintiff.

On 29th March 1877, defendant, through his pleader, applied for review of judgment on the grounds that, 1st, the decree on confession of judgment had been passed before the date fixed for hearing; and 2nd, that the confession of judgment had been made without defendant's consent or authority. The application was rejected on the ground that Mahamada Shah's power of attorney gave him power to confess judgment and bind defendant.

Held by SMYTHE, J. following No. 37, Punjab Record, 1877, that defendant was entitled to relief, unless it could be shown that the agent was in point of fact expressly or impliedly authorized to make the confession of judgment sought to be impeached.

Held by PLOWDEN, J. that even if the power of attorney was sufficient in itself, and without any further instrument of authorization to confer upon the agent authority to confess judgment generally, the defendant would be entitled to relief if he could show that the general authority had in the particular case been exercised in such a manner or with such results that it would be unjust to hold him bound by his agent's act.

Per PLOWDEN, J.—Under the Code of Civil Procedure, a decree by consent may be set aside by review if the attainment of the ends of justice require it, and, therefore, if it appeared that the confession of judgment had been made by the agent under such circumstances that it operated as a fraud upon the defendant, or was made in error or acted as a surprise upon him, he would be primâ facie entitled to the relief sought. 25. Contract Act (IX of 1872), section 230 —Suit by agent of undisclosed principal.

In a suit on a written contract, purporting to be entered into by plaintiff as a principal and not as an agent, defendants objected (after issues had been drawn, and the plaintiff's evidence recorded) that the firm of which plaintiff was the agent should have brought the suit: and the lower Courts, allowing this objection, dismissed the suit, holding that plaintiff had in fact entered into the contract as an agent.

Held, reversing the orders of the lower Courts, that plaintiff was competent to maintain the suit in his own name under the provisions of section 230 of the Contract Act, even if he had contracted as the agent of an undisclosed principal. SAHIB RAM v. MUNSHI LAL. 64 P R 1881

26. Contract Act (IX of 1872), section 235 —Liability of pretended agent—" Loss or damage "—Compensation how to be estimated.

In a suit, to the facts of which section 235 of the Contract Act was held to be applicable, plaintiff sued to recover from the defendant compensation for the loss which he had incurred by taking a lease from the defendant, who untruly represented himself to be the authorized agent of his father, which lease the defendant's father refused to ratify. The Judge of the Small Cause Court gave plaintiff a decree, computing the damages at the profit which pliantiff would have gained had he succeeded in sub-leasing the land for the whole of the 3 years of his lease at the rate at which the owner had subsequently let the land for one year.

Held, that the loss incurred by dealing with a person who assumes to be an agent, within the meaning of section 235 of the Contract Act, but is not really authorized, and whose acts are not ratified by the alleged employer, includes the loss of the bargain, and that the Judge of the Small Cause Court was therefore right in attempting to estimate the value of the lease. But that he had not proceeded on correct principles in determining such value as he had apparently rather considered prospective profits than the present value, the correct estimate being the sum for which the plaintiff could have disposed of the lease to a solvent tenant, who would guarantee him against all further responsibility to the lessor. MUHAMMAD ISMAIL v. GULAB RAI. 160 P R 1882

Plaintiff as auctioneer put up the property of one X. to auction in execution of a decree held by one Y. and part of the property was purchased by the defendant, who was allowed to take it away without paying the price.

Held, that under the circumstances of the case the plaintiff was entitled to maintain a suit for the recovery of the price, as it might be taken that there was a distinct understanding that purchasers should pay the prices of the goods purchased by them to the auctioneer, the plaintiff. 28. Contract Act (IX of 1872), section 217 —Agent's right of retainer—" Business " of agency.

Held, that section 217 of the Contract Act does not justify an agent in retaining sums received on account of his principal in the business of an agency, on account of remuneration alleged to be due to him for acting in another agency which had long previously expired, the word " business " in the section meaning a continuing business or the same business as that for which the agent had been agent before. 29. Agency—Merchant buying goods in a foreign market on behalf of another—" Principal and agent "—" Vendor "—Fraud—lower Appellate Court dismissing claim on a point not taken in the first Court—Right to rescind contract—Goods rdered according to sample—Difference in goods supplied—Contract Act, 1872, sections 112, 118.

A commission merchant, who buys goods on behalf of a correspondent in a foreign market, does so as principal, and has no authority to pledge the credit of his correspondent. He is clothed with the rights of a vendor of the goods for the recovery of his dues from the correspondent, but he is not thereby absolved from his duty as agent to buy the goods as much below the limit of price fixed in the order given him as he reasonably can, and he ought to charge only what he has actually paid for them. If he acts otherwise, his conduct amounts to a fraud on his principal.

Where in such a case the contract between the commission merchant and his correspondent has not been induced by fraud, and no act of bad faith is imputable to the former, while the contract is in an executory state, the goods purchased under the contract become the property of the correspondent, who is bound to pay their proper value, and cannot rescind the contract merely because the commission merchant demands from him a higher price than was actually paid for such goods. But such over-charge will be disallowed in the account between the parties.

When goods are ordered according to sample and the goods supplied are appreciably different in quality from such sample, the buyer may, ordinarily, either reject the goods or keep them and claim a reduction in price by way of compensation, giving notice to the seller of such claim within a reasonable time. Such difference, however, must be one which men of sound sense in the particular trade would regard as appreciable. F. W. SHAW v. BAIJ NATH. 21 P R 1897

30. Principal and agent—Managing Agent and Company—Liability to account.

Held, that the relationship between a Company and its Managing Agent being that of principal and agent, it is the duty of the latter to render proper accounts to the former. The fact that an agent of a Company was paid by commission or was subordinate to the control of its Directors, or that he had delivered up to them all the account books of the Campany, does not exonerate him from the liability to account.

7. Guarantee.

In consideration of a loan advanced by the Delhi Bank to Mary H, the said Mary H and her sureties bound themselves jointly and severally to liquidate by instalments the whole amount of principal and interest, insurance and other charges, within the period of 12 months from the date of bond. Default being made, a suit was filed against all the obligors, but as service could not be effected against Mary H, a decree was passed against the sureties only. Held, that it was necessary to proceed against the principal before decreeing against the sureties. Held, further, that the liability of the sureties was not limited to 12 months. It is for the debtor to find out and pay his creditor, and it is for the surety to see that the principal debtor pays the debt; and it is not the duty of the creditor (in the absence of special agreement to that effect), to call in and demand the debt within a certain time, provided that the period of limitation is not exceeded. Held, also on the plea of the appellants that the Bank caused loss by gross and wilful neglect in failing to sue M. H. though requested by one of the sureties, that there was no obligation on the Bank, either at law or in equity, to sue an insolvent person, and that the mere omission of the Bank to sue for the instalments, and the refusal of the Bank when asked to empower one of the sureties to act for the Bank in realizing the debt, could not of itself be taken to have had the effect of inducing or assisting in a fraudulent disposal of the principal's property, and therefore could not be taken to exonerate the sureties. Plaintiffs sued on a bond, the cause of action on which accrued on 15th September 1868, and relied on a series of letters from defendant extending from 14th June 1870 to 23rd June 1872 as acknowledgments. The claim as against the principal debtor was barred.

The letters generally complained of the way in which Dr. Menzies, the principal debtor, and his son—who was one of the sureties—were evading their obligations and urging on the Bank (plaintiffs) the necessity of taking vigorous measures against them, so as to protect the writer, Dr. Morice (defendant), and the third surety, Captain Price from the loss which otherwise they would suffer. Dr. Morice wrote throughout as a surety still liable for the debt.

In one letter dated 16th June 1871 Dr. Morice wrote as follows :—

" As Dr. Menzies has behaved in a most " dishonest and disgraceful manner I think " he ought to suffer and not the securities, " ...... I trust the Bank will in fairness to " the securities take all steps in their " power to make Dr. Menzies pay his own " debts....... .... I will agree to any " thing it proposes."

The letters of 21st and 23rd June 1872 contained the following :—

"I have just heard from Captain Price, " and I think we can make arrangements " regarding Dr. Menzies' debt to the Bank, " provided the Bank is not too hard on us. " I shall be glad to hear what the Bank " propose." ... . " It is quite impossible for us to pay the " whole of Dr. Menzies' debt, including " interest, down, but we might come to " some arrangement that would be fair " to the Bank without being utterly ruinous to " ourselves."

On or about 8th June 1870, Dr. Menzies fled from India, without giving any intimation to the Bank. After some correspondence with the sureties, and after writing to England to Dr. Menzies threatening proceedings, the Bank by a letter dated 22nd November 1870, put the matter in the hands of their London solicitor, Mr. Lattey.

It turned out that Dr. Menzies had gone to live in Guernsey, and the Attorney-General of that island, who was consulted, gave an opinion to the effect that proceedings could not be taken in the Courts there until Dr. Menzies had resided there a year and a day. Before the time for proceeding arrived, Dr. Menzies fled to some place on the Continent, and when next the Bank got a distinct clue to his whereabouts, he was at Buenos Ayres in South America.

Then followed correspondence in which the possibility of following him there was discussed, but the difficulties were great. On 23rd August 1872 Mr. Lattey advised the Bank to abandon the idea of instituting proceedings in Buenos Ayres. He wrote—" I am free to confess that such " steps if taken would, in my opinion, be " accompanied with considerable risk as to " costs, and more than a strong chance " of a futile result." On this advice the Bank acted.

On the 8th June 1871 Dr. Menzies was declared a bankrupt in England, and the Bank accepted a dividend under his bankruptcy in England.

On 27th April 1872, and again on 23rd June 1872, Dr. Morice, by letter, urged the Bank to institute proceedings against Dr. Menzies, and said he and his co-surety Captain Price were willing to pay expenses.

To the second letter the Secretary to the Bank replied on 28th June 1872—" I note " that you are willing to pay the expenses " of prosecuting Dr. Menzies at Buenos " Ayres. I am now taking steps to have " this done, but it must necessarily be a " good many months before the result can be " known."

Held, 1st, that the letters did not require a stamp under article 5, Schedule II, Act XVIII of 1869. The words " note or memorandum whereby a debt is acknowledged to be due " (article 5) mean a document made for the purpose of recording and affording evidence of an acknowledgment of a debt, and do not include every letter or other writing which though written without any idea whatever of securing evidence of an acknowledgment happens incidentally to contain an acknowledgment express or implied.

Held, 2ndly, that the letters contained an " unqualified admission of Dr. Morice's " liability as still subsisting " within the meaning of section 20, Act IX of 1871.

That the letter of 16th June 1871, being written within three years from the date on which the cause of action originally accrued gave plaintiff a new period of limitation extending to 16th June 1874.

That the letters of 21st and 23rd June 1872 as acknowledgments extend the period over three years more, i.e., to the latter half of June 1875, and that the suit having been instituted on 8th June 1875, was within time.

Held, 3rdly, that the Bank was not bound to take legal proceedings against Dr. Menzies, but that such a duty was cast on the Bank by its correspondence with Dr. Morice, and that it had done all that a prudent man would do under the circumstances, and properly discharged the duty it had taken upon itself by its Secretary's letter of 28th June 1872 ; and further, that even if the Bank by the letter of 28th June 1872, had undertaken absolutely, and at all risks, to proceed against Dr. Menzies, still its neglect to do so would not release Dr. Morice, unless it could be shown that Dr. Menzies was then solvent and had since become insolvent.

Held, 4thly, that the sureties were not discharged by reason of the Bank allowing the claim against Dr. Menzies to become barred by lapse of time, as the law of limitation did not discharge the principal or extinguish the debt, but merely barred the remedy.

Held, 5thly, that the Bank did not by accepting a dividend under Dr. Menzies' bankruptcy in England and assenting to his discharge by their own act release Dr. Menzies, so as to discharge his sureties ; that Dr. Menzies' discharge under his bankruptcy took effect in India without reference to anything the Bank said or did : that Dr. Menzies was discharged in India just as he was in England, not by the acts of the Bank, but by operation of law, and that, accordingly, his discharge did not carry with it a release of his surety, Dr. Morice. Plaintiff, a surety, sued his principal to recover the amount paid by him under a decree obtained by the creditor against him as surety. The surety did not appeal, but acquiesced in the decree against himself. The action of the creditor as against the principal debtor was barred by limitation, and the action against the surety would also have been barred, but for the fact that he had before expiry of the period of limitation, struck a balance of the ac-

Held, under the circumstances that plaintiff was not entitled to recover from his principal the amount which he had been compelled to pay under the decree against him.

A moral obligation to pay a debt barred by limitation subsists, though the legal means of recovering it have been lost, but a surety, paying such a debt does not pay "rightfully" within the meaning of section 145 of the Contract Act, IX of 1872, and is therefore not entitled to recover from his principal. 18. Contract for supply of timber—Advance made to contractors on plaintiff's security—Failure of contract—Liability of surety for balance of advance—Surety's right to recover such balance from contractors—Contract of indemnity made in Bahawalpur State not governed by law of British India.

The defendants in November 1869 entered into a contract with the Political Agent of the Bahawalpur State to supply timber. Nothing was said as to the quantity of timber which was to be supplied, nor as to the time during which the contract was to remain in force, but the contract allowed the Political Agent to take the timber or not according to his approval of it. Shortly after the making of the contract, the contractors were desirous of obtaining an advance of money, and it appeared that an advance of Rs. 10,000 was made from the Bahawalpur State by the Political Agent on the security of the plaintiff. The contractors supplied some timber, part of which was accepted, and part rejected, and finally, in September 1870, the Political Agent called upon the plaintiff to pay the balance which then remained of the advance of Rs. 10,000 after giving credit for the timber which had been received for the State. This amount the plaintiff was obliged to pay, and he therefore sued to recover it from the defendants.

Held, by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee, upholding the decree of the Chief Court, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendants. The contract under which the plaintiff became the surety was made in Bahawalpur, and the parties must be considered to have made it according to the liabilities that would be ncurred there, the principle not being a correct one that when the surety came to enforce his rights against the principals the law of British India was to be looked at. As therefore the parties clearly contemplated that the plaintiff was to be responsible for the repayment of the advance in case the contract should fail, and the contract had clearly failed in September 1870, when the Political Agent directed the balance to be recovered from the plaintiff, the decree in favour of the plaintiff ought to stand.

Their Lordships held further on the facts that the Political Agent was both entitled to put an end to the contract, and justified in so doing. SIRDAR SUJAN SINGH v. GUNGA RAM.

—Hindu Wills Act (XXI of 1870), Sikhs, Brahmos and unorthodox Hindus—Testamentary capacity of testator—Execution—Validity of bequests and trusts created by the will—Blanks in body of will—Costs in testamentary suits.

The testator Sardar Dyal Singh Majithia, a member of a well-known Sikh family, died childless in 1898, and by his will, which he had executed and duly deposited with the Registrar of the District in 1895, after making certain provisions for his widow's maintenance and bequeathing his ancestral estate to his nephew Sardar Gajindra Singh, and a legacy of Rs. 20,000 to a Mrs. Catherine Gill, and appointing executors, bequeathed to certain trustees a considerable portion of his estate for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a first class Arts College at Lahore, and for a public library near the city of Lahore, and also bequeathed certain property to the Church Mission Society at Amritsar on the condition that they should raise the Middle School already established by them at Majithia to a High School, and he also bequeathed all his property in his newspaper known as the Tribune, published at Lahore, to certain trustees whom he appointed to manage and conduct it. The executors propounded the will and asked for probate Caveat were entered by the testator's widow, Rani Bhagwan Kour, his nephew, Sirdar Gajindra Singh, his relation, Sardar Attar Singh, and one Mrs. Catherine Gill, who alleged herself to be the second widow of the deceased, all of whom filed written statements objecting to the grant of probate and contesting the due execution and validity of the will on, amongst others, the following grounds.

That the Administration Act, V of 1881, did not apply to the deceased, as he was not a Hindu within the meaning of section 2 of that Act, because (a) he was born a Sikh and Sikhs are not included within the term Hindu ; (b) he had become a Brahmo, and (c) because he had in any case ceased to be a Sikh or Hindu by cutting his hair and smoking and by indulging in prohibited food, and by a eating with Muhammadans, Christians and others, with whom Sikhs and Hindus are not allowed to eat. That the will was not duly executed. That there were alterations and interlineations in the will which were not duly witnessed, and the will was therefore invalid. That the circumstances under which the will was executed rendered it invalid on the ground of undue influence. That the trusts created by the will were void. That the deceased had no right to make a will bequeathing the property he did to the various trusts, and that, therefore, the deceased should be held to have died intestate.

Held, on the evidence, upon a comparison of the three Acts passed by the Indian Legislature in regard to Intestate and Testamentary succession and administration, that the term Hindu in section 2 of Act V of 1881 includes Sikhs. That a person born a Sikh did not cease to be a Hindu or Sikh unless he renounced Hinduism or Sikhism. Mere indulgence in certain practices as to eating and living reprobated by other Hindus or professing to be a Brahmo did not preclude his coming within the meaning of section 2 of Act V of 1881.

Held, further, that an alteration, even, if made after execution in the will of a Hindu testator (not effected by Act XXI of 1870) if attested by him does not invalidate it.

Held, also, that the question of the validity of the trusts contained in a will are not within the province of a Probate Court.

Held, also, on the facts that the testator represented the document to be his will, and signed it in the presence of the two attesting withnesses, and deposited it with the Registrar by a special attorney as his last will, and that he had a sound disposing mind at the time of its execution, and that there were no blanks in it when executed.

Held, also, that the objectors having protracted the proceedings and wasted the time of the Court by the production of false witnesses were not entitled to have their costs paid out of the estate. BABU JAGENDRA CHANDRA BOSE AND OTHERS v. RANI BHAGWAN KAUR AND OTHERS 63 P R 1900

(iii) That lapse from orthodox practices in matters of diet and ceremonial observance could not have the effect of excluding a Hindu or a Sikh from the category of Hindus in the Act, especially in the case of one who had been born within its purview and who had never become otherwise separated from the religious communion in which he was born.

Section 7.

—And section 19*—Universal or residuary legatee—Grant of probate to, with copy of the will annexed, under section* 19 of the Act.

The testator, a Hindu, left a will disposing of his property as follows : two items mentioned in the list of property given in the will to be dedicated to charitable uses and all the rest of the property to go to his wife " besides whom I have no other heir to succeed to my property " ; provision was then made for the maintenance of an adopted son ; and, lastly, two persons were appointed by name " to act as sarbarahs for my wife."

No executor was appointed by the will.

Held, that the widow was not entitled to probate as an executrix appointed by necessary implication within the meaning of section 7 of Act V of 1881, but to letters of administration with the will annexed, under section 19 of the Act, as universal or residuary legatee.

Held, also, that the sarbarahs were not executors named in the will, and that such was not the testator's intention.

Held, further, per Rivaz J. The District Judge was correct in excluding from the inquiry any question relating to the capacity of the testator to dispose of his property at all by will or as to the validity (by law or custom) of any of the provisions contained in the will. —And section 64*—Letters of administration—Oral will.*

One G. M., caste Bhabra, died leaving ancestral and self-acquired movable and immovable property ; and the present litigation arose out of an application under section 64 of the Probate and Succession Act, 1881, for administration of the above estate by Mussammat H. as guardian of M. L. in whose favour she propounded an oral will of the deceased. The application was resisted by the defendants, first cousins and next of kin of the deceased, who denied both the factum and the validity of the will set up, and alleged that M. L. was an illegitimate son of the deceased and Mussammat H., a Jhiwari by caste, his concubine ; and they prayed that letters of administration to the estate in question should be granted to them. The District Judge found the will proved and by custom valid in so far as it related to the movable and self-acquired immovable property of the deceased; and in respect of such property he granted letters of administration to Mussammat H.

Held, on appeal to the Chief Court that the oral will alleged had not been proved and that even assuming the legitimacy of M. L. (on which point no finding was given), Mussammat H. was not a fit person to be appointed guardian of the minor M. L. or administratrix to the estate of the deceased.

It was further ordered that letters of administration be granted to the defendants. NATHU MAL v. MANNU MAL 105 P R 1893 —And section 64—Movable or immovable property within the jurisdiction of District Judge.

In an application made under section 64 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, for grant of letters of administration to the estate of H. S. deceased, it was found that the deceased had no place of abode or movable or immovable property in the Punjab unless a decree of the Chief Court for Rs. 25,602-9-0 in favour of the deceased in a suit dismissed by the District Judge of Delhi constituted "property" within the meaning of section 56 of the Act.

Held, that the judgment-debt of the deceased was not property, movable or immovable, within the meaning of section 56 of Act V of 1881, and that therefore the Chief Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the application for a grant of letters of administration. Re THE GOODS OF KAUR HIRA SINGH, DECEASED.

The Court probably has power to reduce the amount of security required of an administrator, but such reduction should not be permitted in a case where the letters of administration as originally granted are intact, and have not been modified or revoked. Held, that no appeal lay from the order of the District Judge under section 86 of the Act, inasmuch as the order was not one made by the District Judge by virtue of the powers expressly conferred upon him by the Act.

Held, also, that the order being an interlocutory one on a point of jurisdiction, no revision lay in the Chief Court. SHIB DIT SINGH v. DEVINDAR SINGH.

the Court of Wards; that after the time the debt was contracted he was living on a small monthly allowance of Rs. 160, which was inadequate for his wants; that he cast about for a loan, and that plaintiff, whom he described as an astute lawyer's clerk, caught him in his meshes and got him to execute the note for a grossly inadequate consideration. It was, therefore, urged on his behalf that the doctrine of the English Court of Chancery in the case of expectant heirs and necessitous persons should be applied, and a decree passed merely for what he had actually received, with reasonable interest thereon. It appeared that defendant No. 1 was a well grown and mature man of about thirty, who had already succeeded to a large estate, and that, though addicted to extravagance and debauchery, he was not a person of weak mental capacity, or in any state of mental or bodily distress, or such necessity as made him incapable of weighing the consequences of the transaction into which he was entering with the plaintiff, with whom he had had no previous dealings.

Held, that under the above circumstances defendant No. 1 could not be placed in the category of those incapable of protecting themselves, and that the case must therefore, be treated as an ordinary case of debtor and creditor, the onus of proof of all the disputed facts being, on the pleadings, upon defendant No. 1.

Held, further, that there is an equity founded upon the gross inadequacy of consideration, but it can only be when the inadequacy is such as to involve the conclusion that the party either did not understand what he was about or was the victim of some imposition.

Found, upon the evidence that defendant No. 1 had failed to prove his allegations.

1. The Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. IX of 1887, section 17—Payment of decretal amount in executing Court on an exparte decree by another Court is equivalent to payment into the latter Court and does not bar an application for setting aside the exparte decree.

An exparte decree was passed by the Cantonment Small Cause Court, Ambala, and transferred for execution to Multan. The judgment-debtor paid the decretal amount into the Multan Court on 3rd June 1908 and made an application for setting aside the ex parte decree to the Ambala Court on 16th June 1908, the Court rejected the application on the grounds that the decree had been satisfied and had ceased to exist inasmuch as the deposit under section 17 of the Small Cause Courts Act, 1887, should have been made in the Ambala Court. The decree-holder took the money out of the Multan Court on 17th June.

Held, that the application for setting aside the decree was made while it was alive and the payment into the Multan Court was no bar to the application made to the Ambala Court and must be treated as a compliance with the rule laid down in section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887. Where Articles of Association of a Company empowered the Directors generally to do all such acts as under the Indian Companies Act and Articles of Association are directed or authorised to be done by the Company in General Meeting, held, that this authority did not absolve the Directors from the necessity of observing the established principle which should regulate their management of the Company's affairs, and if their acts were not reasonably necessary for efficient management, the Company would not be bound by them. Held further, that to establish ratification by the Company of acts ultra vires of the Directors it was necessary for the plaintiff to prove (1) that the shareholders present at the meeting at which it was alleged that ratification had been accorded had clear knowledge of what was to be ratified, and (2) that the absent shareholders had individually assented to the ratification.

3. Public Company—Articles of Association—Directors exceeding borrowing powers—Adoption and ratification of ultra vires acts of Director—Lien on present and future property.

The Articles of Association of the defendant company provided that the Directors might, from time to time at their discretion, borrow any sum or sums of money for the purposes of the Company, but so that not more than Rs. 4,00,000 should be owing at any one time without the sanction of a General Meeting. The Directors exceeded their borrowing powers, but the excessive borrowing had been brought through the balance sheets of the Company to the notice of the shareholders who, instead of objecting to it, endorsed the actions of the Directors by passing the accounts and declaring dividends. Held, that the above acts of the Company constituted sanction and ratification of the excessive borrowing by the Directors. Held, also, that as in equity there could be a valid assignment of property to be subsequently acquired the plaintiff had a lien on all the goods of the Company which had been obviously acquired by the latter by means of the overdraft allowed by the plaintiff bank Held, further, that the defendant had failed to substantiate their contention that the goods of the Company were wrongfully taken possession of by the Bank or sold for inadequate sums and without reasonable notice to the Company, or that the inadequacy of price exceeded the amount claimed, or that, by the fact of their taking over possession of the defendants' property, the plaintiff's remedy to recover any balance which remained due after credit of the sale proceeds, had become exhausted, as, under section 176 of the Contract Act, if the proceeds of sale of goods were less than the amount due, the Company was still liable to pay the balance. Section 2 (3)

1. And section 3 (2)—"Land," meaning of—Transfer of his interest in a mortgage executed before the Punjab Alienation of Land Act came into force by a mortgagee—Unobjectionable transfer.

In 1876 'A' mortgaged his land to 'B' with liberty to redeem at any time. In 1884 'B' transferred his rights under the mortgage deed to 'C,' who in July 1901, after the Punjab Alienation of Land Act had come into operation, sold his rights as mortgagee under the transaction of 1884 to 'D,' a Khatri, who was not a member of an agricultural tribe. The sale-deed having been presented for mutation of names the Naib Tahsildar referred the case to the Deputy Commissioner for orders. The latter considering that the transaction was not permissible under the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act treated it as a sub-mortgage; and under section 9 of the Act revised the terms of the sale-deed, converting the sale into a usufructuary mortgage for 20 years and directed that on the expiration of that term the land should be re-delivered to the original owner. On appeal the Commissioner modified this order to this extent that on the expiration of the term of the mortgage the land should revert to 'C' instead of 'A' and that if within the period of 20 years, 'A' claims redemption he might recover possession from 'D' after payment to him through 'C' such sum less than Rs. 200 as the Deputy Commissioner might fix with regard to the number of years 'D' had been in possession.

Held, that a usufructuary mortgage of land which is not occupied as the site of any building in a town or village and is occupied or let for agricultural purposes or for purposes subservient to agriculture or for pasture is land within the meaning of clause (3) of section 2 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, and where a permanent alienation of such land had taken place since the said Act came into force the proper procedure for a Deputy Commissioner is to proceed under section 3 (2) to sanction or to refuse to sanction the sale, and in case of refusal to fix terms and conditions under section 14. Held, further, that the objects of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act are to encourage thrift and prevent the extravagance which excessive credit suggests and facilitates, and also to protect the ignorant zamindars against the wiles of the money-lender, and have no bearing at all upon sales of the nature described as having taken place between 'C' and 'D' which are quite harmless or matters of indifference, and therefore such a sale ought to have been sanctioned. conditional sales absolute—Duty of Civil Court under section 9 (3) of the Act—Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, sections 2 (3) and 9.

Held, that the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, applies to baibilwafa transactions regarding occupancy rights. The word "land" as defined in section 2 (3) of the Act includes occupancy rights in land and therefore in suits for declaring conditional sales of such right absolute brought after that Act came into force, the Civil Courts are bound to refer such cases to the Deputy Commissioner under the provisions of sub-section (3) of section 9 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. Section 3.

1. Permanent alienation of land to a money-lender—Sanction of Deputy Commissioner—Financial Commissioner's Circular Letter No. 3441, dated 5th June 1901.

Held, that where the money-lender is a member of an agricultural tribe and of the same tribe or a tribe in the same group as the alienor or is an agriculturist within the meaning of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act and holding as such land in the village where the land alienated is situate, the sanction of the Deputy Commissioner to the transfer is not required, and in such cases the mutation of name should be granted or refused on general grounds and not refused for any reason arising out of the Alienation of Land Act or the Financial Commissioner's Circular letter No. 3441, dated 5th June 1901.

Paragraph 11 (viii) of the Circular Letter of 5th June 1901 applies to a money-lender who although he is a member of an agricultural tribe is not a member of the same tribe as alienor or of a tribe in the same group, or where he is an agriculturist within the meaning of the Act does not as such hold land in the village where the land alienated is situated, or to other persons. 2. Pre-emption—Right of pre-emption under the Punjab Laws Act, 1872—Effect of Alienation of Land Act upon such rights.

As alienation of agricultural land by certain classes of people in the Punjab can now only be made as provided by section 3 (1) of the Punjab Alienation of

Section 3—concld.

Land Act, the provisions of the Law of pre-emption, as enunciated in the Punjab Laws Act with respect to such property, have in consequence become in certain cases obsolete, and therefore in a case where a member of an agricultural tribe sold his share in a joint khata to a non-proprietor in the village, but who belonged to the same agricultural group as the vendor, and one of the co-sharers in the khata comprising the land sold, who was not a member of an agricultural tribe, instituted a suit for pre-emption.

Held, that the plaintiff's right of pre-emption which he had possessed under the Punjab Laws Act has been abrogated by the provisions of the Punjnb Alienation of Land Act by reason of his being neither an agriculturist in the village nor a member of an agricultural tribe, that he was not entitled to maintain his suit.

The pre-emption law being a general one whilst the Punjab Alienation of Land Act intended to regulate sales by particular classes of alienors and thus a special law, the subsequent special statute must be treated as repealing the previous general statute pro tanto by implication.

futile after expiry of year of grace under Regulation XVII of 1806—Civil Courts have no jurisdiction to convert a mortgage by way of conditional sale into a mortgage prescribed by section 6 (1) (a) of the Act.

M. S. mortgaged the land in suit to G. for Rs. 500 on the 8th April 1896, redeemable within six years, otherwise the land to be considered as sold. On 31st August 1903 the mortgagee applied to the Collector and prayed that in lieu of the said mortgage by way of conditional sale a mortgage of the kind recognised by section 6 (1) (a) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, might be granted to him for a period of 20 years. The Collector thereupon summoned the mortgagor and on his objecting to the change, the Collector recorded the fact of mortgagor's refusal and left matters in statu quo. In June 1904 the mortgagee applied to the District Judge for issue of notice of foreclosure, who after referring to the proceedings before the Collector decided that a further reference to the Collector under section 9 (3) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act was unnecessary and issued notice of foreclosure, which was duly served upon the mortgagor on 23rd June 1904. The mortgagor took no objection to this notice nor did he attempt to redeem the land. On 28th July 1906 the mortgagee instituted the present suit for possession as vendee, the year of grace having expired. The First Court found that plaintiff had duly complied with all the provisions of Regulation XVII of 1806, but held that plaintiff was not entitled to take possession as full owner, because no reference was made to the Collector under section 9 (3) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, and passed a decree for possession of the land as mortgagee for 20 years under section 6 (1) (a) of that Act, this decree was upheld by the Divisional Judge. On further appeal, the Chief Court Held, that the year of grace prescribed by Regulation XVII of 1806 having expired and plaintiff having complied with all the provisions of the Regulation he was now suing for possession as full proprietor, there was no mortgage now in existence or "current" within the meaning of section 9 (2) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, so that even the Collector had now no power to interfere with the right of the quondam mortgagee.

Held, also, that Civil Courts have no power at all to convert a mortgage by way of conditional sale into a mortgage prescribed by section (1) (a) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, this being a matter left entirely to the Revenue authorities.

Held further that the District Judge to whom application was made for issue of a notice of foreclosure under Regulation XVII of 1806 was right in not referring the

3. Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, section 9—Effect of, on appeals from decrees declaring conditional sales absolute.

The plaintiff sued and obtained decree for possession of certain land by foreclosure of mortgage on the 11th March 1901. The defendants appealed to the Divisional Judge, who, on 26th June 1901, referred the case to the Deputy Commissioner under section 9 (3) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, which had come into force on 8th of June 1901. On 25th September the Deputy Commissioner struck out the condition operating as a conditional sale, and on the 12th October the Divisional Judge dismissed the suit in consequence of the Deputy Commissioner's action.

Held, following Jagan Nath v. Fazla (26 P. R. 1902), that it was ultra vires both for the Divisional Judge to refer the case to the Deputy Commissioner and for the latter to deal with the case under section 9 (2), as the plaintiff held a decree for possession of the land at the time the

Punjab Alienation of Land Act came into force, there being no subsisting mortgage at the time. MAYA MAL v. JAIMAL AND OTHERS. 47 P R 1902

4. Power to revise mortgage made in form not permitted.

In 1899 'A' who was a member of an agricultural tribe, mortgaged his land to 'B,' a Khatri. The mortgage was a collateral one and contained provisions intended to operate by way of conditional sale on default of repayment of the loan within two years. On default being made, no steps were taken to enforce the conditional sale, but the parties agreed that 'B' should take over possession as mortgagee allowing 'A' to cultivate the land as his tenant subject to payment of rent. The parties then applied for mutation of names, but the Deputy Commissioner, holding that the exchange of possession amounted to a fresh mortgage not permitted by the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, refused to give his sanction to mutation being effected.

Held, that there was no fresh mortgage, but as the position of the parties was not in accordance with the policy of the Act, which on behalf of the members of agricultural tribes aims at the excision of conditions intended to operate by way of conditional sale, the proper procedure for the Deputy Commissioner was to have acted under section 9 of the Act by putting the mortgagee to his election whether he would agree to the sale condition being struck out of his deed, and if he agreed to the said condition being excised the mutation of names should have been effected. 5. Mortgage—Possession—Suit for possession under the terms of a registered mortgage-deed, wherein in addition to that condition other clauses intended to operate by way of conditional sale existed—Application of section 9 (3) of Punjab Alienation of Land Act to such cases—Duty of Appellate Court—Procedure—Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900.

The plaintiff sued for possession as mortgagee of certain land by a registered deed which contained a condition that plaintiff should take possession as mortgagee in the event of failure to pay certain instalments, but there were two other clauses in the deed which were intended to operate by way of conditional sale. The first Court gave a decree for possession without making any reference to the Deputy Commissioner under section 9 (2) and (3) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900. In appeal before the Divisional Judge it was urged that the deed should have been referred to the Deputy Commissioner, and that that course should now be taken by the Appellate Court. The Divisional Judge referred the following points for the decision of the Chief Court:—

(1) Does section 9 (3) of the Land Alienation Act apply to a case in which the plaintiff sues on a mortgage to which section 9 (2) applies but does not sue to enforce the condition intended to operate by way of conditional sale?

(2) Whether, when the lower Court has wrongly neglected to refer the case to the Deputy Commissioner, the Appellate Court should pass over the irregularity?

(3) Assuming that the Appellate Court should amend the irregularity of the lower Court, what form should that amendment take?

Held—(1) that section 9 (3) apply but in cases in which the plaintiff not only did not sue on the clause regarding conditional sale, but surrenders that condition altogether and agrees of his own motion to have it struck out, the mortgage would cease to be one including such a clause and the reference to the Deputy Commissioner would be no longer necessary as there would be no mortgage before the Court coming within the purview of section 9 (2);

(2) that the provisions of section 9 (2), (3) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act are imperative, and if the first Court passed a wrong order it is clearly the duty of an Appellate Court to set it right;

(3) That according to the provisions of section 582, Civil Procedure Code, the Appellate Court should proceed in the same manner as a Court of first instance would proceed to decide the perliminary points noted therein, and thereafter if a reference to the Deputy Commissioner is still necessary under section 9, it should be made either direct or through the lower Court, and in those cases where the exercise of his powers under the Alienation of Land Act by the Deputy Commissioner would not dispose of the case, the Civil Court making the reference should dispose it of after the Deputy Commissioner has discharged his duties in connection therewith. if it was made by a member of an agricultural tribe, but it is for the party desiring to obtain benefit of that enactment to allege and prove that he is a member of an agricultural tribe. The mere assertion by a party that he is so and the refusal of the Court to recognize him as such does not amount to material irregularity and is not open to revision by the Chief Court under section 70 (1) (a) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884. A mortgage made before the commencement of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act by an agriculturist of his land in which there was a condition intended to operate by way of conditional sale and still current was brought by the District Judge, who was moved to issue a notice of foreclosure under Regulation XVII of 1806 after the Act had come into force, to the notice of the Deputy Commissioner. The mortgagee accepted the new mortgage as proposed by the Deputy Commissioner in lieu of the original one but the mortgagor refused. The Deputy Commissioner thereupon decided that nothing further could be done and returned the reference to the District Judge. Notice of foreclosure was then issued and after the expiration of the year of grace the mortgagee instituted a suit for possession as owner.

Held, that in these circumstances the foreclosure proceedings under Regulation XVII of 1806 were not barred by the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, and that it was not necessary for the Civil Court upon the institution of the suit for possession to refer the matter again to the Deputy Commissioner under sub-section 3 of section 9 as the mortgage had then ceased to exist and the mortgagee had become ipso facto owner of the property by purchase.

Held, that no appeal lies, is of right, to the Chief Court from an order passed by the Divisional Court upon an application made by the Deputy Commissioner under section 21 A (2) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, for revision of the order of an executing Court, sanctioning the sale of the judgment-debtor's mortgage rights in agricultural land to the decree-holder, the order, though decree, not being an appellate decree within the meaning of section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act. But held, that the provisions of section 21 do not take away the right, which a party to a suit or an execution proceeding has, of applying to the Chief Court under the general provisions of section 70 of the Punjab Courts Act for revision of such an order.

Held also, that when a Divisional Judge refrained from passing a definite order on an application for revision made by the Deputy Commissioner under section 21 A (2) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, he had full jurisdiction to pass such an order upon a second application made by the Deputy Commissioner.

Held also, that the word "land" as defined in section 2 (3) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act includes mortgage rights in land (1).

Held also, that where a sale of mortgage rights in execution of a decree contravenes provisions of section 16 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, the mere fact that the right of receiving the mortgage-money from the mortgagor personally was also included in the terms of the mortgage-deed, will not validate the sale which must stand or fall as a whole.

Held further, that when a sale of land belonging to a member of an agricultural tribe is made under order of a Civil Court in execution of a decree, the provisions of section 16 of the Alienation of Land Act are contravened and section 21 A of the Act applies.

Held, that looking at the definitions of "land suit" in section 3 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884 (as amended by Act XIII of 1888) and of "land" in section 4, clause (i) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, a suit for the recovery of certain land, within the municipal limits of Rawalpindi, though outside the city walls upon which a building had been erected and was nearly completed a month before suit was filed, was not a "land suit" for the purposes of section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, inasmuch as in applying the definition to a land suit the time to be looked at is the time when the suit is instituted.

Held, further, that the value of an unclassed suit is not increased, because the defendant establishes an equitable claim to compensation for a building erected by him on the land before the plaintiff can take possession of the land and building. HAYAT v. SANT RAM.

16. "Land suit"—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 3, Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, section 4.

The plaintiff sued to demolish a building erected by the defendant and to restore to its original condition the site which the plaintiff described as having been used for pasturing cattle, but which no doubt had been enclosed by a wall when the plaint was filed.

Held, that the suit was a "land suit" within the meaning of section 3 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, the true principle for a decision whether a suit is a land suit being to have regard to the character and use of the land at the time immediately before the cause of action has arisen. The use to which the defendant may have devoted the land after the cause of action has arisen is immaterial as determining the nature of the suit brought to contest his wrongful appropriation of it.

1. Chief Court's power of superintendence and control over subordinate Civil Courts—Rules relating to petition-writers—Judicial Circular No. CXXV—Power to revise proceeding under above rules—Construction of Rule XXIX—Suspension and dismissal of petition-writer.

There is nothing in the rules relating to petition-writers (contained in Judicial Circular No. CXXV) which is inconsistent with the retention by the Chief Court of its general power of superintendence and control over subordinate Civil Courts under section 13 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, and therefore proceedings and orders under Rule XXIX held and made by District and Divisional Judges, though no appeal is given by the rules to the Chief Court, may be dealt with by the Chief Court, under the above section.

The "grossly improper conduct" of a petition-writer, made a ground of dismissal under No. XXIX of the above Rules, is such conduct "in the discharge of his duty," and does not justify the dismissal of a petition-writer acting, not in the discharge of his duty, but in his capacity as a private person: and where under the same rule a petition-writer is liable to suspension or dismissal "who in any petition uses insulting or abusive language," the word "petition" must be interpreted as restricted to petitions written by a petition-writer as such. SMALL CAUSE COURT ACT, 1865, SECTION 6. 188 P R 1888

17. Suit for jagir income retained wrongfully by one of several sharers—Course of appeal.

Plaintiff sued to recover his share of certain jagir income which had been retained by one of several brothers who had been taking their shares in a family jagir by groups, the amount retained being in excess of the defendant's right and claimed by plaintiff as really due to him in order to make up the amount falling to him as representative of one of the said groups.

Held, that plaintiff's claim was in reality one not for damages but for the profits of immovable property wrongfully retained by defendant, and that such claim amounted to one for an account, falling within the category of suits for account within the meaning of article 31 of the 2nd Schedule to the Small Cause Court Act, 1887.

Held, therefore, that the suit was an unclassed suit, and that the appeal from the order passed by the Munsif lay, under clause (c) of section 39 of Act XVIII of 1884, to the Divisional Judge. HUSSAIN KHAN v. SAADAT KHAN. 2 P R 1900

18. Jurisdiction—Suit for pre-emption—Value of suit—Course of appeal.

Plaintiff sued for pre-emption of a house sold for Rs. 150 to the defendant on the allegation that the actual sale consideration and the market value were Rs. 82. The relief sought was a decree for possession of the house subject to payment of Rs. 82 or the market value or such sum as the Court might fix. The first Court (Munsif, 2nd class) found the market value to be Rs. 82 and decreed the claim. The vendee appealed to the District Judge, who returned the appeal for presentation to the Divisional Court, the latter considering the question of jurisdiction a doubtful one, submitted the case to the Chief Court, under section 617, Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that as it could not be affirmed upon the plaint that the value of the suit did not exceed Rs. 100, the appeal lay to the Divisional Court and not to the District Judge.

19. Jurisdiction—Appellate jurisdiction—Jurisdiction of Divisional Judge to decide an appeal which under section 39 (a) of the Punjab Courts Act lies to a District Judge—Consent to jurisdiction—Acquiescence.

Held, by the Full Bench, that there is a defect of jurisdiction if a Divisional Judge entertains an appeal direct from a Court of first instance which, under the provisions of section 39 (a) of the Punjab Courts Act, lies to a District Judge. The consent and acquiescence of the parties to a suit cannot give jurisdiction to a Court of limited jurisdiction. HANSA v. RAN SINGH AND ANOTHER. 36 P R 1902 F. B.

A further appeal in a case under Rs. 500 in value was made in the Chief Court on the following certificate of the Divisional Court, granted on an application stating that there were several points of law worthy of the attention of the Chief Court: "Application accepted. If petitioner desires, let him appeal."

Held, that the above certificate did not satisfy the requirements of the law as laid down in clause (d) of section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, and that the further appeal must be rejected. SADA v. SHAHABAL. 24 P R 1886

22. And section 70—Application for certificate for leave to appeal filed after prescribed period—Refusal of such application—Right to apply for revision on the strength of such refusal—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 622.

In an application by the plaintiff under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code for revision of an order of a Divisional Judge dismissing an appeal in a suit under Rs. 500 in value, it appeared that the plaintiff applied, after the period prescribed by proviso (1) to section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, for a certificate for leave to appeal, no cause for the delay in applying being shown, whereupon the application was rejected as out of time.

Held, that the refusal of such application on the above ground did not make the order of the Divisional Judge final within the meaning of section 70 of the Punjab Courts Act, so as to give a right to seek revision under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, as the Court has no power under section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act to receive an application for a certificate not made within 30 days, unless the applicant satisfy the Judge that he had sufficient cause for the delay. 23. Certificate for leave to appeal—Defective certificate.

Held that a certificate, purporting to have been granted under section 40 (d) of the Punjab Courts Act, which merely set forth that there was a question of law involved in the case, which was of sufficient importance to justify a further appeal, without specifying what the point of law was, or whether the case itself was of sufficient importance to justify a further appeal, could not be accepted as sufficiently complying with the requirements of the law as laid down in the above section. SHAIKH IMAM-UD-DIN v. SAYAD CHANDU SHAH. 119 P R 1888

24. And section 70—Application for certificate of leave to appeal—Refusal of application on ground that it is not within time—Right to apply for revision after such refusal—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 622.

Held by a majority of the Full Bench (TREMLETT, J., dissenting) that a refusal by a Divisional Judge to grant or receive an application for a certificate under clause (d) of section 40 of Act XVIII of 1884, on the ground that it is not within time, is a refusal of the application within the meaning of section 79 of the same Act.

25. Certificate for eave to appeal—Defective certificate.

Held, that a document presented as a certificate under section 40, clause (d) of the Punjab Courts Act, which merely certified that, in the opinion of the Divisional Judge, the case was of sufficient importance to justify a further appeal, but did not certify that there was " question of law or custom or of general interest involved," could not be accepted as satisfying the requirements of the above section. 26. Application for revision of order refusing certificate of leave to appeal—Computation of period of limitation allowed by the sub-section—Deduction of time spent in obtaining copy of order.

27. Further appeal—Application for revision treated as an appeal.

A further appeal lies to the Chief Court under section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, only from an appellate decree, as distinguished from an order of the Divisional Court. Where a Divisional Judge in a case in which he had passed an order not open to appeal refused to certify the case as fit for appeal, held, that an application for revision of this order could not be dealt with as a further appeal under clause (2) of the above section. 28. Certificate that there is a question of law involved in the case—Sufficiency of oral evidence in cases of chadar-andazi marriages —Omission of Divisional Judge to consider the evidence.

In a case where the only question in dispute was whether a certain marriage had taken place by chadar-andazi, the Divisional Judge without considering the evidence dismissed the appeal. He, however, certified the case as fit for further appeal on the ground that it involved a point of law, viz., whether oral evidence was sufficient to establish such marriage.

Held, that the question whether the evidence was legally sufficient did not arise at all, that the only point at issue was one of fact, and that the Divisional Judge was bound to come to a finding on it. MUSSAMMAT JIWAN v. CHANDA SINGH.

29. Unclassed suit over Rs 100, and under Rs. 1,000, in value—Certificate of appeal—Question of law involved—Burden of proof.

Plaintiffs, two widows, sued as co-owners for possession of a house occupied by defendant, which they alleged they had permitted their agent K. R. to occupy, as their agent, and which the defendant, the widow of K. R., now occupied by their permission. The defendant pleaded that K. R had purchased the house in 1877 from the plaintiffs by two deeds of sale, produced by her, and had bequeathed it, on his death in 1882, to his two daughters, who owned it subject to the widow's right of occupation. The plaintiffs denied that they had executed the deeds produced. The first Court having found that plaintiffs executed the deeds, the plaintiffs appealed to the Divisional Judge, who reversed the decree on the ground that the defendant had not proved that the deeds of sale were genuine or that they were executed with the authority or consent of the plaintiffs; that no sale to K. R. had been proved, and that "the deeds were probably executed by fraud." The Divisional Judge granted a certificate under section 40, clause (d) of the Punjab Courts Act, that there was a question of law involved in the appeal, viz., whether the onus probandi rested on plaintiffs.

Held, that though the proper allocation of the burden of proof in a particular case may be, in some sense, "a question of law," it is rather a question incidental to the proceedings in the case between the contesting parties than "involved in it" within the meaning of section 40 (2) of the Punjab Courts Act.

A mere question of irregularity in the proceedings of the Court of first appeal contained in the judgment, though it may be a question of law, is an incidental question of law, and not a "question of law involved in the case" within the meaning of section 40 (2) of the Act.

The case having been argued as an application for revision, held, that the true issue in the case being "Is it proved that the plaintiffs did not execute the deeds?" the onus was on the plaintiffs to prove that the defendant was not owner of the house of which she was admittedly in possession. MUSSAMMAT JOWALI v. MUSSAMMAT MAN KAUR.

30. Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 40, sub-section (1), clause (d), and sub-section (2) —Power of Chief Court to treat petition of appeal in case where no appeal lies as an application for revision—No application under sub-section (2) filed within thirty days from date of refusal by Divisional Judge to grant certificate under clause (d) of sub-section (1).

Plaintiffs sued for a declaration that a deed of gift of certain land would not affect their reversionary rights after the death of defendant No. 1, and on their suit being dismissed both by the District and the Divisional Court they preferred a further appeal to the Chief Court, which was admitted by the Judge in Chambers to a bench. It was then ascertained that the value of the gifted land was under Rs. 1,000, and that, therefore, an appeal did not lie as of right. Appellants' counsel not being prepared to meet this objection, the hearing was adjourned to a late date when it was further ascertained that subsequently to the adjournment plaintiffs had made an application under clause (d) of sub-section (1) of section 40, Punjab Courts Act, 1884, to the Divisional Judge for a certificate. This application had been refused, and a copy of the order of refusal had been filed in the Chief Court; but no application for revision under sub-section (2) of the said section had been presented to the Court within thirty days from the date of the refusal to grant a certificate. The question referred to the Full Bench was whether, under the circumstances of the case, the Court could treat the petition of appeal, as originally presented, as an application for revision under sub-section (2), section 40 of the Act, and allow the said petition to be amended.

Held, by the Full Bench, that inasmuch as the action of plaintiffs in presenting a copy of the order of refusal was tantamount to an application that their former petition, which was treated as a petition of appeal, might be considered as an application for revision under section 40 (2) of the Act, and as such presentation took place within thirty days of the date of the refusal of the certificate, and in view of the fact that the original petition disclosed a question of law or custom, the act of presenting a copy of the order of refusal was equivalent to the presentation of an application for revision under section 40 (2) of the Act. 27 P R 1895 F. B.

31. Further appeal—"Question of law involved"—Question as to admissibility of evidence—Revision—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 622.

The words "question of law involved" in section 40, sub-sections (1) (d) and (2), do not include every point of law that may arise incidentally in a case, but refer to some question of law similar in its nature to a custom or a question of general interest.

Held, therefore, that the question whether a certain judgment was admissible in evidence to prove adverse possession was not a question of law within the meaning of the said section, but merely one of legal procedure incidental to the decision of the question of fact.

Semble.—The fact that inadmissible evidence has been admitted in a case would be a ground for revision under section 622, Civil Procedure Code, if the Court had not brought its mind to bear on the question whether such evidence was admissible or not. If, however, the Court has considered the question but decided wrongly, there would be no relief under the said section of the Code. NUR ILAHI v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, DELHI. 68 P R 1897

32. Application filed more than 30 days after refusal of certificate—Minor—Limitation Act, 1877, sections 6, 7.

33. Questions of law involved—Burden of proof—Construction of deed—Contradictory finding by lower Appellate Court—Material irregularity.

Held, that the proper allocation of the burden of proof and the construction of a deed which merely affected the parties to the suit, and concerned no one else, were not "questions of law involved in the case" within the meaning of section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884.

Where a certificate was granted by the Divisional Judge under section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, to the effect that questions of Muhammadan Law were involved, held, that it was not open to the Chief Court to reject or ignore such certificate on the ground that no question of law was involved, the appeal having been decided on a question of fact. ALLAH BAKHSH v. MUSSAMMAT AMIR BEGAM. 61 P R 1899

35. Further appeal—Public road—Land suit.

The appellant sued for possession of part of a public road encroached on by the respondents who had built a wall on it as a boundary to an agricultural field. Held, that the suit was not a land suit, and that it being valued at Rs. 105, no further appeal lay to the Chief Court without a certificate from the Divisional Judge under section 49, sub-section 1 (d), Punjab Courts Act.

The appellant is not entitled to any time to enable him to apply for and obtain an order refusing a certificate as the appellant who is a Municipal Committee is presumed to be acquainted with the law and in a position to obtain legal advice. 36. Section 40—Course of appeal—Suit for pre-emption of a house valued by plaintiff at Rs. 804—Jurisdiction.

The plaintiff instituted a suit for pre-emption of a house and valued it both for the purposes of jurisdiction and of Court-fee at Rs. 804. The District Judge dismissed the suit on the merits, but found that Rs. 2,000, the amount entered in the deed of sale, was actually paid. The plaintiff appealed to the Divisional Court and again valued his suit at Rs. 804. The Divisional Judge directed the plaintiff to pay Court-fees on Rs. 2,000 in the first Court and on Rs. 1,500 in his Court, which order was complied with, but the appeal was rejected on the merits. On a further appeal being filed in the Chief Court the value of the claim having been fixed at Rs. 1,500 the respondent objected that no further appeal lay as plaintiff had originally valued his claim for Rs. 804 and had not obtained a certificate under section 40 (1) (d) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884.

Held, that the value for the purposes of jurisdiction must ordinarily and in the absence of any special circumstances suggestive of mala fides on the part of the plaintiff be determined with reference to the claim made and not to the decision upon that claim, and that in the present case no further appeal lay without a certificate

Held, that on the principle laid down in 24 P. R. 1903 (F. B.) the decree involved a question regarding property of Rs. 3,000 in value and a further appeal to the Chief Court was therefore competent. 90 P R 1911

15. Applicability of, to proceedings under the Succession Certificate Act.

Held, that clause (b) of section 70 of the Punjab Courts Act does not apply to proceedings under the Succession Certificate Act. It is not co-extensive with clause (a) of that section, but treats of a different class of cases.

The " business in the Court of the District Judge " spoken of in section 75 (1) of the Act means business it has to dispose of as the District Court, and the " functions " mentioned in sub-section (2) of the said section are functions proper to such Court, and must be such as a Sub-Judge of the highest class is unable to discharge, and do not mean the mere trial of civil suits of the value of over Rs. 5,000. —Trees—Conflicting provisions in Settlement Record—Form of suit.

The Settlement record contained conflicting provisions as to right in trees; the ikrarnamah signed by the proprietors allowing the hereditary cultivators to cut trees for agricultural purposes with the proprietors' consent; the tenants' ikrarnamah giving the right without such consent. One of the proprietors sued to have his "rights declared "to enter his tenants' lands and cut trees "which had grown spontaneously." The Lower Courts decreed that plaintiff could not enter the lands without the tenants' consent, and that the tenants could not cut trees without the landlord's permission. The landlord appealed to the Chief Court, and the tenants preferred a cross-objection. Held, that the suit did not lie; that if the parties felt aggrieved the proper course was to sue under section 20 of Act XXXIII of 1871 to correct the record, the Government and other persons interested being joined. —And section 53—Commutation of revenue due to assignee from grain rates to cash.

On 6th January 1886, the proprietors in this case applied to the Settlement Officer that they be allowed to pay revenue at cash rates. The Settlement Officer declined to accede to the request on the ground that batai had always been paid to the assignee. Thirteen months later, the Settlement Officer, in consequence of ruling of the Financial Commissioner, reviewed his original order and granted a petition for cash assessment. The Commissioner and the Financial Commissioner held on appeal that it was not competent to the Settlement Officer to review his order after thirteen months. Three years and some months after the order of the 6th January 1886, the Financial Commissioner was asked to revise the proceedings under section 16 of the Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1887).

Held that the Financial Commissioner was competent to do so, notwithstanding the lapse of time, as the law empowered him to modify the assessment of any estate at any time before its sanction by Government.

Held further that the proprietors were entitled to a cash assessment. The half produce share which the assignee formerly received, probably represented the Government share in the Sikh times. The practice continued after the Government share became much less, but by degrees the practice has been recognised as illegal, and at Settlements particularly the assignee's right has been brought down to the Government share. Though the present law permits assessment in kind, but this is only where the Local Government so directs, and the Government has never directed that assessment should be in kind—cash assessment being the universal rate of all recent Settlements. In making a first record of rights under section 32 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887, a Revenue Officer is not precluded by the mere fact that a certain person is the "landowner," as defined by section 3, clause (2), from the duty of recording any other person, whether owner, landowner, or one who is entitled to the rents and profits of the estate in the record of rights. If, therefore, one person is found to own the proprietary right in the land, his right must be recorded, and the Revenue Officer must not refuse to do so because another person is entitled to be recorded a "landowner" as defined in section 3 (2) of the Act.

As regards the determination of disputes clause (1) of section 36 is not limited by clause (2) thereof, merely to disputes regarding possession, and in making a first record of rights a Revenue Officer is competent to determine a disputed question of ownership and to make an entry in accordance with his decision in the said record.

1. Power to alter entries in record.

Section 19 of the Land Revenue Act of 1871, and section 37 of the Act of 1887, which define the circumstances under which entries in the record of rights may be altered, do not give to the Revenue Officer authority to make an alteration converting a jagirdar into a landowner, and then refusing to allow the landowner, entered in the record of rights, to engage for the revenue, except with the consent of the parties, or pursuant to a decree, or in order to make the record agree with facts which have occurred since it was made. ground that the occupancy tenants had abandoned the land for more than one year, which allegation was denied by the occupancy tenants.

Held, that the object of the mutation procedure is to bring the Annual Record into accordance with facts, so far as this can be done by a summary inquiry, when the Annual Record has been corrected it is under section 44 of the Land Revenue Act merely presumed to be true, so that an order in a mutation case does not finally settle any substantive question of right as between the parties. Therefore when a question of title is in issue, it is ordinarily the best and safest plan to refuse mutation and to refer the parties to the Civil or Revenue Courts as the case may be. 3. Entries in record of rights and annual Records—Mutation of names—Construction of decree—Procedure when parties dispute the construction of a decree.

Held, following Harnand v. Jamna (1 *P. 4. And section 44—Entries in record of Rights and annual records—Mutation of names.

The mutation procedure is not designed for the final settlement of rights, its object is to bring the annual record into accordance with the facts which are most probably true. Revenue Officers should therefore refuse mutation of names based on alienations prima facie void until a decree affirming the validity of the ostensible transfer is obtained. MOMANDA v. FARID AND OTHERS.

14 P R 1901 Rev.

5. Records of rights—Variation of entries in records when the matter is in dispute.

Both by section 16 of the Act of 1871, and section 44 of the Act of 1887, the Revenue Officer is bound to presume that those persons are the landowners who are entered as such in the record of rights. completing partition without awaiting such decision—Jurisdiction of Civil Court to entertain subsequent suit regarding such question of title—Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887, sections 117 (i), 122, 158 (17).

In certain partition proceedings before a Revenue Officer an objection, raising a question of title was preferred and the objector was directed to bring a civil suit to establish his title within fifteen days. He failed to do so, whereupon the partition proceeded and was completed. After its completion, the objector instituted the present suit in the Civil Court for the purpose of establishing his title. The question referred to the Full Bench was, whether, under such circumstances, the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts was barred by section 158, Punjab Land Revenue Act, or any other law.

Held, by the Full Bench, that the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts to entertain the present suit was not barred.

When in partition proceedings before a Revenue Officer a question of title is raised, the Revenue Officer is bound, under section 117 of the Land Revenue Act, 1887, to refuse partition until such question is decided by the Civil Court or to decide it himself, and if such officer completes the partition without the question of title raised before him being settled in one of the two ways provided in the said section, the mere fact that the partition has been completed cannot oust the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts to entertain a subsequent suit regarding such question of title.

12. Suit for declaration of right to half share of joint undivided holding—Suit by co-sharer—No claim for partition—Procedure.

In the present case it appeared that on the death of one R. S., the common ancestor of the parties in 1870, his land was entered as the property of his four sons in equal shares of one-fourth each, the same entry being repeated in the Settlement papers of 1879, and that subsequently, on deaths of the various sons of R. S., entries in respect of each of such sons' shares were made in the names of the respective sons of the latter. All these entries were in accordance with the pagwand principle, and were not contested until the present suit was filed by plaintiffs. It further appeared that plaintiffs had originally applied to the Revenue authorities for partition of their share in the holding which was joint and undivided, claiming one-half of the entire estate on the allegation that their family was governed by the chundavand rule. Partition having been refused by the said authorities on the ground that the partition sought was not in accordance with the shares entered in the Revenue Records, and plaintiffs having been referred to a civil suit to establish their right to one-half instead of one-fourth the property, the present suit was filed to obtain a declaration that plaintiffs were entitled to one-half the holding on the chundavand rule. In appeal it was contended on behalf of defendants (by way of preliminary objections) that no declaratory decree should be granted in this case because plaintiffs could sue for further relief, i. e., partition under section 265 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the claim was barred by limitation as defendants had been in adverse possession for more than twelve years.

Held, that the procedure that had been adopted by plaintiffs in this case was in accordance with the law, and that inasmuch as a claim for partition of a revenue-paying estate cannot, under section 158 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887, be entertained in a Civil Court, there was no further relief which plaintiffs could have sought in the causes of action disclosed in the plaint, which is the kind of further relief contemplated in section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877

Section 45.

—Punjab Municipal Act, 1891, sections 2 (2), 45 (8) (c)—Tax leviable by the year.

Held, that in a Municipality governed by Act XX of 1891, a tax leviable by the year is under section 45 (8), proviso (c), leviable by the calendar year from the 1st January to the 31st December, and that the said proviso relates equally to taxes which were imposed before the said Act came into force and which had hitherto been levied by the financial year from the 1st April to the 31st March. Section 80.

And sections 95, 164, 169—Encroaching upon streets—Penalty for disobedience to orders of Committee.

Where a Municipality has not been in possession of the disputed land (which according to its allegations formed part of a public street) for a considerable period, and where it was proved that as a fact the petitioner had occupied it for more than twenty years previous to date of the dispute, held that the Municipality had no right to interfere in its management or to enforce its authority by criminal proceedings without first establishing its right of ownership.

Held, also, that section 87 of the Punjab Municipal Act is inapplicable to a structure which had been built with the permission of a Committee although it may be on a part of a public thoroughfare, and therefore it does not entitle a Committee to take steps for its removal by a summary notice under section 95 of the Act.

—And sections 92, 94, 95—Refusal of Municipal Committee to sanction re erection of a projection—Discretion of Committee—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Compensation.

Sections 92 and 150 of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1891, provide for the disposal of certain matters by a Municipal Committee and the Commissioner, and a Civil Court has no jurisdiction to interfere with the discharge of their powers and duties by either. But when it is alleged that action has been taken by the Committee ultra vires, or in bad faith, or which is not covered by the authority of the Act, the Court has the power to enquire into the matter, and if it finds that the action complained of is not covered by the powers given to such Committee under the Punjab Municipal Act, 1891, or any other Act, the Court can grant relief which in certain cases would take the form of an injunction

In a case where a Municipal Committee refused to permit plaintiff to re-erect a certain construction which he had pulled down and wished to rebuild, except in accordance with the Committee's bye-law, whereupon plaintiff sued in the Civil Court for a decree that the Committee had no right to interfere with his rebuilding, and that they should not so interfere.

Held, that whether or not plaintiff was entitled to rebuild the construction without the permission of the Committee (a point not before the Court,) his right to do so was not indefeasible, but must come to an end as soon as the Committee chose to exercise their powers under section 91 or section 95 of the Act, a matter entirely within their discretion, and in which they were not liable to be controlled by the Civil Court, or if so liable at all, only when they exercised their discretion in a capricious, wanton and oppressive manner. —BADRI DAS v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, DELHI.

A Sub-Committee of Lahore Municipality gave appellant permission to build on a site which they subsequently discovered was part of a public thoroughfare. The Committee cancelled the sanction and gave notice to the appellant not to build and to pull down anything which had been erected. On appeal by the appellant to the Commissioner that officer dismissed the appeal and directed him to sue for a declaratory decree. Appellant filed a suit for perpetual injunction, both the lower Courts dismissed the suit on the ground that it did not lie in its present form. On appeal to the Chief Court, Held, that the Civil Courts have no power to interfere with the discharge of the Committee and the Commissioner's powers and duties under sections 92 and 150 of the Act until it is shown that the Committee's action was ultra vires or taken in bad faith, or not covered by the authority of the Act.

Held, also, that there is no provision in the Act for cancellation of sanction once given, and that section 95 is inapplicable to such cases. The proper procedure in a case where after sanction has been given under a mistake by the Committee to build on part of the public thoroughfare, was for the Committee to have resorted to the Civil Court to restrain the appellant from building on a public thoroughfare.

Held, that the notice under section 95 should be cancelled, and that the Municipal Committee be directed not to take any steps under the Municipal Act contrary to the permission to build granted under section 92 of the Act. IBRAHIM v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE OF LAHORE.

2. Building a house without receiving any order from the Municipal Committee—Notice under sub-section (1) of section 92.

Held, that where a Municipal Committee failed to pass any order within six weeks after the receipt of a valid notice under sub-section (1) of section 92 of the Punjab Municipal Act, the accused was warranted under sub-section (5) of that section to build his house, and must be deemed to have obtained the necessary sanction. 3. And section 95—Erection of a building—Bridging over a drain—Distinction between—Conditional sanction.

The plaintiffs having applied to the Municipal Committee for permission to roof over the drain in front of their gates, the Municipal Committee by a resolution which was passed more than five months after the date of the application agreed to allow the drain to be roofed, provided that the plaintiffs executed an agreement disclaiming all title to a piece of land between the drain and their compound wall. The plaintiffs in the meanwhile had roofed the drain and as they did not execute the agreement relinquishing their right to the land between the drain and their compound wall, the Municipal Committee issued a notice to them to remove the roofing over the drain. The plaintiffs sued for an injunction to restrain the threatened demolition and justified their acts under clause 5 of section 92 of the Municipal Act, inasmuch as the Committee had neglected to pass orders on their application within six weeks.

Held, that section 92 was not applicable to the case, for though the bridging of the drain came within the meaning of erection of a building in section 92, that section is governed in the matter of building over a drain by section 95, and so the written permission of the Municipal Committee was necessary. But, held further, that the imposed condition was ultra vires, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to the injunction. The Municipal Committee while acknowledging that there was no objection to the erection was not empowered to compel the applicant to do something quite foreign to the object of the application and to the purpose and object for which the power of sanction was given.

4. And section 95—Erection or re-erection of a building—Projection or encroachment on a street—Distinction between—Authority to add any projection or encroahment over a street without the permission of the Committee.

Held, that section 92 of the Punjab Municipal Act refer to buildings to be erected on private property and section 95 to building which encroach or project into a street and therefore it is not lawful for the owner of such building to add to or place against or in front of his building any projection or encroachment without first obtaining the written permission of the Committee. 5. Punjab Municipal Act, 1891, section 92—Erection of a building—Conditional sanction—Competency of a Municipal Committee to protect its private rights when dealing with public matters—Discretion of Committees—Power of Civil Court to interfere with such discretion.

permission to rebuild certain kothris, the doors of which were to open on the adjoining land which belonged to the Committee. On 24th February 1900 the Committee granted the application on the condition that the plaintiff might build on his own land, but that he should not open any doors on the municipal land.

Held, that as the Municipal Committee had no power, when dealing with public matters, to use its statutory powers to protect its private rights, its action in restraining the plaintiff from opening doors on the municipal land was ultra vires, more especially as no order restraining the plaintiff from building as proposed by him had been passed or communicated to him within six weeks from the receipt of the application as required by clause 5 of section 92 of the Municipal Act.

The proper procedure in such a case was for the Committee to point out that as the opening of the doors would be an infringement of their rights in respect to the adjoining property, it would be resisted by all legal means, and in case of necessity to have resorted to the Civil Court to restrain the plaintiff from injuring their rights.

Held, also, that the Civil Courts have jurisdiction to set aside and restrain all such acts of a Municipal Committee which do not fall within the scope of the authority given them by the Municipal Act.

6. Sanction to build—Necessity to commence building within the period fixed by clause (6) of section 92, meaning of.

Held, that where a person after obtaining permission under section 92 of the Punjab Municipal Act commenced building within the period fixed by clause (6) of that section, it is not obligatory for him to proceed with the building until completion.

He is at liberty to commence and finish each separate part of the building as sanctioned at any time, thereafter convenient to him, provided he has commenced some part of the building operations within the period of one year from the date of sanction. BANWARI LAL v. KING-EMPEROR.

7. And section 94—Partition wall over a tharra—Authority to erect without the permission of the Committee—Erection of a building.

8. And section 95—Erection of a new building—Application for including projections on a street—Omission of Municipal Committee to pass orders thereon within six weeks—Applicant not entitled to presume tacit sanction provided for in sub-section 5 of section 92 as to projection or encroachment.

Held, that where sanction for the erection of a projection or structure overhanging into or encroaching upon any street which requires a written permission under section 95 of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1891, is applied for and included in an application for the erection or re-erection of a building provided for in section 92 and the Municipal Committee fails to pass any order within six weeks after the receipt of a valid notice under sub-section 1 of section 92, the person interested in such application is not warranted under sub-section 5 of that section to erect such projection and cannot be deemed to have obtained the necessary sanction in respect thereto.

The tacit sanction provided by sub-section 5 covers only erections or re-erections of buildings, but does not also cover a projection or structure overhanging into or encroaching upon any street or road. THE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE OF DELHI v. DEVI SAHAI.

9. Punjab Municipal Act, XX of 1891, section 92, sub-section (4), and section 145—Infringement of bye-law framed by the Kasur Municipality.

Held, that non-compliance with the provisions of the first part of sub-section (4) of section 92 of the Municipal Act, XX of 1891, does not of itself make a person criminally liable to the penalty provided for the infringement of a bye-law framed by a Municipal Committee under the said section ; it only enables the Committee to issue a notice to him, calling upon him to alter or demolish the building.

Held, also, that the bye-law framed by the Kasur Municipality under section 92 of the Punjab Municipal Act, a breach of which is punishable with a fine, does not make it obligatory on the person giving to the Committee a notice of his intention to erect or re-erect a building, to refrain from so erecting or re-erecting within six weeks from the date of that notice, and the provisions of sub-section 4 of section 92 of the Municipal Act cannot be read into the bye-law as framed by the Committee. 10. Municipalities—Power given to, under Acts to be construed strictly—Notice under section 92 for demolition of a building cannot be applied to case falling under section 95 of the Punjab Municipal Act, XX of 1891.

Held, that powers given to a Municipal Committee under Acts must be construed strictly and that consequently when a Municipal Committee issued notice upon the plaintiff for the demolition of a tharra apparently under section 92 of the Punjab Municipal Act and not under section 95, plaintiff was entitled to a declaration that the Committee had not the power to order the demolition of the tharra in the absence of proof that it had been erected recently.

Section 120 E.

—Municipal Committee—Discretion of to take action under section 120 E.—Suit by person aggrieved for injunction—Jurisdiction of Civil Court to restrain action of Municipality—Punjab Municipal Act, 1891, section 120 E.

Although under the powers given by the Legislature a Local Body may act perfectly bona fide and intra vires in issuing a certain order, still if that order injuriously affects the rights of any person the latter can undoubtedly appeal to the Civil Courts for protection, and to that protection he will be entitled if he can prove that the order in question was made wantonly or without any reasonable justification.

Therefore, where a Municipal Committee, at the instance of a discontented neighbour, issued a notice under section 120 E of Act XX of 1891, directing the plaintiff to close his old drain and to make a new one in its place along a different alignment, without any proper enquiry as to whether the existing drain was a menace to the health of the people surrounding it or the general public,

Held, that the Civil Court should under such circumstances interfere by injunction to restrain the Committee from carrying out its order which was inequitable and pretended to proceed on an alleged danger to health which was in no way proved.

Section 128.

1. Punjab Municipal Act, 1891, section 128—Competency of Municipal Committee to issue notice requiring owner to remove and rebuild a dangerous wall.

Held, that the renewal of a dangerous wall or bank built by the owner or occupier of a building on a hill station as a support to the hill side for a more substantial one amounts only to repairs within the provisions of section 128 of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1891, and a Municipal Committee is therefore competent under that section to issue a notice requiring the rebuilding of such a structure of specified dimensions after pulling it down. Held, that under rule VI of the rules made by the Local Government under section 154 (j) of the Punjab Municipal Act, XIII of 1884 (which were maintained in force under section 2 (2) of the Punjab Municipal Act, XX of 1891) the plaintiffs had an appeal to the Commissioner from the order refusing the refund—and that the plaintiffs were bound to exhaust their remedy by appeal before filing this suit.

Held, consequently, that the present suit was barred by the plaintiffs' failure to appeal.

Section 169.

1. Conviction for disobedience of orders of Committee under Chapter VI—"Continuing breach."

Held, that the order as to the payment of a daily fine, after the date of conviction for failure to comply with the order was bad as a fine cannot be imposed prospectively. The words "continuing breach" in section 169 empower a Magistrate to impose a daily fine from the date mentioned in the notice issued by the Committee under section 95 up to the date of compliance or to the date of conviction whichever may first occur.

—Recovery of Taxes, etc., by a Committee under the Act—Revision—Power of Chief Court to revise an order passed by a Magistrate under section 201—Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, section 439.

Held, that arrears of a contract of Municipal sewerage do not come within the scope of section 201 of the Punjab Municipal Act and as such are not recoverable under that section.

The section contemplates the realization of arrears of any tax, fee, or any other money claimable by a Committee under that Act as such and does not include the arrears which are claimable under a simple contract.

1. Agreement—Absence of consideration.

Defendants, hereditary tenants, being in doubt as to their status being maintained, signed a lease for years, in which payment of rent in kind instead of cash was provided for; the lease was recorded by the Settlement officer. Held, that there was no consideration for defendants' entering into the lease or agreement, and it was not binding on them. KHAIR DIN v. MOHAMED. 16 P R 1872

2. Alienation—Agreement.

Held by the Chief Court (CAMPBELL, J., doubting), that section 2 of the Tenancy Act does not refer only to special agreements between any particular landlord and his tenant, but includes general entries in the wajib-ul-arz or Administration paper. Alienation by sale, though not expressly prohibited by the wajib-ul arz, held to be prohibited upon a proper construction of the words. GOOLAB v. NAWAB MAHOMED ALI KHAN. 20 P R 1873

4. Agreement.

The wajib-ul-arz, on the part of the proprietors, declared that as long as the hereditary cultivators paid the rent fixed, they should not be ousted, and that their lineal male heirs should succeed on the same condition. There was another paper signed by the hereditary cultivators to the same effect. Both this paper and the wajib-ul-arz formed part of the record of the Summary Settlement Held, that there was an "agreement in writing" between the proprietors and tenant, and that the former could not eject the latter except upon non-payment of the rent. HARNAND v. RAM DYAL. 2 P R 1876 Rev.

5. Agreement—Uncertainty.

Entries in a Settlement record which, under section 2 of the Tenancy Act, and section 21 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, are to be deemed to be agreements, stand on the same footing as other agreements known to the law; and an entry cannot be supported as an agreement if there is a mistake or uncertainty. An entry in the Settlement record which declared rent at a stated amount to be payable for the future, without fixing a term or period, held, to be void as an agreement for uncertainty. SARBALAND v. GHASITU. 81 P R 1876

6. Sections 2, 8—Occupancy rights—Decree of Court.

In 1859 the defendant's father obtained a decree declaring him a tenant with rights of occupancy, conditional on his paying the cash rate and zamindari cesses. The plaintiffs now sued to disprove defendant's rights of occupancy, and the Court of first instance declared defendant a tenant with rights of occupancy under section 8 of Act XXVIII of 1868, and the Settlement Commissioner upheld the order. Held, on appeal by the Financial Commissioner, that as under section 2 of Act XXVIII of 1868 decrees of Court are exempted from its operation, and the defendant's position as a tenant under the decree of 1859 would be better than as a tenant under section 8, he was entitled to a decree declaring him as holding occupancy rights under the decree of 1859. SAHIB YAR v. MUSSAMMAT DOULAT BIBI. 3 P R 1877 Rev.

7. Section 2—Suit for ejectment of tenant—Claim to occupancy rights—Judicial decision by Settlement Court fixing a term for cultivation—Effect of.

In 1865, J. S. sued U. S. for possession of land as proprietor. U. S. pleaded that he was hereditary cultivator. A full enquiry was made by the Settlement Superintendent with the aid of assessors, and on 13th April 1865 a decree passed granting U. S. ten years' time to vacate the land in suit.

In April 1876, J. S. had U. S. served with notice of ejectment, and on 13th June 1876, U. S. applied for review of the Settlement Superintendent's decree dated 13th April 1865. The application was accepted, and occupancy rights decreed to U. S. On appeal the Additional Commissioner (following an unreported decision of the Chief Court) allowed the application for review to be treated as a separate suit, and, reversing the order of the first Court, dismissed the claim of U. S. to occupancy rights.

Held, by the Chief Court, that the Settlement Superintendent's decree of 1865 was a valid and binding one between the parties, and that U. S. was precluded by section 2, Act XXVIII of 1868, from re-opening the former decree, which disallowed his claim to occupancy rights. ATTAR SINGH v. JOWAND SINGH. 22 P R 1879

8. And section 11—Enhancement of rent —Agreement—Wajib-ul-arz.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, it appeared that the Administration paper of the village, which set out by declaring that its provisions were to be acted upon until the completion of a new Settlement, contained no provisions in regard to the enhancement of rent, but provided in clause 4 that the tenants, with whom defendants were identified, will continue (ba dastur) to pay for the land under their cultivation at the rate at which the revenue falls on owners as entered in clause 1, together with cesses, etc., payable by proprietors under the other clauses of the Administration paper in proportion to the revenue demand on their cultivation.

Held, that the provision in clause 4 was sufficient to indicate an intention that the rent payable by the tenants there described should remain fixed and unaltered for the term of Settlement. Khazana v. Golab Singh (36 P. R. 1880), Baga Singh v. Dera Singh (37 P. R. 1880), and Jowahir Singh v. Chanda Singh (37 P. R. 1880, Note) cited. MEHTAB SINGH v. KALA SINGH. 42 P R 1881

9. And section 11—Enhancement of rent —Agreement—Wajib-ul-arz.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, where clause 4 of the Administration paper made express provision for the enhancement of rent from non-hereditary cultivators, but none for that of hereditary cultivators, who were empowered to sub-lease their lands and to take the profits: and further provided that from hereditary cultivators paying cash (to which class the defendants belonged) the revenue and malba were to be realized ba dastur, held, that the above clause sufficiently expressed an agreement between the parties that the rent of the defendants should not be liable to enhancement during the term of Settlement. Haku v. Mangal Singh (36 *P. 10. And section 36—Succession to occupancy rights—Wajib-ul-arz—Agreement.

In a suit by plaintiffs, the proprietors of the village, to eject the defendant from certain land, which he claimed to have succeeded to as heir to the last hereditary tenant, who was his uncle, under section 36 of the Tenancy Act, it appeared that there was an entry in the Wajib-ul-arz of the village, to which defendant was found to have been a party, to the effect that if a hereditary tenant died without leaving descendants (aulad), the proprietor should be entitled to take possession of his holding.

Held that this entry, with reference to section 2 of the Act, clearly excluded the operation of section 36 in the present case, and that effect must be given to it as an agreement between defendant and his landlord. BANA SINGH v. HARNAM SINGH. 108 P R 1881

11. Statements of landlord and tenant recorded in naqsha mudakhilat—Occupancy rights—Agreement.

In a suit by plaintiff to establish his right of occupancy in land from which he had been ejected by the defendant (the proprietor), it was contended by the plaintiff that the statements of the parties which were recorded in the naqsha mudakhilat and duly attested by the proper officer at Settlement, constituted an agreement between landlord and tenant within the meaning of section 2 of the Tenancy Act, in accordance with which plaintiff was entitled to a right of occupancy in the land in suit. The landlord's statement was to the effect that he gave the land 20 years previously to the tenant, and had received from him rent in cash, and that it was not competent to him to evict the tenant. The tenant's statement was the counterpart of this, and he stated among other things that he would not relinquish the land and that he would pay rent at the same rate as the proprietors.

Held, that it was clearly the intention of the parties at that time, as embodied in their statements, that the tenant should have a right of occupancy in the land, and the statements, being duly attested by the proper Settlement official, amounted to an agreement within the meaning of the first para. of section 2 of the Tenancy Act.

Case remanded for a finding as to whether the said agreement still remained in force so as to entitle plaintiff to a right of occupancy in the land claimed. GHAZI v. JUMA KHAN. 18 P R 1882

12. And section 36—Succession to occupancy rights—Karabatis—Wajib-ul-arz —Agreement.

Where the Wajib-ul-arz of the village was to the effect that, on the death of an occupancy tenant, his son, or in default of a son, his brother, or karabati, should be entitled to succeed, held, that the above provision was an agreement under section 2 of the Tenancy Act, and as such prevented the operation of section 36.

Held further, that under the above agreement, the defendants, who were first cousins and first cousins once removed of the deceased occupancy tenant in the male

line, were entitled to succeed to the land held as an hereditary tenant by the deceased. Ranjha v. Chuhar (47 P. R. 1877), Jowahir Singh v. Asa (64 P. R. 1877), and C. A. No. 445 of 1878 (unpublished) cited and followed. LEHNA v. CHETU. 22 P R 1882

13. And section 11—Enhancement of rent —Wajib-ul-arz—Agreement.

In a suit for enhancement of rent under section 11 of the Tenancy Act, it appeared from the Wajib-ul-arz of the village to which the parties belonged, which commenced with the usual declaration that its provisions should be binding for the term of Settlement, that as regards the mode of payment of revenue, and of arrears due to Government, no difference was made between the proprietors and the hereditary tenants, while the clause which dealt specially with hereditary tenants provided that such tenants had full power and authority in the same manner as proprietors in regard to the occupation, rates of collection and cultivation of the lands in their occupation, though they did not possess the power of sale, mortgage, or gift of their lands, the right to a share of the land of absconders, a voice in the partition of banjar lands, or a right to the compensation paid by Government for lands taken up for public purposes. No malikana was shown in any of the Settlement papers or declared by the Wajib-ul-arz to be payable by the hereditary tenants.

Held, that having regard to the above provisions, which constituted an agreement in writing within the meaning of section 2 of the Tenancy Act, it would be repugnant to their spirit to hold that the rent of the defendants was liable to enhancement during the currency of the present Settlement. Khazana v. Golab Singh (36 P. R. 1880) and Baga Singh v. Dera Singh (37 P. R. 1880), cited. SOBHA SIHGH v. VIRU. 32 P R 1882

14. And section 36—Succession to occupancy rights—Agreement—Wajib-ul-arz —Construction.

Where the Wajib-ul-arz provided for the succession of the sons of occupancy tenants but contained no words showing that other collateral relatives were excluded, held, that in the absence of such words the document could not be construed as excluding a male collateral from the succession to an occupancy tenure. KABU v. DULO KHAN. 116 P R 1882

15. And section 36—Power of occupancy tenant to regulate the succession by will.

Held, that an occupancy tenant cannot, in the absence of an agreement between landlord and tenant, which under section

2 of the Tenancy Act would allow such tenant to regulate the succession, by will postpone the succession of his sons to a portion of his occupancy tenure until after the death of his widow, giving her a life estate in the land so held. MUSSAMMAT KARIMAN v. KHODA BUX. 137 P R 1882

16. And section 11—Enhancement of rent—Wajib-ul-arz.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, it appeared that clause 4 of the Administration-paper of the village provided among other things that tenants recorded as paying cash rents at the revenue rates as paid by proprietors would pay the rent of their holdings according to the revenue rate as stated in clause 1, and also the prescribed cesses.

Held, that in the absence of any express provision for enhancement, the tenants recorded as above were not liable to be called upon to pay rent at any higher rate. Khazana v Golab Singh (No 36 P. R. 1880), cited and followed. JOWAHIR v BELA. 183 P R 1882

17. And section 36—Succession to occupancy rights—Wajib-ul-arz—Agreement.

Where the Wajib-ul-arz of the village provided that on the death of an occupancy tenant his son should succeed, held, by the officiating Financial Commissioner, that the entry could not be literally construed as meaning that collaterals descended from the same ancestor, who was himself in possession of the land, should not succeed to the deceased tenant's right of occupancy. RAM SINGH v. JOWAHIR SINGH. 1 P R 1882 Rev.

18. Entry of parties' statements in naqsha mudakhilat—Agreement.

A statement made by a tenant at Settlement to the officer appointed to enquire into the rights of tenants, in regard to the terms on which such tenant holds his land from the landlord, and the counterpart statement made at the same time by the landlord that what the tenant had stated was true, held to amount, when recorded in the naqsha mudakhilat before the passing of the Land Revenue Act, 1871, and duly attested by the proper officer, to an agreement within the meaning of section 2 of the Punjab Tenancy Act. Ghazi v. Juma Khan (No. 18 P.R. of 1882), followed. Nihalu v. Mehtab Khan (No. 2 *P. 19. And section 11—Suit for enhancement of rent—Entry in regular Settlement sanctioned by Local Government—Agreement in writing—Uncertainty—Party disabling himself from performing promise wholly—Act IX of 1872, section 39.

In a suit for enhancement of the rent previously paid by defendant, who was a tenant with rights of occupancy in the village of Amritsar, it was contended that the plaintiff was debarred from exercising the right to claim an enhancement under the provisions of the Tenancy Act by reason of a statement recorded and signed by the parties before the Superintendent of Settlements. The said statement was to the effect that both parties agreed to abide by the decision of assessors who were appointed to settle the rent payable by hereditary tenants generally, that is to say, the tenant undertook to pay and the proprietor to receive malikana at the rate of 20 per cent. on whatever sum might be fixed as revenue. It appeared that the Settlement of the Amritsar village was not sanctioned by the Local Government till after the present suit was instituted.

Held, that although the statement relied upon failed to fulfil the conditions of an entry in a regular Settlement sanctioned by the Local Government within the meaning of section 2 of the Tenancy Act, the sanction which the Act contemplates being clearly the final sanction by which the Settlement operations are confirmed by the Local Government, the said agreement must nevertheless receive effect, unless it were shown to be invalid on some other ground, as an agreement in writing.

It was contended that the agreement was inoperative, because (1) the period for which the stipulated rent was to be paid was not specified, and the agreement was therefore void for uncertainty, and (2) because the tenant had himself subsequently applied for and obtained reduction of the revenue fixed by the Settlement officers, and had thus disabled himself from performing his promise in its entirety within the meaning of section 39 of the Contract Act.

Held, (1) that the agreement having been made in the course of Settlement operations, it must be presumed in the absence of any express contrary intention, that the parties intended that its operation should be controlled by the period for which the Settlement might eventually be sanctioned, and that the objection as to uncertainty could not prevail.

With regard to the second contention, it appeared that the jama fixed at the old Settlement and which was still in force in 1865, when the agreement was executed, was largely increased in 1878, when the new assessment was announced, whereupon the tenant applied for and obtained a material reduction. Held, that the tenant by effecting this reduction could not be said to bring himself within the purview of section 39 of the Contract Act, as the parties to the above agreement must be taken to have contemplated that 20 per cent. was to be paid on any revenue that might be finally fixed by the Government. Sarbaland v. Ghasitu (No. 81 P R 1876) and Hans Ram v. Parsu (No. 3 P. R. 1880, Rev.) referred to. KIRPA DEVI v. RAHIM BAKHSH. 50 P R 1883

20. And section 36—Succession to occupancy rights—Agreement.

Plaintiffs, who were second cousins once removed of the deceased occupancy tenant, claimed to succeed to his rights of occupancy without proof that the holding was acquired by the common ancestor, by virtue of an alleged agreement entered in the Administration-paper of the village. The provisions of the clause relied upon were to the effect that unless the tenants or their heirs voluntarily surrendered their holdings, the proprietors were not at liberty to eject them or their heirs, nor to enhance the rent payable by them during the currency of the Settlement. It nowhere stated who were to be regarded as their heirs.

Held, that no agreement excluding the operation of section 36 of the Tenancy Act could be inferred from provisions of the above nature. Ranja v. Chuhar (No. 47 P. R. 1877) and Jowahir Singh v. Asa (No. 64 P. R. 1877), referred to. MATTAN v. LAKHA 90 P R 1883

21. And section 36—Succession to occupancy rights—Agreement—Provision in Administration-paper of first Settlement not repeated in subsequent Settlement—Effect of such omission—Intention—Rescission.

In a suit relating to the succession to an occupancy tenant, in which it was found that the common ancestor of the deceased tenant and the defendants never cultivated the land, so that, so far as the provisions of section 36 of the Tenancy Act were applicable, the defendants would not be entitled to succeed, the defendants relied upon a provision in the Administration-paper of the first regular Settlement, as entitling them as nephews of the deceased to succeed to the tenancy. The lower Appellate Court, on the ground that no similar provision appeared in the record of the subsequent Settlement, which it was admitted was made before the passing either of the Tenancy Act or the Land Revenue Act, held that the agreement relied on had been rescinded.

Held, that the question whether an agreement in an Administration-paper would operate for the term of Settlement only is one of intention, and if anything in an Administration-paper appeared to be intended to remain in force beyond the Settlement for which it was made it would continue to operate as an agreement after a new Settlement had taken place, unless it was set aside by anything done at that Settlement; there being nothing in the law to make an entry in the Settlement record operating as an agreement under section 2 of the Tenancy Act irrevocable Hari Singh v. Ranjit Singh (No. 56 *P. Case remanded for the lower Court to determine (1) whether the provision in the Administration-paper of the first regular Settlement was intended to operate beyond the duration of the Settlement, and (2) whether, if so, it was rescinded or cancelled by anything amounting to an agreement between landlord and tenant done when the second Settlement was effected. 22. And section 19—Suit by landlord to eject occupancy tenants—Tenants holding under a decree of Court.

In a suit brought by the proprietor to eject the defendants, who were occupapancy tenants, from the lands in their occupation under the provisions of section 19 of the Tenancy Act, it appeared that the defendants held under a decree of Court by the terms of which they were declared to have a right of occupancy in the land.

Held, that the operation of section 19 was excluded by the provisions of section 2 of the Tenancy Act, and plaintiff's case must be dismissed. JIWAN SINGH v. NAWAB MUHAMMAD NIZAMUDDIN KHAN.

23. And section 36—Entry in Administration-paper of first Settlement omitted in subsequent Settlement—Effect of such omission—Agreement—Rescission—Intention of parties.

The question for decision was whether an entry in the Administration-paper of the first regular Settlement, excluding the succession of collaterals in the male line to tenants having rights of occupancy, failed to acquire the force of an agreement under section 2 of the Tenancy Act, on the ground that a subsequent Settlement had come into force before the passing of that Act, and that the Administration-paper of that Settlement contained no rule on the subject.

Held, that unless the above omission operated as a rescision (which was clearly not so in the present case), it became necessary to determine whether the original entry was intended to be in force only until a new Settlement was made, or so long as the tenancy continued; and if the latter was the intention, it would have the force of an agreement under section 2 of the Tenancy Act, but the question would then arise whether it was in fact rescinded, either expressly or by implication, by the acts of the parties thereto.

24. And section 11—Enhancement of rent—Suit brought immediately after announcement of new assessment—Land Revenue Act (XXXIII of 1871), section 17—Premature suit.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, it appeared that it was provided in the Administration-paper of the regular Settlement that the occupancy tenants named therein, of whom the father of the present defendants was one, should pay at revenue rates only, and that the plaintiff brought the present suit immediately on the new assessment being announced.

Held, that the suit must be dismissed as premature, as until the record of rights of the new Settlement was directed by the Local Government to be made over to the Deputy Commissioner on the report of the Financial Commissioner that the operations of the Settlement were complete, under the second clause of section 17 of the Land Revenue Act, the agreement in the previous Administration-paper remained in force. 25. Suit for ejectment of tenant—Claim to occupancy rights—Effect of judicial decision by Settlement Court fixing a term for cultivation.

At the first Settlement of the Lahore district plaintiffs were recorded as proprietors and defendants as hereditary tenants of the land in suit, it being noted in the khewat that the defendants had been cultivating the land for 20 years. At the revision of Settlement in 1867, defendants were after a summary enquiry of the Superintendent of Settlement recorded as tenants protected for a term of 15 years, their rents being also fixed at a certain rate. The proprietors being dissatisfied with these arrangements brought a suit against the tenants, objecting to the term of protection which had been given and to the rates of rent which had been fixed, and claiming possession of the land from the tenants and new rates of rent while the tenants remained in cultivating possession. The defendants resisted the claim for possession and finally after fixing issues, which raised the question of the defendants' interests in the land and whether they were entitled to have their tenure protected, the Extra Assistant Commissioner, on the 20th December 1867, decided that the defendants were entitled to protection only for the period during which the kutcha wells which they had sunk on the land should continue to exist but they should not be allowed to sink any new well, and when the existing kutcha wells fell in the proprietors should be at liberty to oust them. Neither party appealed from this decision, but when the Tenancy Act was passed soon afterwards and the entries in the record of the revised Settlement of the Lahore district, which had not yet been sanctioned, were directed to be revised with special reference to section 6 of the Tenancy Act, the defendants were entered as tenants with presumptive rights of occupancy under that section.

In a suit by the proprietors for possession of the land on the allegation that the wells had fallen in, held, that the decision of the 20th December 1867, never having been set aside by competent authority, was binding on the parties, section 2 of the Tenancy Act expressly providing that nothing contained in the Act should affect the operation of any decree of Court under which a tenant held, and that, under the terms of the said decision, the plaintiffs were entitled to eject the defendants, if as a fact the kutcha wells had fallen in. Baggu Khan v. Suja (No. 77 P. R. 1877) and Attar Singh v. Jowand Singh (No. 22 P. R. 1879), cited and followed.

26. And section 11—Suit for enhancement of rent—Agreement in old Settlement that rates of rent should remain fixed for term of Settlement—Suit instituted before new rates of jama had been declared—Premature suit.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, it appeared that there was a provision in the Wajib-ul-arz of the vtllage, which came within the scope of section 2 of the Tenancy Act, to the effect that as long as the Settlement lasted the rates of rent were to remain fixed; but it was contended that the period for which such fixed rates held good had elapsed, the Settlement having been formally sanctioned up to 1880, and such period having expired,

Held, that the very fact that the Government so arranged the operations of the new Settlement, that the old Settlement must go on beyond 1880, showed that the Government had extended the period originally fixed, but that in any case as the new rates of jama were admitted not to have been declared when the suit was brought, the said suit must be dismissed as premature. 27. And section 36—Widow succeeding to occupancy rights of her deceased husband—Wajib-ul-arz—Custom.

In a suit to contest a notice of ejectment from certain land situated in Kunjpura, tahsil and zilla Karnal, to which the plaintiff, a widow, had succeeded on the death of her husband, an occupancy tenant, it appeared that the Wajib-ul-arz of the village provided that unless the tenants or their heirs (warisan) voluntarily surrendered their holdings, the proprietors were not at liberty to eject them or their heirs except for non-payment of rent, nor to enhance the rent paid by them during the currency of the Settlement.

Held that though, following Mattan v. Lakha (No. 90 P R. 1883), this provision did not amount to an agreement excluding the operation of section 36 of the Tenancy Act, still, it having been found that widows did succeed by custom to the occupancy holdings of their deceased husbands, the clause in question did contain an agreement which would limit the operation of the sections of the Act relating to ejectment, and would protect the widow, who had succeeded as heir or waris of her husband, from ejectment so long as she continued to pay the rent for which she was liable. NAWAB MUHAMMED ALI KHAN v. MUSSAMMAT JAWAHIRI. 104 P R 1885

28. And section 11—Enhancement of rent—Agreement in old Wajib-ul-arz barring enhancement—Suit instituted after announcement of new assessments, but before record of rights has been handed over to Deputy Commissioner—Premature suit.

Held by the Full Bench, that a suit for enhancement of rent which would ordinarily be barred during the period of Settlement by an agreement between the landlord and the tenant, is not maintainable if instituted after the new assessments have been announced, but before the record of rights has, with the sanction of Government, been handed over to the Deputy Commissioner of the district, as the announcement of the assessments does not put an end to such agreement, which in the absence of anything to indicate a contrary intention, remains in force until the record of rights is so handed over. Hazaru v. Kanhaiya (No. 21 P. R. 1884), and C. A. No. 168 of 1882 (unpublished) followed. Dosondhi v. Hamir (No. 161 P. R. 1884), overruled. CHUHAR v. HAKIM. 9 P R 1886

29. And section 11—Enhancement of rent—Agreement.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, it appeared that the defendants were men whose ancestors were recorded at the first Settlement as having held the land for 100 years paying nothing beyond the Government revenue, and that at the second Settlement a malikana of 2 annas per rupee of revenue was fixed by the Settlement Officer, which rate had continued in force up to the time of suit, when the plaintiff, who had bought the land from the old proprietors, claimed a malikana of one rupee per rupee of revenue on the ground that such rate was claimable under the

Tenancy Act on a comparison with the rates usually paid by tenants-at-will.

Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the enhancement claimed, as under the particular circumstances of the case, it was reasonable to infer that the arrangement under which two annas per rupee was imposed by the Settlement Officer was fixed for the term of Settlement. NIHAL SINGH v. KHARAK SINGH. 73 P R 1887

30. And sections 10, 11, 13—Enhancement of rent—Agreement.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, the defendants relied upon an agreement in writing between the tenants and landlord as barring the prima facie right of the landlord to sue for enhancement. It appeared that this agreement, which was given effect to in the Administration-paper, merely stated the rate of malikana to be 16 per cent. as heretofore, and was in substance an agreement relating to distribution of the revenue, the details of which were expressed to be subject to change, there being nothing either in the Wajib-ul-arz or the agreement to show that the rate of malikana was to be immutable for the period of Settlement.

Held, therefore, that the claim to enhancement was not barred by an agreement under section 2 of the Tenancy Act.

But held, further, that the agreement and Wajib-ul-arz were sufficient to bar the maintenance of the suit, it not being open to the plaintiff to repudiate his agreement forthwith as he had done. Had he not made the agreement, he might have brought a suit for enhancement (on account of an increase of the revenue) under the terms of the last clause of section 13 of the Tenancy Act, but having chosen to fix the percentage on the revised assessment without such suit, by mutual consent, he was therefore bound, and could be in no better position than if he had brought his suit. 31. Entry in Settlement Record—Agreement.

An entry in the Wajib-ul-arz relating to a matter dealt with in Chapter VI of the Tenancy Act of 1868, which professed only to be an agreement by the proprietors, and did not profess to embody an agreement by the tenants by whom it was not in any instance signed, held not to amount to " an agreement between a landlord and tenant recorded by the proper officer," within the meaning of section 2 of the above Act. 32. And section 11—Enhancement of rent—Agreement prohibiting enhancement—Period of operation of such agreement.

In a suit for enhancement of rent brought by a landlord in a village in the Una tahsil of the Hoshiarpur District against his tenant, it appeared that the circumstances of the Una tahsil generally as regards Settlement proceedings were as follows :—An assessment of land revenue was originally made which was ordered by Government to remain in force till the year 1880; but the Record of Rights prepared at the time of assessment being imperfect, it was subsequently determined by Government that a fresh record should be prepared, the amount of the land revenue remaining unaltered, and accordingly in the years 1872-73 a full Record was prepared, at the beginning of which it was stated that the period of Settlement extended to the year 1880. That record contained certain entries which the lower Appellate Court construed as prohibiting enhancement during the currency of the Settlement. When the re-settlement and re-assessment of the Hoshiarpur District generally was undertaken for the year 1878-79, it was determined by Government that in the Una parganah, although a re-assessment of the revenue was necessary, a revision of the Record of Rights was unnecessary, the result being that the assessment of the village in question in the present suit was very materially increased; but the Record of Rights prepared in 1873 was not replaced by a fresh record. The lower Appellate Court therefore considered that the old Record of Rights, which, in its opinion, contained a provision against enhancement, must be regarded as in force until it was superseded by a fresh record, and meanwhile no suit for enhancement would lie.

Held by the Financial Commissioner (reversing the order of the lower Appellate Court) that under the circumstances above stated the agreement regarding rents (assuming it to be an agreement prohibiting enhancement, which was doubtful) could not be fairly held to be operative for a longer period than that of the assessment of land revenue which was running at the time when the Record of Rights was made, and that there was therefore nothing in the Record of 1873 which necessitated the dismissal of the suit for enhancement.

1. Clause 1 — Proprietor — Occupancy rights.

The plaintiff was one of several proprietors in the village, who were all of them cultivating each other's lands. It was proved that plaintiff had heretofore paid no rent and rendered no service in respect of the land occupied by him, to the proprietor thereof, beyond the amount of land revenue and cesses, and that his father and grandfather had occupied the same land, on the same terms. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to occupancy rights under clause 1, section 5, Act XXVIII of 1868, notwithstanding the fact of his being a proprietor. PUNJAB TENANCY ACT, XXVIII OF 1868—contd.

2. Clause 1—Tenant who has "heretofore" paid no rent, etc., explained.

The first clause of section 5 of the Tenancy Act refers to the state of things existing at the time of the passing of that Act, and the word "heretofore" must be construed to refer to that time, and not to the time when a suit is brought to establish a title to right of occupancy under the clause in question.

Held, therefore, that unless a tenant can show that either he himself, or the person through whom he derives his title, was a tenant of the land at the date of the passing of the Tenancy Act, and moreover at that date had held the land for three generations, he is not entitled to a right of occupancy under the 1st clause of section 5. LAL SINGH v. CHEIT RAM. 121 P R 1881

3. Clause 1—Occupancy rights—Joint tenants.

The land in dispute was formerly held by one G. R., who was succeeded on his death by his three sons, one of whom died before the passing of the Tenancy Act, leaving an adopted son, the present plaintiff. At the time of the passing of the Tenancy Act, the land was occupied by the plaintiff and his two uncles, and the latter having died without issue, plaintiff claimed rights of occupancy in the entire holding. It appeared that before the passing of the Tenancy Act, neither plaintiff, his father, his uncles, nor his grandfather ever paid any rent for the land beyond the revenue and cesses chargeable thereon, and also that the plaintiff and his uncles held the land jointly.

Held, that at the time of the passing of the Tenancy Act the plaintiff must be taken to have been in occupation of the entire holding, though no doubt jointly with others; and as father and grandfather had previously occupied the land, he had fulfilled the condition as to occupation of the land for three generations prescribed by clause 1, section 5 of the Act, and was entitled under that clause to a right of occupancy in the entire holding. Bulunda v. Soondur (No. 57 *P. Clause (2).

1. Clause 2—"Involuntarily parting with rights."

Held, that by a sale of proprietary rights in execution of a decree for arrears of revenue, the proprietor had "involuntarily parted" with his rights, within the meaning of clause 2, section 5, Punjab Tenancy Act; there being no proof that the fault was wilful, or the decree purposely or collusively allowed to pass: and that continuous occupation of the land from the date of sale gave rights of occupancy under that section, notwithstanding that by the law in force at the time of the sale all the defaulter's rights were transferred to the purchaser, and new rights could be acquired only by special contract or a new prescription. 2. Clause 2—Conditional sale—Involuntarily parting with proprietary rights.

Held, that a proprietor who has mortgaged his land by conditional sale which has been converted into an absolute sale cannot be said to have "involuntarily parted" with his rights within the meaning of section 5, clause 2 of the Tenancy Act. BHALLAN v. SOHNA. 6 P R 1881

3. Clause 2—Representative of proprietor claiming occupancy rights.

Held, that only the proprietor himself, and not his representative, can acquire occupancy rights under clause (2) of section 5 of the Tenancy Act. Bhola Singh v. Gopal (No. 83 P. R. 1882), referred to. HABIB BAKHSH v. GULAB.

4. Clause 2—Representative of proprietor who has involuntarily parted with his proprietary rights.

5. Clause 2—Tenant who has involuntarily parted with proprietary right—Right of representative of such tenant not recognized.

Held, that section 5, clause (2) of the Tenancy Act, 1868, must be construed as limiting the right of occupancy therein contemplated strictly to the actual person who involuntarily parted with his ownership, and does not recognize the existence of any right on the part of a representative to revive a claim which the original owner had failed to assert.

3. Clause 3, section 7—Continuous occupation of land held by original settlers, by their representative—Exchange of land

Mauza Ramnagar was formed in A. D. 1834 from waste land taken from adjacent estates, and conferred upon defendants in proprietary right, who located tenants of the Mali caste. The expense of sinking wells and starting the village was incurred by defendants. In 1846, by judicial decision, defendants were declared proprietors, and the Mali cultivators tenants, but the judgment was silent as to the tenants having or not having occupancy rights. In 1849, the Settlement Deputy Collector recorded an executive order that the Malis should be entered as tenants-at-will, paying rent at one-third of the produce; and in the Settlement records of 1850-51 they were so entered. Both the order and the entry were known to the cultivators, who paid and continued to pay one-third of the produce by way of rent In a suit brought against defendants to establish occupancy rights, held, upon the above stated facts that of the plaintiffs those who were the representatives of the original settlers were entitled to a decree for such rights, provided they had continuously occupied the land held by the settlers whom they represented, or had voluntarily exchanged the one land for the other. Sahiba v. Shiv Lall and others (No. 1 *P. 4. Clause 3—Representative of persons who settled in village with the founders—Rights in land other than the original holding.

In a suit to establish occupancy rights in certain land under the provisions of clause 3 of section 5 of the Tenancy Act, held that the said clause will apply on its being shown that the tenant is the representative of a person who settled as cultivator in the village along with the founders, though the land in suit forms no part of the original holding, unless some express agreement between landlord and tenant that the tenant should hold on a different tenure be proved Atar Singh v. Diwan Singh (No. 94 *P. 5. Clause 3—Representative of founder of village settling as cultivator.

Held, that the distinction pointed out in clause 3 of section 5 of the Tenancy Act is between founders and non-founders, and the clause is designed to protect the representatives of a person who being a non-founder settled as a cultivator in the village, but is not intended to provide for the case of the founders of a village settling as cultivators in the village. PHALLU SINGH v. HIRA SINGH.

6. Clause 3—Points to be proved by person seeking to establish occupancy rights under above clause—Agreement.

Held by the Full Bench, that the only two points to be proved by a person seeking to establish the existence of any occupancy rights under clause 3, section 5 of the Tenancy Act on the date of the passing of the Act, are (1) that the tenant, on that date, was a representative, as defined in section 3, of a person who settled as a cultivator in the village in which the land on which such right is claimed is situate along with the founders of the village, and (2) that the land on which the right is claimed was occupied by such tenant on that date, or was received in exchange as provided by section 7 of the Act. It is not necessary to show that the tenant was representative of the original settler in respect to any particular portion of the land in which the right is claimed or to trace the history of its previous occupation. The whole of the provisions of clause 3, section 5, must, however, be read subject to the first clause of section 2 of the Act, which entitles the landlord to exclude the operation of section 5, by proving that a written agreement, or an agreement recorded by the proper officer in the record of a regular Settlement sanctioned by the Local Government before the passing of the Act, has been made in respect to the whole or any portion of the land on which the right is claimed. Massania v. Pertab Singh (No 62 *P. Section 5 (4)—concld.

Held, that a right of occupancy under section 5, clause 4 of the Tenancy Act can only be acquired by the jagirdar himself, and not by his representative.

Held further, that the term of 20 years specified in the above clause, during which continuous possession must be proved to entitle the ex-jagirdar to occupancy rights, does not mean 20 years before the passing of the Tenancy Act.

4. Clause 4—Claim to occupancy rights—Ex-mafidar.

In a suit for occupancy rights by one F. S. and the widow of his brother M S. under section 5, clause 4, of the Tenancy Act, it appeared that the land in suit was held revenue free under an order of the Financial Commissioner, dated 1856, which was found to apply to both brothers. It also appeared that on the death of M. S. in 1883, the grant had been resumed and Settlement made with the owners.

Held that the first Court had rightly decreed the claim in favour of the widow of M. S. and in favour of F. S. jointly.

M. S having acquired occupancy rights under section 5, clause 4, at the time of his death, there was no good reason (in the absence of any objection by the owners) why his widow should not be allowed to retain his share for her life ; and in regard to F. S. as he was clearly mafidar of half the land, and, although he foolishly allowed the grant to be resumed on the death of his brother, had continuously occupied the land for not less than 20 years up to the date of such resumption, he was entitled to be occupancy tenant of his share. FATTEH SHAH v. DADU.

5. Clause 4—Occupancy rights—Ex-mafidar.

Held that section 5, clause 4 of the Tenancy Act, 1868, does not limit the right of occupancy to land actually held rent free, but gives that right to a person who is or has been a mafidar in the village, in respect to any land situated in that village which he has continuously occupied for not less than 20 years. 9. Defendant was recorded at the first Settlement as tenant with rights of occupancy. At the second Settlement, in 1865 defendant stated before the Superintendent, that he was a tenant-at-will, and would vacate the land when desired by the proprietor (plaintiff) so to do. In 1866, defendant wrote a kabuliat to the plaintiff, agreeing to cultivate the land on payment of enhanced rent and subject to the will of the plaintiff in regard to eviction. Defendant was recorded at the second Settlement as a tenant with rights of occupancy. In a regular suit under section 6 of the Tenancy Act, held, that defendant was not bound by his statement at Settlement in 1865, or the kabuliat of 1866, as the defendant had been influenced by the strong opinion held by the Settlement officers that occupancy rights should be much restricted, and by the results to other tenants who had been recorded in the first Settlement as having occupancy rights. 10. Secondary evidence of Settlement record.
Plaintiff claimed right of occupancy. The Settlement record was destroyed, but plaintiff appeared in the Patwari's papers as a maurusi cultivator. Held, that the Patwari's papers were sufficient, in the absence of the Settlement record, to establish plaintiff's presumptive right under section 6 of the Tenancy Act. 11. And sections 19 and 37—Exemption from liability to ejectment.
Held, that to entitle a tenant, not being a tenant under section 5, Act XXVIII of 1868, to claim exemption from liability to be bought out on payment of compensation under sub-section 2, section 19, it is sufficient that the tenant and his ancestor together, i.e., between them, have continuously held the land for 30 years.
The intention of sections 6, 19 and 37, Act XXVIII of 1868, is the same, namely, that, so far as possible, for the purposes of each section, the heir and the ancestor shall be regarded as a single person. BUTA SINGH v. PUNJAB SINGH. 28 P R 1879

12. Rebuttal of presumption arising from entry in Settlement record—Voluntary admission—Burden of proof.
Held, that the burden of proof lies upon the landlord to show that an admission made by a tenant, shortly before the passing of the Tenancy Act, that he was a tenant-at-will, though previously recorded as a tenant with rights of occupancy, was a voluntary admission within the meaning of section 6, Act XXVIII of 1868. JYMAL SINGH v. JAMIAT SINGH. 115 P R 1879

13. Presumptive right of occupancy—Destruction of Settlement record—Entry in papers prepared to replace original record.
Held, that an entry in a Patwari's papers prepared after the destruction of the Settlement record, cannot give a presumptive right of occupancy under section 6 of the same Act, though such entry may go to show that the tenant was recorded in the original record as having rights of occupancy.
Fattu v. Dalela (No 1 P. R. 1875, Rev.) dissented from. BHALLAN v. SOHNA.

14. Presumptive right of occupancy—Rebuttal—Voluntary admission—Continuous occupation by tenant.
In a suit under section 6 of the Tenancy Act to disprove defendant's right of occupancy, it appeared that the naqsha mudakhilat contained an admission, purporting to be made by defendant, that the proprietors could evict him. The order passed by the Superintendent of Settlement, however, was that defendant be recorded an occupancy tenant.

Held by the Financial Commissioner, that it could not be safely decided that plaintiffs had rebutted defendant's presumptive right of occupancy by proving a voluntary admission by defendant of the kind described in clause 2, section 6 of the Tenancy Act, the entry of the admission not being sufficiently reliable when it was not accepted by the officer who attested and passed orders on the statement.
Plaintiffs' suit dismissed by the Financial Commissioner, as they failed to rebut the presumption in defendant's favour under clause 1 of the above section, and as defendant's possession of the land in question was found to have been continuous, inasmuch as he had continued to cultivate, or to put in cultivators, and so arrange for the cultivation of the whole of the land. MAHLA KHAN v. HAKIM KHAN.

4 P R 1881 Rev.

15. Presumptive right of occupancy—Tenant entered in some of the Settlement papers as hereditary and in others as non-hereditary—Effect of such contradictory entries.
In a suit to establish occupancy rights, it appeared that the plaintiff's father was entered in the khasra as hereditary cultivator of the land in question, but in the muntakhib and terij documents of the same Settlement he was entered as ghair maurusi.
Held, that the above contrariant entries did not satisfy the requirements of section 6 of the Tenancy Act, and that a tenant cannot be held to have been recorded in a Settlement as an occupancy tenant, unless the documents of that Settlement taken together show clearly an intention to so record the occupant. KALANDAR SHAH v. ILAHI BAKHSH.

Held, that the " exchange " contemplated by section 7 of the Tenancy Act, is the intentional and deliberate giving up of one plot in order to get, or on the understanding that the tenant will get, another in lieu of it, and that merely ceasing to cultivate some fields and tilling others, without an express intention to substitute the one for the other, is not a sufficient exchange within the meaning of the section. 4. The village of Bajawa was formerly held by Rangurs, who deserted it many years ago. The inhabitants of Bawana gradually encroached upon it, and cultivated land to the east of a canal that passed through Bajawa; the Rangurs occupying land to the west of the canal where they built a village. The land thus brought under cultivation was assessed and the Settlement made with the Rangurs, it being recorded that they should not interfere with the possession taken by the inhabitants of Bawana, who continued to reside in their own village. The inhabitants of Bawana paid for the land thus taken 3½ annas per bigha for revenue more than the villagers of Bajawa, and Rs. 70 per annum for grazing on waste land. At the regular Settlement the inhabitants of Bawana were recorded as tenants-at-will, occupying common land of the village Bajawa. Held, that the Rangurs could not eject the inhabitants of Bawana from the land taken by them. Section 8—contd.

8. Occupancy rights—Agreement—Registration—Contract in writing—Oral agreement—Uncertainty—Oral agreement entered into after passing of Tenancy Act.

In a suit to establish rights of occupancy, the plaintiff based his claim upon an agreement made between himself and the proprietors, the terms of which were recorded in the Patwari's diary and signed by one of the proprietors, who was found to have been acting for and representing the remaining proprietors. The terms of the agreement were to the effect that the tenant who had hitherto paid rent in cash should for future pay at a fixed rate in kind for the term of Settlement, subject to alteration afterwards, and that the land should be held by him and his descendants in the male line in perpetuity; and further, that land hereafter reclaimed should be paid for at the same rate.

Held, that the entry relied upon was not a contract in writing such as to require registration, but an oral agreement proved by the evidence of the patwari, and the note made by him at the time, and also by the evidence of others who were present. Nor was such agreement void for uncertainty, as its terms could be gathered, not merely from the entry in the Patwari's diary, but from the whole evidence.

Held further, that the agreement, though an oral one, made after the passing of the Tenancy Act, and not falling within section 2 of the Act, furnished a ground on which a claim for right of occupancy, under section 8 of the said Act, could be sustained. Mehr Gir v. Jowahir Gir (No. 2 *P. 9. Grounds for decreeing occupancy rights under the above section.

Plaintiff claimed a declaration that he was proprietor of the land in suit. The lower Appellate Court held that, though the plaintiff had failed to prove that he was proprietor of the land, he was entitled to be declared a tenant with right of occupancy under section 8 of the Tenancy Act, and to this order plaintiff took no objection either by way of cross-appeal or cross-objection. The grounds upon which a right of occupancy was decreed were that, though the plaintiffs had made out no case under section 5 or section 6 of the Act, they had long considered themselves (though erroneously) to be proprietors, had not been shown to pay "munafa" to the proprietors, and had they been able to prove cultivation for 3 generations (which they could not) would have had a status under section 5, clause (1) of the Act. It was further pointed out (on defendants' appeal to the Chief Court) that plaintiff had been in cultivating possession for about 40 years, paying only at proprietor's rates; that the village was long held in jagir, and that there was practically no difference between the plaintiff and the proprietors, and it was contended that these were sufficient grounds for awarding the status of hereditary tenant under section 8.

Held, that plaintiff's suit must be dismissed upon the ground that he had failed to prove that he was either proprietor or tenant with right of occupancy in the land in suit. Mohan v. Sewa No. 4 *P. 10. Sections 9, 2—Common land—Wajib-ul-arz.

Plaintiffs sued to have defendants declared tenants-at-will, the latter having been recorded at the regular Settlement as tenants with rights of occupancy before the passing of the Tenancy Act. The correctness of this entry had been contested, and eventually the Settlement Court in 1871, held that defendants were tenants with rights of occupancy. The land was common land of the village. By Chapter II, section 9, of the Tenancy Act, occupancy rights in the common lands of a pattidari village cannot be acquired under that chapter. Held, by BOULNOIS and LINDSAY, JJ., that defendants were tenants with rights of occupancy, their right to be so regarded not falling under Chapter II of the Act, as one "acquired under that Chapter," but being a right recorded before the passing of the Act, and the Legislature not intending that the Act should be employed for the destruction of recorded rights. Held, by CAMPBELL, J. that section 2 gave effect to entries in the Settlement record as if they were agreements only when the entries dealt with matters comprised in Chapters III, IV, V and VI of the Tenancy Act, and therefore an entry relating to occupancy rights which are provided for in Chapter II could not, with regard to section 9, be taken to confer occupancy rights in common land. 11. Rights acquired prior to passing of Tenancy Act.

Held, that section 9, Act XXVIII of 1868, which enacts that occupancy rights may not be acquired in the common lands of a village, does not apply to the case of a tenant with rights of occupancy in common land, who had previously acquired such rights, and could not therefore be said to have acquired rights under the Act. Natha Singh v. Fatteh Singh (No 40 *P. 1. Suit for enhancement of rent.

The Court of first instance in determining the issue whether the rent paid by defendants was below the rate of rent usually paid in the neighbouring villages by tenants of the same class with right of occupancy for land of a similar description and with similar advantages, calculated entirely on the cash rates paid under the first regular Settlement by tenants of this class. The first Court of appeal, the Commissioner of the Division, held that the rent test should have been the rents paid by the tenants in kind and the proportion which these rents bore to the land revenue; also that the Court of first instance was bound to examine the claim with reference to any one of the three grounds under which, in section 11, Act XXVIII of 1868, enhancement might be claimed, and that under the third of these grounds plaintiff's claim was good. Held, in concurrence with the Commissioner, that the proprietor was entitled to enhanced rent at twice the Government revenue. BUR SINGH v. PREM SINGH. 2 P R 1872 Rev.

2. Tenant of "chahi" lands—Liability of, to ejectment or to pay enhanced rent, for producing "barani" crops.

In 1859, the Financial Commissioner, in a suit between the parties, ordered that, if the defendant, the tenant, kept the land waste, the plaintiff, the landlord, "should have the option of transferring the land to other cultivators." The plaintiff now sued to eject the defendant as the latter refused to resort to well-irrigation. The land was entered at Settlement as chahi land in the hereditary occupancy of the tenant, and the revenue payable on it was at chahi rates; and it was also recorded, that of barani crops, the proprietor should receive one-fourth as rent, and of chahi crops one-fifth. The lower Appellate Court, having received the finding of a commission appointed to inquire "whether the defendant could with a reasonable profit use well water for the land in dispute," decreed that for the future the defendant must cultivate the whole of the land with well water. The defendant appealed to the Chief Court on the ground that he could not incur the outlay necessary for irrigation without loss: and upon a further inquiry directed by the Court, it was reported that the land was so small in area that it could not profitably be irrigated. Held, by BOULNOIS AND LINDSAY, JJ., that the defendant could not be ejected, but the plaintiff was at liberty to sue for enhanced rent under section 11 of the Tenancy Act. (Held, by the CAMPBELL, J., that plaintiff could not sue for enhancement of rent and that defendant was liable to be ejected. JODAR v. SODHI INDAR SINGH. 54 P R 1875

3. Enhancement of rent—Agreement at Settlement not to enhance—Expiry of term of Settlement.

An agreement contained in the Administration paper of Settlement is only binding during the currency of the Settlement in which and for the purpose of which it is drawn up. Held, therefore, that a proprietor is entitled to enhancement of rent under Act XXVIII of 1868, notwithstanding an agreement to the contrary, if the term of Settlement has expired. 4. Sections 2, 11—Enhancement of rent—Agreement.

Defendants held certain land under an agreement, dated 10th August 1853, the terms of which were also embodied in the wajib-ul-arz of the village, entitling them to hold the land for ever as cultivators, giving a certain share of the produce to plaintiff. In a suit brought by plaintiff, held, that he was not entitled to enhancement of rent under section 11, by reason of section 2, Act XXVIII of 1868. SODHI INDAR SINGH v. BHAGA. 50 P R 1878

5. Enhancement of rent—Principles on which enhancement should be made.

In a suit brought by the proprietors against their occupancy tenant for enhancement of rent upon the second ground stated in section 11 of the Tenancy Act, the lower Courts held that, because in a suit for enhancement brought by the proprietors of land of a similar quality in a neighbouring village against a hereditary tenant of the same class as the present defendant, the rent was enhanced by increasing the malikana payable by the tenant to an amount equal to the Government revenue, therefore the rent of the present defendant should be similarly enhanced and, instead of a malikana of 20 per cent. on the Government revenue heretofore payable by him in addition to the revenue and cesses, a malikana at the rate of 100 per cent. on the Government revenue (on a portion of the land) should in future be paid by him.

Held, that the principle on which the enhancement had been made was erroneous.

The rate of rent referred to in the 2nd ground of section 11 of the Tenancy Act is the rate per acre or ghumao payable by tenants of the same class for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the neighbourhood, and can only be arrived at by ascertaining the total amount payable for the land in each case, whether in a lump sum or as an aggregate of sums under the names of revenue, cesses, and malikana. It is necessary to compare the aggregate of these items per acre in one holding with their aggregate per acre in another before it can be said that the rent of the one is higher or lower than that of the other, and it is erroneous to say that the rents of both holdings are at the same rate because the malikana, which is only one of the items comprised in the rent, bears the same ratio to the revenne in both cases, seeing that the revenue itself may fall at very unequal rates on the two holdings. ALAYAR v. JALAL KHAN. 93 P R 1881

6. Enhancement of rent—Principles on which enhancement should be calculated under the 3rd ground of section 11—Comparison with rents in kind—Tenants of the "in same class."

The principles in accordance with which the enhancement of rent should be calculated and decreed under the 3rd ground mentioned in section 11 of the Tenancy Act, discussed and explained.

With reference to the definition of "rent" given in section 3 of the Act, which includes the land revenue and cesses, and the provisions of section 11, 3rd ground, and section 12 of the Act, the Court should ascertain the rate of rent usually paid in the neighbourhood by tenants of the same class without occupancy rights for land of a similar description and with similar advantages, and after making the deduction allowed under section 11, 3rd ground, should calculate the entire sum payable by the tenant for the occupation of the land, and then deduct the land revenue and cesses, if these are payable by the tenant. Rent should not be fixed with reference to the average rents paid by a number of tenants who may be of different classes, and whose holdings may be very dissimilar in regard to the description of the land or its advantages.

Again, as rents in kind necessarily fluctuate considerably from year to year, the value of the rent in kind for a particular year would afford no standard for the calculation of a cash rent to be paid every year, whether the seasons were favorable or not, and whether the prices were high or low. Moreover in attempting to fix cash rents with reference to the estimated value of rents paid in kind, it would be necessary to allow the tenant some deduction on account of his taking the entire risk of failure of crops, though the amount of such deduction would vary in different parts of the country according to local circumstances. Unless therefore it can be determined what rent in kind would correspond with a particular cash rent in a particular locality, the rates of rents in kind prevailing there could not be made available for the calculation of enhanced cash rent under section 11 of the Tenancy Act.

(No. 120 P. R. 1880), is also an element to be considered in determining whether tenants are of the same class or not, and another important element is whether the land has been held for any length of time at the rent now paid or that rent has been fixed for a single year or other short period. High rents may be paid for short periods because prices are at the time high, or for other reasons, but tenants taking lands for short periods would not be tenants of the same class as tenants who hold the same land for a long period, even if the rents paid by them could be regarded as the rates of rent usually paid. HAKU v. BHAGAT RAM 81 P R 1882

7. Suit for enhancement of rent—Suit by one of several joint proprietors—Right to sue.

Held, that a suit against an occupancy tenant for enhancement of rent brought by one out of several joint proprietors, the other proprietors not joining in demanding that the rent should be enhanced, is not maintainable, but must fail on the ground that it is not brought by the landlord; the landlord under whom the defendant holds not being the plaintiff alone, but the plaintiff and his co-proprietors jointly. Attar Singh v. Dewa Singh (No. 17 P. R. 1879) and Prem Singh v. Bhagwana (No. 4 P. R. 1880), referred to. SHARIFULLA v. JAMAL KHAN. 77 P R 1883

8. Enhancement of rent.

Held, that the 3rd ground of section 11 of the Tenancy Act applies only to tenants under section 5 or 6 of the Act, and cannot be applied to a suit for enhancement of the rent of tenants of the class described in section 8.

10. Grounds 2 and 3—Enhancement of rent.

In a suit for enhancement of rent under the 3rd ground mentioned in section 11 of the Tenancy Act, the lower Court based his decision on the view that the 3rd ground on which enhancement can be claimed under section 11 being alternative or supplementary to the 2nd ground, therefore until it appeared that there were no tenants with right of occupancy of a similar status to defendant with whom comparison might be made, comparison with tenants without rights of occupancy did not arise, except to strengthen a comparison already made with the former class.

Held by the Financial Commissioner, that this view was incorrect and opposed to the plain language of the Act, which contained nothing to show that a landlord must not be allowed to establish a claim under ground 3, until he had tried and failed to establish one under ground 2; but that the plaintiff was at liberty to choose his ground, though he could not succeed until he had adduced evidence of the kind required to establish a claim on the selected ground. 11. Enhancement of rent—Rate of rent usually paid by tenants-at-will in the neighbourhood.

The standard fixed by the 3rd ground of section 11 of the Tenancy Act, 1868, with reference to which enhancement can be decreed, is not an average rent rate, but an usual rent rate, and though, to constitute the latter, it is not necessary that there should be a large number of tenants paying an exactly uniform rate, still there must be at least a fair number paying rates which do not greatly vary, or there is no standard with reference to which enhancement can be derceed. Section 16.

1. Agreement to commute—Want of consideration.

Defendants were hereditary cultivators, and at the last Settlement, being in doubt as to whether their status would be maintained, signed a lease for ten years, in which payment of rent in kind was provided for,—the lease being recorded by the Settlement Officer. They had up to the last Settlement paid in cash. Plaintiff sued for rent in kind due under this lease. The Deputy Commissioner dismissed the suit on the ground that there was no consideration for the lease, under which defendants, who were entitled to hold in perpetuity, submitted to be ejected at the expiration of ten years. The Commissioner on appeal affirmed this decision. Held, that plaintiff's suit was properly dismissed, there being no consideration for defendant's promise to pay rent in kind. KHAIR DIN v MOHAMED 16 P R 1872

2. Claim for rent in kind—Materiality of last payment preceding suit.

Where plaintiff sued for rent in kind, and defendant pleaded that he had all along paid in cash, held, that it was necessary to determine the nature of the last payment before suit; for if the payment were in money, the rent could not be commuted into rent in kind without the consent of the landlord and tenant under section 16 of Act XXVIII of 1868. MOKAM SINGH v. LADHA MULL. 53 P R 1872

3. Receipt by landlord of value of produce no bar to claim for the produce itself.

4. Commutation of rent.

Plaintiff had since then paid rent in kind, but at a revision of the record of rights as to tenants, plaintiff having been restored to his original status of hereditary cultivator, claimed to revert to cash payments of rent. Held, that under section 16 of Act XXVIII of 1868 there could be no commutation of rent in kind into rent in money without the consent of the landlord. 6. And section 2—Rent—Change from cash to kind—Agreement—Want of consideration

Before 1867, the tenant was recorded hereditary and paid rent in cash; he was then erroneously recorded a tenant without occupancy rights, but protected for a term of years, and paid rent in kind until 1870, according to the entry made when the record of his status was altered; in 1870, the entry was again altered, and he was recorded hereditary tenant. He declined to pay rent in kind from that time. Held (CAMPBELL, J., dissenting), that the agreement in 1867 did not bind the tenant to pay rent in kind, as there was no consideration for the agreement, and the entry was made under an erroneous impression as to fact. The consent required by section 16, Tenancy Act, was also wanting. NANDU v. SANT SINGH.

Section 16—concld.

The defendants, who were tenants with rights of occupancy, paid rent in cash. In 1867, by direction of the Settlement officer of the day, they gave to plaintiff a kabulyat binding themselves to cultivate for two years paying rent in kind, and after that at the option of the proprietor. Believing themselves to be tenants-at-will they continued paying rent in kind up to 1875, when they instituted a suit to have themselves declared tenants with rights of occupancy, and for cancelment of the kabulyat. The claim having been decreed, the tenants refused to continue paying rent in kind. In a suit by the proprietor for the money equivalent of the rent paid in kind, held (CAMPBELL, J., dissenting) that the commutation of rent in cash into rent in kind having been an involuntary commutation, without the consent of the tenants as contemplated in section 16 of Act XXVIII of 1868, they were entitled to revert to cash payments. The appeal of the tenant in the rent suit had not then been determined, and in the ejectment suit he pleaded that he was not aware that he was bound to pay the arrears of rent within 15 days. Held, that, as it appeared that the tenant had not

5. Decree for ejectment of hereditary cultivator for alienating his land—Want of jurisdiction—Suit to set aside decree.

In 1868, plaintiff, an hereditary cultivator was directed by the Court in a suit brought against him by the landlords (now defendants) not to alienate his land. In 1874, the landlords again sued to eject the tenant for alienating his land contrary to the decree of 1868, and, obtaining a decree, ejected the tenant in execution thereof. The tenant now sued to set aside that decree, and recover possession of his land. Held, per BOULNOIS AND LINDSAY, JJ. (CAMPBELL, J. dissenting), that the decree for ejectment was made without jurisdiction, as alienation by the tenant was not a ground upon which such a decree could stand under section 19 of the Tenancy Act, and that plaintiff was entitled to sue to set it aside. Held, by CAMPBELL, J. that the decree for ejectment barred the present suit, as though based upon an error or illegality, it was passed by a Court competent to make a decree for the ejectment of an hereditary tenant. 6. Ejectment—Giving time to tenant to satisfy decree for rent.

Section 19 of the Tenancy Act does not compel the Court to decree ejectment when there is an unsatisfied decree for rent for 15 days. 8. Suit to eject occupancy tenant on payment of compensation—Valuation of suit for purpose of jurisdiction.

Held that, in a suit to eject an occupancy tenant on payment of compensation under section 19, Act XXVIII of 1868, the subject matter of the suit for the purpose of jurisdiction is the value of the hereditary right of occupancy, i. e. the price which the tenure would fetch if put up to sale, not the sum

9. Ejectment of tenant—Unsatisfied decree for arrears of rent—Meaning of "decree for an arrear of rent" in clause (1), section 19.

In a suit for ejectment under section 19 of the Tenancy Act, it appeared that the defendants were three brothers, hereditary cultivators of a joint holding, their cultivation being separate. The proprietors sued them jointly for arrears of rent and obtained a decree which was based on a compromise by which the three brothers agreed to pay the arrears in proportion to their shares in the cultivation, and the decree embodied the agreement to this extent. Two of the brothers paid their shares of the amount decreed, but the third brother left a part of his share unpaid, notwithstanding that execution of the decree had been taken out by the decree-holders. The proprietors then sued to eject the three brothers on the ground that the decree for rent above referred to had remained unsatisfied for more than 15 days. Two of the brothers pleaded that they had paid the amounts decreed against them, while the third brother admitted that he still owed Rs 2 on the decree. The said balance of Rs. 2 was found to consist partly of a sum due for rent and partly of a sum due for costs

Held, that the two brothers who had paid their shares of the amount decreed were not liable to ejectment, as at the time that the plaintiffs brought their suit it could not be said that a decree against them for an arrear of rent remained unsatisfied, within the meaning of section 19, clause 1 of the Tenancy Act; but that the third brother was liable to ejectment within the section.

Held further, by SMYTH, J., that the phrase "decree for an arrear of rent" in clause 1, section 19 of the Tenancy Act, includes the amount decreed for costs in the suit as well as the amount found to be actually due for rent. MOHAMDA v. NIHAL SINGH. 87 P R 1881

10. Landlord instituting his suit for ejectment before tender of compensation—Jurisdiction of Court to make a decree before such tender—Procedure—Tenant who has "continuously occupied" "for thirty years," explained

Held, per SMYTH and BRANDRETH, JJ., that a landlord is entitled to institute a suit under clause 2, section 19 of the Tenancy Act for the ejectment of his occupancy tenant before he has made or tendered payment of the compensation therein referred to, but the Court should not make a decree for ejectment before such tender. The proper procedure, where the parties differ as to the amount of compensation payable, is for the Court, after making the necessary enquiry, to record an intermediate order determining the amount of compensation to be paid by the landlord and fixing a date on or before which he must pay or tender such amount to the tenant. If the landlord fails to pay or tender it on or before that date the suit should be dismissed. If payment or tender is made within the time fixed, the Court should then proceed to make a decree for ejectment, provided that the case is one in which it is proper in other respects to make such a decree.

Held further, per SMYTH, J. (BRANDRETH, J doubting as to this), that the period of 30 years referred to in the last clause of section 19 of the Tenancy Act need not have been completed before the institution of the suit for ejectment, but if the occupation has extended over a period of 30 years, prior to the making of a decree for ejectment, or, at any rate, prior to the tender of compensation, the tenant ceases to be liable to ejectment under the provisions of the above-cited clause. Kaka v. Bhola (No. 96 *P. land of Rohtak in his occupation, the prayer of the plaint merely being for cancellation of the notice issued, the plaintiff not having been in fact ejected, held, that the plaintiff having given prima facie proof that he was not a tenant of the defendant, this was sufficient to make it incumbent on the defendant to prove that the relation of landlord and tenant subsisted between him and the plaintiff when the notice of ejectment was issued; and as the only mode in which they could succeed was by showing that they were proprietors of the mafi lands of Rohtak, and they had failed to do so, the plaintiff was entitled to a decree declaring the notice in question to have been invalid. MASTA v. RAMZAN ALI. 91 P R 1881

2. And sections 37, 38—Compensation for improvements—Condition precedent—Tender of amount due by landlord before notice of ejectment—Suit by tenant under section 25 to contest notice—Nature of decree to be made by Court in such case.

A tenant to whom compensation for improvements is due under section 37 and 38 of the Tenancy Act, cannot be ejected from his holding by notice unless and until such compensation is paid.

Payment of compensation by the landlord being a condition precedent to the ejectment of the tenant by notice of ejectment, the landlord is bound to tender the full amount due before notice of ejectment is served upon the tenant.

If the notice is served without such tender, and the plaintiff sues under section 25 to contest his liability to ejectment under the notice, he both may and ought to make the non-fulfilment by the landlord of this condition precedent a ground for contesting his liability to ejectment by the notice served upon him.

In such a suit the Court should make an absolute and unqualified decree, either that the plaintiff is not liable to ejectment under the notice served upon him, or that he is liable to ejectment, and that his suit is dismissed In no case should a decree be given for payment of a specified sum as compensation, or a decree for ejectment conditional upon payment of a specified sum, except with the express consent of both parties. Roopa v. Kesha (No 39 *P. 3. Notice of ejectment—Condition precedent—Illegality of notice without tender of compensation.

Held, that it is a condition precedent to the service of a valid notice of ejectment upon a tenant under the Tenancy Act that the landlord should have made a tender of the compensation due to the tenant for improvements. Where, therefore, in a suit to contest such notice of ejectment it appeared that no such tender had been made, held, that the omission must be regarded as a fatal defect in the notice and that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree declaratory of the invalidity of such notice, and to retain possession of his holding until such time as he was ousted in due course of law. Kaka v. Bhola (No. 96 *P. 4. And section 37—Compensation for improvements—Payment of compensation a condition precedent to right to eject tenant.

Held, that, under section 37 of the Tenancy Act the payment of compensation is a condition precedent to the right to eject accruing, and a finding that improvements had been made for which the tenant had not received compensation would therefore entitle him to succeed in a suit under section 25 of the Act to contest his liability to ejectment. Kaka v. Bhola (No. 96 *P. See PRE-EMPTION—6. RIGHT OF, IN VILLAGES. 196 P R 1882

1. Alienation—Mortgage.

A tenant having a right of occupancy within section 5 of Act XXVIII of 1868, has power to mortgage the land in his occupation subject to the proviso contained in section 34 of the Act, unless there be an agreement forbidding the mortgage under section 2. AKBER v. WAZIR ALI. 77 P R 1870

2. Gift.

A tenant with right of occupancy cannot give away his land without first offering it for sale at the market value to the landlord. ELAHYA v. KANHA.

3. Alienation—Sale of occupancy rights in execution of decree—Government Notification No. 1225 of 26th September 1866.

A obtained against B, a tenant with rights of occupancy, a decree for Rs. 630, and in execution of this decree attached the occupancy rights. The yearly profit of the rights was put up to auction, and A bid Rs. 45 in addition to what B had to pay on the land. The Court ordered that A should hold the occupancy rights for 14 years, and that at the end of that term the land should revert to B or his heirs whether or not A's decree were then fully satisfied from the profits. Held, (BOULNOIS, J. dissenting), that the alienation of B's rights did not require the sanction of the Chief Court under Government Notification No. 1225 of 26th September 1866; but that (per LINDSAY and CAMPBELL, JJ.) the alienation should not be carried into effect without giving the proprietor of the land the option of taking the land on the terms accepted by A the decree-holder, the proprietor paying Rs. 45 a year to the decree-holder for 14 years. KANDA v. RAM KARAN 32 P R 1873

4. Mortgage.

An hereditary tenant mortgaged his land to his daughter's son, without offering it for sale to the landlord; in a suit brought by the landlord the Chief Court decreed the mortgage to be void. PARTAB SINGH v. GAHIA. 67 P R 1875

5. Landlord's consent to mortgage of hereditary rights—Consent given by landlord's mortgagee.

The landlord mortgaged his land and the hereditary tenant, with the mortgagee's consent, mortgaged his also. Held, that section 34, Tenancy Act, applied to the mortgage effected by the tenant, and that by that section the consent of the landlord's mortgagee was not sufficient, but the tenant's alienation required the landlord's consent. LAL DASS v. GURU JOWAHIR SINGH.

6. Landlord and Tenant—Mortgagee—Limitation.

B. on 16th January 1869 mortgaged his occupancy rights in certain land to one B. S. The deed contained a clause that if B. made default in certain payments B. S. might enter into possession of the land. B. made default, and on 10th March 1874 B. S. claimed and obtained a decree for possession. On 29th July 1875 S. M. A., a mortgagee of the proprietors' rights, instituted the present suit to set aside the mortgage of the occupancy rights. Held, that the word "landlord" included a mortgagee for the purposes of section 32, Act XXXIII of 1868, and therefore that S. M. A. as a mortgagee from the proprietors was entitled to object to the mortgage by B. of his occupancy rights to B. S.

Held, further, that the limitation provided in Article 92, Schedule II of Act IX of 1871, did not apply to the suit. SHEIKH MEHR ALI v. BUTA. 39 P R 1877

7. And section 35—Occupancy rights—Mortgage of—Death of occupancy tenant without heirs—Right of mortgagee as against proprietor.

Plaintiff proprietor sued to recover possession of land held by defendant, mortgagee of Sharaf Din, occupancy tenant, who died without heirs two years before suit was brought. Held, that plaintiff was entitled to a decree, as the interest of the mortgagee in the land could be no greater and last no longer than that of the mortgagor (occupancy tenant) from whom it was derived, and that the mortgagor's interest having come wholly to an end by reason of his death without heirs, the mortgagee's interest ceased with it, even if the mortgage was made with the proprietor's knowledge or was afterwards assented to by him. SHER KHAN v. PIR BUKSH. 79 P R 1878

8. Landlord and tenant—Mortgage by occupancy tenant without consent of landlord—Cancelment of mortgage at suit of landlord—Right of landlord as against mortgagee to recover possession of tenant's land.

S K., proprietor of certain land, sued to cancel a mortgage thereof by G., his occupancy tenant, to P. B. and to oust P. B. from possession of the land. The lower Courts decreed the mortgage void as against S. K, having been made without his consent, as required by section 34 of the Tenancy Act, XXVIII of 1868, but refused him a decree for possession of the land.

Held, by the Chief Court, that S. K., as proprietor, was entitled to recover possession of the land of which as between him and P. B., the latter was in possession as a stranger.

The question, whether in such a case the possible existence of a right in the tenant to subsequently recover possession from the proprietor, on the ground that his attempt to alienate did not involve a forfeiture of the tenant's right of occupancy, does not bar the landlord's right to recover possession from the transferee. SHER KHAN v. GUJAR.

9. Alienation of occupancy rights.

Where an hereditary cultivator sold his rights to his landlord, whereupon the vendor's near collaterals (nephews and grand-nephews), who would have been entitled to succeed to the land sold on the death of the vendor, if no such sale had occurred, sued to set aside the sale, held, that by reason of section 34 of the Tenancy Act the plaintiffs could not maintain an objection to the sale in question unless they could show that the land alienated was part of an entire holding held jointly by themselves and the vendor. GANDA SINGH v. GOLAB SINGH.

10. Occupancy rights—Sale—Objection by vendor on ground of landlord's right to first offer.

In a suit for possession of land, the occupancy rights in which had been sold to plaintiff by defendant, held, (the proprietors not being parties to the suit), that defendant, the vendor, could not dispute the validity of his own sale on the ground of his landlord's right, under section 34 of the Tenancy Act, to the first offer of the land sold. GOHAR SINGH v. FATTU.

11. Mortgage of occupancy rights—Suit by proprietor to eject mortgagee—Delay in suing—Acquiescence.

Where an occupancy tenant mortgaged with possession his occupancy rights in certain land and the owner of the land made no objection to the transfer for five years, when the mortgagee having applied for mutation of names he was summoned into Court, and objected to the dakhil kharij, which was therefore refused, whereupon the said owner, a year and a quarter later, sued to eject the mortgagee as a stranger in possession of his land, held, that the owner must be taken to have acquiesced in the transfer, and that his suit must be dismissed. Nur Bukhsh v. Ghulam Mohiuddin (No. 47 P. R 1872), Sheikh Mehr Ali v. Buta (No. 39 P. R. 1877), and Sher Khan v. Gujar (No. 55 P. R. 1879), cited. FATTEHJANG v. BUDHA

12. Gift made by hereditary tenant without offer to landlord—Want of landlord's consent no ground for setting aside gift in suit to which landlord is not a party.

In a suit brought by a collateral relative of an occupancy tenant to set aside a deed of gift executed by the latter in favour of his daughter's son, the lower Appellate Court directed the gift to be cancelled mainly on the ground that as the donor had not made an offer of the land, the subject of the gift, to the landlord (who was not a part to the suit) the gift was therefore invalid with reference to the provisions of section 34 of the Punjab Tenancy Act.

Held, that the above section, which was passed in favour of the landlord, could only be enforced in a suit properly instituted by the landlord against the tenant who had contravened its provisions ; that the landlord might or might not choose to contest his tenant's action, and where he elected not to do so there was nothing in the section which could be construed to render an alienation by the tenant ipso facto invalid, at least as against third persons standing in the position of the present appellants. KARM DIN v. ISMAIL.

13. Mortgage by occupancy tenant without landlord's consent—Validity of such mortgage—Effect of consent of some of the proprietors.

In a suit to have a mortgage by a tenant with rights of occupancy under section 6 of the Tenancy Act, without the landlord's previous consent, set aside as invalid, held, following Sher Khan v. Gujar (No. 55 P. R. 1879), that section 34 of the Act is applicable to mortgages, and further, following the Full Bench decision in Bhupa v. Badhawa (No. 45 P. R. 1883), that the landlord's consent is a condition precedent to the validity of an alienation made by such tenant.

Held also, that the above condition was not supplied by the consent of two of the proprietors at the time of mutation of names, as, assuming such consent to have been given, it would not bind the other proprietors (the plaintiffs in the present suit) whose consent was not obtained. MUHAMMAD BAKSH v. MUSSAMMAT NURBHARI.

14 Alienation by tenant with right of occupancy under section 5—Offer to landlord—Condition precedent.

Held, by the Full Bench that it is essential to the valid exercise of the power of alienation vested, under section 34 of Act XXVIII of 1868, in a tenant with right of occupancy under section 5, that he should, previously to the exercise of such power, have made an offer of sale of his land to the landlord at the market-value. Mayda v. Harjus (No. 96 P. R. 1867), Nuthoo Khan v. Sultan (No. 18 P. R. 1868), Akber v. Wazir Ali (No. 77 P. R. 1870), F. B. Elahya v. Kanha

15. Alienation by occupancy tenant—Offer to landlord—Condition precedent.

Held, that the offer required by the proviso attached to section 34 of the Tenancy Act, is a condition precedent to the valid exercise by the tenant of the power of the alienation conferred by the section, and that consequently where no such offer has been made the sale itself is invalid against the landlord. Bhupa v. Badhawa (No. 45 P. R. 1883 F. B.) followed. MUBARAZ v. DHERA.

16. Landlord and tenant—Mortgage by tenant without consent of landlord—Delivery of possession to mortgagee—Suit for possession of mortgaged land—Forfeiture of occupancy right by tenant.

In a suit brought by the proprietors to recover possession of certain land on the ground that the hereditary tenants of the land, not being tenants under section 5 of the Tenancy Act, and not being authorized by any agreement in writing or any provision in the Wajib-ul-arz, had executed a mortgage and delivered possession of the land to a third person, the tenants and the mortgagee both being defendants in the suit, it was alleged that the tenants, though they had mortgaged their holding, still remained in cultivating possession of the land, and paid rent to the mortgagee by batai.

Held, that if this were so, as between the proprietors and the tenants the relation of landlord and tenant still existed, and the tenants were still entitled to rely on their right of occupancy as a valid defence in a suit by the proprietors to evict them, and all that the proprietors would be entitled to claim was a decree declaring that the mortgage was void and of no effect as against them

Case remanded for a distinct finding as to whether the tenants had delivered possession of the land to the mortgagee. Sher Khan v. Gujar (No. 55 P. R. 1879), cited and explained. KAKA v. DIAL SINGH.

17. Alienation by occupancy tenant—Non-forfeiture of interest by reason of unauthorised alienation.

Held, that there is nothing in the law which renders the interest of an occupancy tenant liable to forfeiture merely by reason of an unauthorised alienation by way of mortgage. HIRA v. JIA.

18. Unauthorised alienation by occupancy tenant—Non-forfeiture of tenure—Tenant's right to recover possession from landlord while still bound by his contract with the purchaser—Refund of purchase-money.

Held, that the doctrine that an attempt by an occupancy tenant to alienate his holding in contravention of section 34 of the Tenancy

Act does not involve a forfeiture of the tenure, cannot be extended to the length of holding that, when the tenant has given another person a right to possession as against him by an invalid transfer, and the landlord has had that transfer set aside as inconsistent with his rights, the tenant, having parted with the possession can recover that possession from the landlord without showing that he is no longer bound by the contract inconsistent with the rights of the landlord. He may be able to show this, because the purchaser has released him from the contract by taking back the purchase-money or by substituting a new contract not affecting the land, or because, as between him and the purchaser, it has been put an end to in some other way. If he is not able to show this, he is not entitled to recover the land, because the contract by which he is bound to the purchaser is inconsistent with his duties as tenant. Sher Khan v. Gujar (No. 55 P. R. 1879), cited. AGHA JAN v. GHULAM MOHYUDDIN.

19. Alienation by occupancy tenant in favour of one proprietor without consent of other proprietors—Effect of such transaction.
Certain tenants with a right of occupancy (not under section 5 of the Tenancy Act in a plot of land jointly owned by several proprietors, sold the right of occupancy to one proprietor, without the consent of the other proprietors. The latter thereupon sued the purchasing proprietor for joint possession of the land and for a share in the profits since the date when he took possession, and obtained a decree from the lower Courts.

Held, (upholding the decree of the lower Courts) that the transaction between the tenants and the defendant fell within the last clause of section 34 of the Tenancy Act, and did not operate to transfer the tenants' right of occupancy to the defendant any more than it would to a stranger.

Per Plowden, J. Though the term alienation as used in section 34 and section 35 of the Tenancy Act probably does not include a transaction between landlord and tenant, but only transactions between the tenant and a person other than the landlord, still a transaction between a tenant and one of several persons who jointly are the landlord cannot accurately be described as a transaction between the tenant and the landlord, and the mere circumstance that the person to whom the tenant alienate happens to be one of the persons who jointly are the landlord cannot alter the legal character of the transaction which but for such a circumstance would be void. SARDAR BALWANT SINGH v. MEHR SINGH.

20. And section 5. Unauthorized alienation by tenant—Acquiescence of landlord.
Plaintiffs, proprietors, sued to recover from defendants certain land held by the latter under mortgage from certain tenants with a right of occupancy under section 5 of the Tenancy Act, alleging that the mortgage was invalid as made without their previous consent The lower Courts found that, although there was no express evidence of any previous consent to the mortgage by plaintiffs, or of any offer of the land to them, yet the possession of the defendants and their father as mortgagee had extended over so long a period as to warrant the inference that, even if there was no previous consent plaintiffs had had full knowledge of, and had acquiesced in, the mortgage to an extent which removed the original flaw in it and rendered it now valid.

Held, (upholding the orders of the lower Courts) that the conduct of the plaintiffs cured any original defect in the mortgage, and that the plaintiffs' suit must be dismissed. NANAK CHAND v. NUSSAMMAT CHANDO.

21. Alienation by tenant without landlord's consent—Ratification of unauthorized alienations.
Though a tenant may defeat his landlord's action brought with intent to cancel an alienation made in contravention of the provisions of section 34 of the Tenancy Act, 1868, by proving that the landlord had subsequently ratified his act, any such plea must be supported by the clearest and most unequivocal evidence. 2. Three persons held land on a Joint hereditary occupancy. On the death of one of them, the proprietor claimed his third share on the ground that the deceased had not left male lineal descendants or collateral relatives, within section 36, Act XXVIII of 1868.

Held, that the proprietor's claim failed, as the two surviving tenants were entitled to hold the third share in question by right of survivorship, without proof that their and the deceased's common ancestor had occupied the land; and that the above section would not apply until the last joint tenant died. 3. Occupancy rights.
Under section 36 of the Tenancy Act, an adopted son succeeds to occupancy rights. CHUNI LAL v. IMDAD ALI. 1 P R 1874 Rev.

4. *Succession—Karabatis—*Wajib-ul-arz.
Held, that, under the provisions of the Wajib-ul-arz, the karabatis (near relations) of a deceased tenant with rights of occupancy, can succeed to such estate, notwithstanding section 36, Act XXVIII of 1868, even though the common ancestor of the deceased and the karabatis claiming may not have occupied the land as an occupancy tenant. RANJHA v. CHUHAR.

5. *Succession—Karabatis—Agreement—*Wajib-ul-arz—Succession of widow for life—Continuity of possession.
The Wajib-ul-arz provided that on the death of a tenant with rights of occupancy, his son, in default of his son his bhai, and in default of his bhai his karabati might succeed. Held, that the entry in the Wajib-ul-arz was an agreement within the meaning of section 2, Act XXVIII of 1868, and that under it a karabati (near relation), was entitled to succeed, notwithstanding the proviso to section 36 which requires that the common ancestor of the deceased tenant and the male collateral relative claiming shall have occupied such land.

Held, further, that the fact that the widow of the deceased hereditary cultivator took up her husband's cultivating rights, though she was not the next heir, could not be held to defeat the rights of the next heirs, who allowed her so to do. JOWAHIR SINGH v. ASA.
64 P R 1877

6. Occupancy rights—Succession—Adopted son.
Held, that an adoption by an occupancy tenant is legal, and the adopted son succeeds to the occupancy rights of his adoptive father. GAHYA v. JASWANT SINGH.

7. Appointment of heir by occupancy tenant—Muhammadan agriculturist—Adopted son—Male lineal descendant—Act I of 1868, section 2, clause 19—Act IV of 1872, section 5—Custom.
Held, by the Full Bench (Plowden, Smyth, Elsmie and Barkley, JJ.) that the words "male lineal descendants" in section 36 of Act XXVIII of 1868 include the sons of the tenant, and the sons of such sons, without limit, and that in accordance with the provisions of Act I of 1868 where the personal law of the tenant permits adoption, the word "sons" as above used includes adopted sons; but where there has merely been an appointment of an heir, the person so appointed is not a "male lineal descendant" within the meaning of the section.

Held further, per Smyth, Elsmie, Barkley and Rattigan, JJ. with reference to the provisions of section 5, Act IV of 1872, and section 36, Act XXVIII of 1868, that a person cannot claim to succeed by custom to a right of occupancy in land, who is not a male lineal descendant or a male collateral relative of the deceased tenant. Gopal Singh v. Jowahir Singh (No. 1 *P. 8. Succession to occupancy rights—Sanyasi fakirs—"Male collateral relatives."

Plaintiffs, who were Sanyasi fakirs, claimed to succeed to the occupancy tenancy of a Sanyasi of a collateral branch, who had died leaving no disciples, urging (which was found to be proved) that the occupancy tenure was originally acquired by the Guru from whom both branches were derived.

Held, that the plaintiffs were "male collateral relatives" within the meaning of section 36 of the Tenancy Act; that those words might be interpreted in accordance with the law or custom by which succession among Sanyasis was regulated; that as the latter do not marry, but a disciple succeeds his Guru in the same way as the son succeeds his father, therefore, though there is no blood relation, there is a relationship of an analogous character, and the word "male collateral relatives" were wide enough to include the plaintiffs. SUNDAR SINGH v. BISHNGIR. 82 P R 1883

9. Succession to occupancy rights—Collaterals whose common ancestor has "occupied" the land.

The proviso to section 36 of the Tenancy Act does not require that the common ancestor of the deceased hereditary tenant and the male collateral relatives claiming under the section should have occupied the land as an hereditary tenant; it is sufficient if such common ancestor "occupied" the land. ALLADIN v. KHUDA BAKHSH. 88 P R 1883

10. Succession of occupancy tenant—Common ancestor occupying land—Character of such occupation immaterial.

Held, that section 36 of the Tenancy Act, 1868, does not in terms require that the common ancestor should have occupied the land as an occupancy tenant, and there is no ground for holding that this is implied, as the Legislature appear to have advisedly used the expression "occupied the land" without qualification, so that the only question should be the question of simple fact, whether a given person had occupied, without further question as to the character in which he occupied. MUSSAMMAT BEGO v. BASIA.

11. Wajib-ul-arz—Karabati—Construction.

The Wajib-ul-arz of the village in question provided that the rule of succession to occupancy rights was that karabaties of the deceased were to succeed him in order of relationship. Held, that the word "karabati" means "near male collaterals" and that consequently the uncle succeeded to the exclusion of the widow of the deceased tenant. 2. Ejectment—Right of tenant to compensation when "wajib-ul-arz" is silent—Necessity of determining question of ejectment and of compensation at same time—Res judicata.

Plaintiff, a tenant without right of occupancy, brought a suit to contest his liability to be ejected and for "damages." His suit failed, and a decree for his ejectment was passed. He again sued for compensation for tenant's improvements. The Wajib-ul-arz contained no provision for compensation. Held, per LINDSAY, J. that the Wajib-ul-arz was an agreement within section 2 of Act XXVIII of 1868, and the parties were bound by its terms to which the Court could not add anything; and that, consequently, the plaintiff had no right to compensation; moreover, that the matter was res judicata.

Held, per BOULNOIS, J., that the silence of the Wajib-ul-arz as to compensation for improvements could not control the operation of the Punjab Tenancy Act on the subject, but that plaintiff was precluded from raising the question of compensation in a separate suit filed several months after a decree for his ejectment, the Act requiring that the question of ejectment and of compensation thereupon should be determined at the same time. ROOPA v. KHESHA. 39 P R 1871

3 Improvements, necessary.

Compensation for improvements under section 37, Act XXVIII of 1868, only includes the cost of the actual improvements, and not money spent unnecessarily on supposed or alleged improvements. Where a well (the alleged improvement) watered other land besides that which the defendant occupied as tenant to the plaintiff, held, that the assessment of compensation should have reference only to the proportionate benefit that plaintiff's land derived from the well, and should not be measured by the expense of making the well. LALLOO v. LALL MUN.

4. Compensation.

Plaintiff (tenant-at-will) was served with notice of ejectment under the Tenancy Act, and brought a suit under section 26 to contest the ejectment. His suit was dismissed. Held, that the decree made in the suit after notice of ejectment dismissing his suit, was tantamount to an order of ejectment; and that before such decree could be passed, the question of compensation for improvements raised by the plaintiff should have been disposed of under section 37. KURRUM BUX v. KIRPA. 8 P R 1872

5. Improvements—Planting trees without consent of landlord—Delay in complaining.

Plaintiffs were proprietors, and defendants hereditary tenants. The planting of trees by hereditary tenants was customary in the village; but the wajib-ul-arz provided that when trees were planted, it was to be with the permission of the proprietor. Two years and a half before suit, the defendants, without plaintiffs' express permission, planted certain fruit trees; plaintiffs sued to have the trees removed. Held, that plaintiffs' delay, which was unexplained, in coming forward to complain of the planting of the trees, and the planting of such trees being customary in the village, were circumstances from which permission might be inferred. Plaintiffs' suit dismissed accordingly. NUR BAKHSH v. GHOLAM MOHIUDDIN.

6. Improvements—Reclaiming waste—Trees

Compensation not allowed for trees that grew spontaneously or were planted here and there, and were taken care of and nourished by the tenants; but compensation allowed for reclaiming waste land and making a jhalar. IMAMDIN v. MOHOMDA. 18 P R 1874

7. Compensation—Improvements—Labor—Damages.

The Additional Commissioner on the report of a commission decreed to plaintiffs, tenants without rights of occupancy, Rs. 45 as compensation for improvements, Rs. 15 being money expended, Re. 1 the value of the tenants' labour, and Re. 1 damages. Held, that the money value of the tenants' labor in reclaiming waste lands may be given as compensation under section 37, Act XXVIII of 1868. Held, further, that damages cannot be awarded as compensation. MANU v. FATTA.

8. And section 40.—Compensation to tenant for improvements—Claim first raised in special appeal.

The terms of section 37, Act XXVIII of 1868, make it incumbent upon a plaintiff suing to eject a tenant to declare either that proper compensation for improvements has been paid to the defendant, or that no compensation is payable, or that there is a difference between the parties as to the amount or value of the compensation to be made.

Therefore, where the plaintiff omitted to place these matters before the first Court, and that Court did not deal with them on its own motion, held, that the defendant had a right to have the omissions rectified in special appeal. NATHAL v. SULTAN.

9. Suit for enhancement of rent—Defendant claiming compensation for improvements—Compensation found to be due must be paid or tendered before decree for enhancement is made—Procedure to be adopted where there is a dispute as to tenant's right to receive compensation or as to amount due.

A decree for enhancement of a tenant's rent cannot, with reference to the provisions of section 37 of the Tenancy Act, be made until he has received the compensation for improvements to which he is entitled: but this condition is sufficiently complied with for the purpose of the above section, if the compensation found on the enquiry in the enhancement suit to be due is paid or tendered to the tenant before the decree for enhancement is made.

Where there is a bona fide dispute raised in an enhancement suit as to the right of the tenant to receive compensation or as to the amount of the compensation to which he is entitled, the Court, after fixing an issue as to the tenant's right to compensation and the amount of compensation to be paid to him and making the necessary enquiry, should record an intermediate proceeding determining these issues; and if it finds that the tenant is entitled to receive compensation, under section 37 of the Act, before his rent can be enhanced, it should fix a date on or before which the landlord should pay or tender payment of the amount to the tenant, or should pay the amount into Court for the use of the tenant: if the landlord fails to pay or tender payment of the amount on or before the date fixed, the suit should be dismissed: if payment is made or tendered within the prescribed time the suit may then proceed, and a decree for enhancement be made if the plaintiff proves that in other respects he is entitled to such a decree. Shada v. Telu Mal (No. 13 *P. 10. Compensation for improvements—Right of representative of tenant-at-will to compensation—Tenant's right to payment of compensation prior to ejectment

In a suit by the plaintiffs to contest a notice of ejectment partly on the ground that they were occupancy tenants, but chiefly on the ground that they had made improvements for which they were entitled to compensation under section 37 of the Tenancy Act, the Court of first instance dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiffs had not shown any reason for claiming a right of occupancy in the land. In appeal the plaintiffs contended that they were entitled to compensation before ejectment, but the lower Appellate Court held that as one of the plaintiffs admitted that the land was reclaimed from waste by his uncle at a time when the plaintiffs were too young to have given any assistance, they were not entitled to compensation under section 37, that section allowing occupancy tenants only to claim compensation as representatives of the person who made the improvements.

Held, that there was no reason to put a narrower construction on the words "his representative" in section 37 than that given to them by the legislature in the definition clause, there being nothing in the section repugnant to giving them their full signification.

Case remanded for fresh decision after framing issues as to the improvements for which the plaintiffs claimed to be entitled to compensation before being ejected from the land, with a direction that if compensation were found to be due for the improvements made by the tenant himself within 30 years before suit, or by a tenant whose representative he was, he must be held not to be liable to ejectment under the notice served upon him (see Kaka v Bhola, No 96 *P. 11. Suit to contest notice of ejectment—Plaintiffs claiming to have succeeded to last occupancy tenant—Compensation for improvements.—"Representative" of tenant.

In a suit to contest a notice of ejectment, in which the plaintiffs, who were daughters' sons, claimed to have succeeded to the occupancy tenure of one G., deceased, held, that though the plaintiffs had not proved their title to succeed to the occupancy rights, they were entitled to rely upon section 37 of the Tenancy Act as protecting them from ejectment until they had received compensation for any improvements made by G. within 30 years next before the ejectment, they being his representatives within the meaning of section 37, though his rights of occupancy had come to an end on his death: (see the definition of "representative" in section 3 of the Act). Kaka Singh v. Basant Singh (No. 136 *P. 1. Improvements—Compensation.

Section 38 of the Tenancy Act is not exhaustive, and does not exclude other improvements than those specially mentioned, which fall under the general description of works by which the annual letting value of the land is increased. A fruit-garden may, therefore, be an improvement entitling the tenant to compensation. A tenant is entitled to the actual money he has expended in making the improvement, but not to the cost of maintaining it. KHODA BUKSH v. PIR KASIM ALI.

2. Improvements—Reclaiming and clearing waste lands—Compensation.

Held, that under section 38, Act XXVIII of 1868, the reclaiming and clearing of waste lands is an improvement, entitling the tenant to compensation, if the annual letting value of the land has been, and at the time of demanding compensation continue to be increased.

It is a fair presumption, not of law, but of fact, that a tenant who clears waste land and brings it under cultivation, improves it within the meaning of that section. WAZIRA v. GANDHI SINGH.

1. Improvement—Compensation.

If a tenant reclaims waste land and recoups himself the outlay in the first year by reason of the soil being virgin and of superior productive power, and the tenant continues to pay the same rent as before, the rate by him being the same as that paid by other tenants in the village, the tenant is entitled to compensation, and the landlord cannot be said, within the meaning of section 40 of the Act, to have indirectly assisted the tenant by subsequently allowing the tenant to hold at a rent more favorable than the rent at which he would otherwise have held.

Per Division Bench (LINDSAY and PLOWDEN, JJ.).—Merely bringing pasture land under cultivation is not an improvement entitling the tenant to compensation. MACHI v. SUBHAN

2. Compensation for improvements—Application by tenant after his ejectment from his holding—Jurisdiction to entertain application.

The applicaion contemplated by section 40 of the Tenancy Act is one to be made before the tenant has been ejected from his holding.

Where, therefore, it appeared upon an application by a tenant under the above section that no question arose between the landlord and the tenant as to the amount or value of any compensation tendered before the applicant was ejected, held, by the Financial Commissioner, that it was very doubtful if a claim to compensation would now lie at all; but that if it did lie, it was one that must be instituted in and determined by the Civil Court. had before his death acquired by long possession occupancy rights in the land, and that his sons therefore could not be dispossessed without payment of compensation for improvements.

Held, that the suit was not excluded from the cognizance of the Civil Courts as one for ejectment of tenant, as the history of the acquisition of the land in suit by G. It was proved that a share of the said muafi had originally been granted by the Moghal Emperors to plaintiff's branch of the family, but at the Settlement of 1889-90, when the question arose as to whether plaintiffs should be recorded as jagirdars or muafidars the Settlement Officer, acting upon the Financial Commissioner's Circular No. $\frac{1}{2}\frac{3}{8}$ of 1865 refused to record plaintiffs as such, on the ground that it was undesirable to increase the number of names in which muafis were shown. The lower Courts having decreed plaintiffs' occupancy rights as prayed for, defendant applied to the Financial Commissioner for revision of the said orders.

Held, that a share of the said muafi having been originally granted to plaintiff's branch of the family by the Moghal Emperors, who were predecessors of the British Government, plaintiffs were jagirdars within the meaning of section 4 (15) of the Tenancy Act, 1887.

Held, further, that it not being necessary that plaintiffs should be jagirdars of the particular land in the village in which the occupancy right was claimed, plaintiffs, as such jagirdars, were entitled to occupancy rights in the said land under section 5 (1) (d) of the Act, and could not be deprived of such rights by the said Circular which was issued before the passing of even the first Tenancy Act. In such cases it is within the competence of a Revenue Court to dispense with an application from a joint tenant under section 111 of the Land Revenue Act and to direct by its decree that a partition shall be effected and that the share of the tenant in which he has been found to have acquired occupancy rights should be marked off and that he should be ejected from the residue. the land from one Budhe Shah, who having been made a defendant in the case by an order of the first Court, supported the defendant's allegation. The plaintiff's mortgage was an unregistered one, dated 19th July 1890 (the registration of which was not compulsory), and mutation of names had been granted in his favour on the 14th June 1895, and he had since that date been shown in the jamabandi papers as a mortgagee in possession. The second defendant, Budhe Shah, based his claim on a subsequent registered mortgage, and mutation of names had never been effected in his favour. The first Court ordered the plaintiff to obtain a decree for possession from a Civil Court. On appeal the Collector remanded the case, remarking that the sole issue was whether defendant No. 1 was put in as tenant by the plaintiff or not, and ordered Budhe Shah's name to be struck off the record. Both Courts having found that the defendant had not been put in as a tenant by the plaintiffs held, upon the special merits of the case, that as the plaintiff's mortgage was a completed transaction, and had been in force for years, and as the entry in the annual record was in the plaintiff's favour, if any one was to be referred to a Civil Court to establish his claim it should have been the subsequent mortgagee, who claims against the plaintiff, and was rightly joined as a defendant by the first Court. The plaintiff must be treated by the Revenue Courts as the mortgagee entitled to possession, and held to be landlord, and Budhe Shah to be a person in possession of the land without the consent of the landlord, and liable to pay rent to the plaintiff under section 14 of the Tenancy Act, until the subsequent mortgagee had been held by a Civil Court to be entitled to possession.

landlord, acting with timely promptitude, honestly did his best to bring about the due sharing of the crop.

The very fact that the landlord is a non-resident should cause a Court to allow weight to the said presumption with more than ordinary caution, as otherwise it would be to a landlord's interest to avoid due sharing and sue for arrears of rent.

Suits for arrears of rent, when taken in kind and on barani land specially, should be brought promptly, and if not, the strictest proof should be required of plaintiff's claim, it being hardly possible for the Court to get data for a fairly safe estimate of the outturn unless the claim is made without delay.

Held, further, that the employment of a pleader to ascertain locally what the yields were is unsatisfactory.—JIWAN v. HASHAM.

Although when the land of a tenancy has been diverted from its original purpose the tenant is liable to be ejected under section 39 (a) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, but in cases where the property by reason of its situation in the neighbourhood of large cities advancing in prosperity has been converted from its original purpose to land suitable for building purposes and where there is no immediate injury to the landlord, it is by no means necessary to eject the tenant if the rights of the landlord can be recognized in some other way as provided for by section 48 of the Act. Section 58.

Landlord and tenant—Right of landlord to claim rent from sub-lessee—Attornment by sub-lessee to stranger claiming title to property—Termination of tenancy—Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, section 58.

Held, that upon the determination of a tenancy, it is the duty of the tenant not merely to relinquish possession of the premises but to restore possession thereof to the landlord, and that if such tenant has underlet the whole or any portion of the premises, he will be liable for a breach of the obligation if his sub-tenant refuses or neglects to give up possession when the term ends.

An attornment made by a tenant or a sub-tenant to a stranger claiming title to the estate of the landlord is absolutely null and void, and the possession of such landlord is in no way affected or changed thereby.

Held, further, that there being no privity of contract between the original lessor and a sub-lessee, the former is not entitled to claim rent from the latter, his remedy being only against the lessee with whom he made the contract.

The provision in section 58 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, is a special provision in a special enactment, and has no application to the ordinary law of landlord and tenant. Abdul Kadir v. Nur-ud-din.

In the Rawalpindi District a mukarraridar is a tenant, but there is a difference between his status and that of an ordinary tenant with rights of occupancy.

Held, therefore, that the succession to a deceased mukarraridar of the said district is not governed by section 59 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, and that his right devolves according to the law applicable to the parties, as if it were a proprietary right.

In the case of a deceased childless mukarraridar of the Pindigheb tahsil, Rawalpindi District, who had acquired his right by constructing a well in the land of a proprietor with his consent, found that the question of succession was governed by custom, and that by such custom collaterals, whose common ancestor had never held the lands in dispute, were entitled to succeed, subject to the life-interest of the widow of the deceased. The owners of a certain village having applied for partition of the village shamilat, plaintiffs applied that that part of the shamilat which had been cultivated by them, and in which they alleged that they had sunk a well, should be retained in their possession, or that they should be awarded compensation for the improvements effected thereon by them. The well in question was found to have been constructed more than thirty years ago. The Collector, on appeal, held that plaintiffs were "tenants" within the meaning of the Punjab Tenancy act, and remanded the case to the first Court for further inquiry as to the amount of compensation to which plaintiffs were entitled. Defendants thereupon preferred a further appeal to the Commissioner, who held that plaintiffs, though "tenants," were merely tenants-at-will, and, as such, not entitled to compensation for improvements effected by them without the consent of the landlords. Plaintiffs having applied to the Financial Commissioner for revision of the order of the Commissioner, it was Held, that the relationship of the parties in respect of the land in question being that of landlord and tenant, and the well in dispute having been constructed before the commencement of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, section 65 of the Act applied, and plaintiffs were, therefore, entitled to compensation for such "improvements" within the meaning of the Act as they could prove that they had effected unless they had acted in contravention of any written agreement between them and their landlords.

—Jurisdiction of Civil or Revenue Court—Suit to contest liability to ejectment—"Landlord and tenant"—Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, sections 45, 77 (3) (f)—Procedure.

T. G. and others had notices of ejectment under section 45 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, served upon B. and J., who thereupon, instituted suits in the Revenue Court in the terms of the notices to contest their liability to ejectment. 2. Punjab Tenancy Act, XVI of 1887, sections 60 and 77 (3), (h)—Transfer of occupancy rights by widow—Suit by landlord for dispossession of vendee—Parties and limitation for such suit—Indian Limitation Act, XV of 1877, article 144.

Held, that in a suit against the vendor and vendee of a right of occupancy for dispossession of the vendee, if the suit succeeds, the decree is one for possession as against the vendee. The mere fact that the word "dispossession" is used in section 77 (3) (h) of the Punjab. Teancy Act, 1887, and the word "possession" in article 144 of the Second Schedule of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, makes no difference, therefore when a landlord specifically sues for the dispossession of the vendee article 144 of the Indian Limitation Act applies.

Held also, overruling 4 P. R. 1900 Rev. (Prem Singh v. Jamit Singh), that section 60 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, makes transfers under any section of Chapter V including sectfon 59 (3), "voidable at the instance of the landlord," who alone can enforce his rights in the Revenue Court by bringing a suit under section 77 (3) (h) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, and that a reversioner of the widow's deceased husband cannot be added as a plaintiff as he is not a landlord. He has his remedy in a Civil Court if the landlord takes no action or the widow abandons the land. HAR LAL v. MUSSAMMAT GOHR. 3 P R 1910 Rev.

8. " Landlord "—Suit for compensation for occupation of land—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Court—Mortgage by alleged widow impeached by prima facie heirs of last holder.

Plaintiffs sued in a Civil Court alleging that certain land, the property of one Mussammat H. K., the widow of the deceased proprietor S. S., was mortgaged by her to them with possession; that they had obtained dakhil kharij, and that the defendants in Sambat 1950 prevented the plaintiffs' servant from sowing the land and cultivated it themselves. Plaintiffs claimed compensation based on the computation of what tne crops would have been, had they cultivated the land personally or, in the alternative, that they might cut the crops and compensate defendants for their seed.

Held, that upon these allegations the plaintiffs were " the landlord " as regards the defendants, inasmuch as they were the persons immediately entitled to the use and occupation of the land of which the defendants were in possession without their consent; that section 14 and section 77 sub-section (3) (n) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, applied to the case, and that the fact that plaintiffs assessed compensation on a wrong principle did not oust the jurisdiction of the Revenne Courts. Section 8.

1. Liability for damages—Suit for compensation for damages caused to horse during transit by rail—Contract Act (IX of 1872), sections 151, 152—Railway Act (IV of 1879), sections 8, 10, 13—Special contract—Company pleading their own regulations in answer to plaintiff's suit—Effect of such regulations on Company's liability—Notice—Agreement.

In a case which came before the Chief Court as a reference made by the Judge of the Small Cause Court, Lahore, it appeared that plaintiff sued the Sindh Punjab and Delhi Railway Company to recover Rs. 250 as compensation for injuries sustained by a horse while being carried by the defendants' railway from Umballa to Lahore, alleging that owing to the negligence and unskilfulness of the Company's servants the horse was thrown down and injured while being carried as aforesaid.

Held, that the question of the liability of the defendants to make compensation to the plaintiff turned, under section 152, Act IX of 1872, upon whether the defendants took as much care in respect of the horse as a man of ordinary prudence would, under the circumstances of the case, have taken of a horse of his own of equal value, and that the onus of proving that they took this amount of care was, under section 13 of Act IV of 1879, on the defendants. As therefore the Judge of the Small Cause Court had found on the evidence that there was want of due care on the part of the defendants' servants, in that they used an unsuitable vehicle for the conveyance of the horse, and that this contributed to the injuries sustained by the animal, this of itself was sufficient to render the defendants liable to make compensation, unless they could show that they were exempt from liability on some special ground.

The defendants in the above suit relied, among other pleas, upon two general regulations of the Company as a defence to plaintiff's action. The 1st regulation relied on was in the following terms : "All claims "against the Railway Company for loss or "damage to any consignment of goods must "immediately be made to the Station Master "or clerk in charge of the station to which "they have been booked, and also a written "statement of the nature of the damage "received and contents of the articles miss-"ing must be forwarded to the Traffic "Manager, Lahore, within forty-eight hours "after such consignment has arrived at its "destination, otherwise the Railway Com-"pany will not hold themselves responsible."

Held, that this regulation if viewed simply as a public notice to persons sending goods by Railway, obviously could not operate to relieve the Company from liability for loss of, or damage to, the goods when the terms of the notice had not been complied with; but at most it could only be relied on as evidence of an implied agreement, and any such agreement would be void, under section 10, Act IV of 1879, for the purpose of limiting the obligation or responsibility of the Railway Company. The only way in which the defendants could successfully set up the regulation as an answer to the suit would be by showing that it was made in pursuance of a power given to them by the Legislature, and that it therefore had the force of law ; but as the rule now relied upon by the defendants did not come within the scope of the power to frame general rules given by section 8 of Act IV of 1879, therefore even viewed as a rule under that section, it was of no legal force and failed as an answer to plaintiff's suit.

The 2nd rule relied upon was one of those that regulate the traffic, and was in the following terms: "Horses,—One syce free "with each animal. An insurance rate of ½ "per cent. per 100 miles or portion of 100 "miles will be charged on all horses of the "declared value of Rs. 400 and upwards and "a form of conditions under which the "Railway Company undertake to carry "horses must be signed by the sender or "his agent." With regard to the latter part of this rule, it appeared that there was no contract in the present case sufficient to satisfy the requirements of section 10 of Act IV of 1879, but it was argued for the defendants that the plaintiff should under the 1st part of the above rule have declared the value of the horse and should have paid an insurance rate, and that not having done so he was not entitled to value the horse at more than Rs. 400 in any question of the loss of, or damage to, the horse arising between him and the Company.

Held, that this contention could not be maintained, as, under the circumstances of the present case, a mere notice to the sender of the existence of the rule in question was not sufficient with reference to the provisions of section 10 of the Railway Act to limit the ordinary liability of the Company imposed by the Contract Act. As the sender was not required by the Company to sign an agreement as prescribed by section 10 of Act IV of 1879, nor to make any declaration of the value of the horse, and the horse was received without such declaration and the rate demanded by the defendants' servants was paid, the defendants could not claim to be absolved from liability to make compensation to the full extent for the injuries shown to have been caused to the horse by the want of due care on the part of their servants. 2. Suit for damages for injury to consignment—Carriers — Warehousemen— Act IX of 1872, section 151—Care to be taken by bailee—Refusal by consignee to take delivery of part of consignment on arrival—Effect of such refusal on carrier's responsibility—Demurrage.

Plaintiff sued the Railway Company for damages for injury to gunny-bags consigned to him from Serampur, he having refused to accept delivery on the ground that they had been damaged owing to the want of proper care on the part of the Company. The first Court holding in effect that when the damage was sustained the Company had ceased to be liable as carriers, and that there was no want of due care on their part, gave the plaintiff a decree only for the surplus realized by the sale of the goods after paying the Railway Company's charges, including three months' demurrage. The lower Appellate Court substantially concurred in this finding, holding that the liability of the defendants as carriers ceased at 10 A.M. on the morning of the 17th June, 24 hours after the arrival of the last three bales of bags, the damage being admitted to have taken place on the night of the 17th; and also finding that there had been negligence on the plaintiff's part, as he was aware on the morning of the 16th that the greater part of the consignment, 23 out of 26 bales, had arrived, but made no arrangements to take delivery. In second appeal to the Chief Court, it was contended for the plaintiff that the Company did not take even ordinary care of the goods and were therefore liable to the plaintiff; that no charge for demurrage was admissible after the goods had been damaged by their neglect; and further that plaintiff was under no obligation to take delivery until the entire consignment had arrived.

Held, that there was no reason to think that the lower Appellate Court was wrong in holding that the goods were ready for 24 hours before 10 A.M. on the 17th June, and that a reasonable time having then elapsed, the responsibility of the Company as carriers ceased; that when that responsibility came to an end, they became responsible as warehousemen, their responsibility in that capacity being regulated by section 151 of the Contract Act; and that as the finding of the lower Appellate Court (which must be accepted as binding in second appeal) amounted to a finding that the defendants did in fact take all the care that was reasonably practicable under the circumstances, this was sufficient to discharge them of their liability under the above section.

Held further, that there being no rule of law that when a large quantity of goods of the same description are delivered to a carrier, the carrier's responsibility as such must continue until the whole are ready for delivery, though the plaintiff was under no obligation to remove the 23 bales which he knew had arrived on the morning of the 16th, still, on his failure to do so within reasonable time the liability of the Company as carriers ceased, and their liability as warehousemen and right to charge demurrage arose.

Held also, that as there was no final refusal by the plaintiff to accept the goods before the expiration of the three months for which demurrage was charged, in which case probably the Company would have ceased to be warehousemen, and have been entitled to sell the goods as soon as they could conveniently arrange to do so, there was no ground for holding that the Courts below were wrong in law in allowing demurrage for three months. 3. Contract to deliver goods at rate specified in receipt note—Refusal by Company to deliver without payment of higher freight than that mentioned in receipt—Mistake—Alternative modes of carriage—Duty of Company to ascertain what mode of carriage consignor wishes to adopt—Election by consignor—Power of Company to charge for more expensive mode of carriage without consignor's consent—Under-charge—Practice of Company.

In a suit against a Railway Company to recover the value of certain ballis, it was found that the plaintiff's agent delivered the said ballis at one of the defendant Company's stations, and then received a receipt note wherein the Company contracted to convey the ballis at a specified rate per maund, and that on the arrival of the consignment at the place of destination the plaintiff's agent there tendered the freight entered in the receipt as payable which the agent of the defendant Company refused to accept. The ballis were afterwards sold by the defendant Company as the plaintiff refused to pay a higher rate which was claimed for the carriage in consequence of the ballis having been conveyed in covered trucks. It appeared that at the time when the contract was entered into between the parties two alternative methods of carriage, involving a different scale of charges, prevailed on the defendant's line with respect to ballis, which in the Goods Tariff book were simply classified as second class goods, though by a Company's circular an additional rule had, before the ballis were delivered for carriage, been brought into operation, whereby ballis loaded in covered wagons were to be charged "at a minimum rate per wagon as for 164 maunds per wagon," and the ballis having been conveyed by covered wagons were said by the Railway Company to have been subject to the charge provided for by the said rule, which it was alleged was not charged in the first instance by mistake, such mistake being liable to rectification before delivery of the goods to the consignee in accordance with the express terms of the receipt-note. Plaintiff, however, contended that as his agent made no application for the conveyance of the ballis by covered wagons, and as the charge entered in the receipt-note was allowable under the Tariff book, the defendant's agents were themselves responsible for having employed covered wagons, for which plaintiff had not contracted to pay.

Held that, assuming that the additional rule above quoted was lawfully introduced and published, it was the duty of the Company's agent at the receiving station to ascertain by which of the alternative modes of carriage the consignor desired the ballis to be conveyed; as an alternative rate implies an option on the part of the consignor, and it must be shown that he had an opportunity of exercising that option before he can be held bound by his election: and if he selected the cheaper mode, to which according to the rules of the Company a condition of signing a risk-note was attached, the goods-clerk or other servant of the Company concerned should have caused such a note to be prepared and signed before accepting the goods for transit; but as none of the above matters were attended to, and the ballis were received as falling under class II, and the charge entered in the receipt note was that legally claimable on ballis sent otherwise than in covered wagons, therefore the Company was not justified in demanding a higher charge than that entered in the receipt note, because its servants subsequently chose to use covered wagons for its own protection, nor in subsequently selling the plaintiff's ballis because he refused to comply with that demand.

With regard to the contention that the practice of the Company at the time when the ballis were delivered was to send such articles by covered wagons unless instructions to the contrary were given by the consignor, held, that there was nothing on the record to show that such a practice did exist, or that plaintiff or his agent had any notice of its existence. for conveyance from Sialkot to Rawalpindi, received a receipt-note in the usual form, in which the freight charged was, by a mistake of the booking clerk, calculated at half the correct rate. The goods were duly delivered to the consignee (the defendant) at Rawalpindi, and the amount of freight at the incorrect rate was duly paid by him. On the mistake being discovered, the difference between the rate charged and what ought to have been paid was demanded from the defendant, whose refusal to pay the amount led to the institution of the present suit to recover it. On the face of the receipt-note appeared the words: "For conditions of "contract, see back," and on the back of the note, among other conditions, appeared the following: "Note.—It must be "distinctly understood that the State Railway "department claims the right to correct any "charge made on goods that may be under-"charged in the Railway receipt * * * *. "The amount of cash entered is only an "estimate and is subject to revision." It was found as a fact that the defendant was ignorant of the rights reserved by the above condition to the Railway, nor did he sign the receipt-note.

Held, that the defendant was liable to pay to the Railway the extra freight claimed, the receipt-note being the contract between the parties, and containing the conditions on which the goods were delivered to and accepted by the Railway for carriage; that the fact that the defendant had not signed the note was immaterial, as it was under the terms of the note that defendant delivered the goods for carriage, and he could not claim exemption from any of those terms on the ground that he omitted to inform himself of them. Seth Bansi Lal Ram Rattan v. *Agent, S. Section 77 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, confers an exemption or privilege on a railway administration, and should be strictly limited in its operation to cases clearly falling within its terms.

Held, therefore, that a negligent misdelivery of goods by a Railway Company to a person other than the owner is not such a "loss" of the said goods, within the meaning of the said section as would bar a suit by the owner, instituted more than six months thereafter, for damages for breach of contract to carry the goods and deliver them to him at destination, because a claim for compensation was Plaintiff at Colaba took train for Delhi, handing seven packages to the Railway officials and obtaining a receipt for them. On arrival at Delhi only six packages were forthcoming. Thereupon he did not "forthwith" send a written statement of the descriptions and contents of the missing package to the District Traffic Superintendent of Colaba or Delhi, and so failed to comply with condition 4 of the conditions on back of receipt; but he complied with section 77, Railways Act, in that he complained in writing to the "railway administration" within 6 months of his taking train at Colaba.

Held that he was not barred from claiming compensation by anything contained in said condition 4. That condition is a bye-law; and bye-laws can be framed only under section 54 (1) of the Act, which only authorizes the framing of rules consistent with the Act, with respect to the "receiving, forwarding or delivery" of articles. Condition 4 is not consistent with section 77 aforesaid, and it deals with a matter not intended to be dealt with by bye-laws under section 54 (1). RECEIVER—contd.

Held, that the appointment of a Receiver is a matter of discretion to be governed by all the circumstances of each particular case, one of these being the probability of the plaintiff being ultimately entitled to a decree, that a case of necessity for such appointment for the realization, preservation, better custody or management of the property the subject of suit has to be established before the Court can exercise its powers under section 503, Civil Procedure Code, and that no such order should be given unless strong grounds are made out.

B. L., a Brahman of Lahore, possessed of considerable landed property, died childless in July 1897, leaving two widows, who applied for mutation of names before the Revenue authorities in favour of both through defendant No. 2, as their agent, to whom they gave a joint power-of-attorney to manage the whole property on their behalf. Mutation of names took place in favour of both. They also through their agent (defendant No. 2) applied for and obtained from the District Judge of Lahore a certificate for collection of debts of the deceased as his heirs. Subsequently the younger widow and defendant No. 2 fell out, and the former gave notice cancelling her power-of-attorney in the latter's favour, who retorted by denying her title altogether and setting up the sole right of the elder widow under an oral will of the deceased B. L. asserting that the deceased had thereby made the elder widow his sole heir and charged her with the duty of building a temple with the income of the property, while he disinherited her, and assigned her only Rs. 100 a month as maintenance with right of residence in the family house. The younger widow sued the elder widow and their agent for her share of her husband's estate, and during the pendency of the suit applied for the appointment of a Receiver.

Held, that as by custom and Hindu Law both the widows of B. L. were entitled to a life interest in his estate, and plaintiff's right had been admitted, and she had been allowed to succeed, the defendants had at the outset a very difficult task to establish the alleged oral will they subsequently set up and as defendants had not rebutted the strong prima facie title of the plaintiff in the inquiry held on the application, and were actually spending her share of the income without her consent, the order for the appointment of a Receiver was justified and must be upheld.

Held also, that where a Court after hearing both sides has decided that a Receiver should be appointed, such order is appealable under sections 588 (24), Civil Procedure Code, even though, owing to the refusal of the Court's nominee, no one has actually been appointed to the office.

9. Receiver—Appointment of receiver—Suit by a reversioner against a tenant for life—Mismanagement and waste—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 503.

Held, that the appointment of a receiver is not a matter of course, but a matter of discretion, which must be reasonable and should be exercised with the greatest care and caution on a view of the whole circumstances of the case connected with the right which is asserted and has to be established and not merely the circumstances which might make the appointment expedient for the protection of the property.

Held, on the authorities cited, that an appeal lies from an order refusing to appoint a receiver under Civil Procedure Code, 1908, Order XL, Rule 1.

Held, also, that the exercise of the jurisdiction to appoint a receiver is not a matter ex debito justitiæ, and it is for the Court, to which the application is made, to decide in its discretion, whether or not it will act upon the application, and the Appellate Court should not interfere with the opinion of the first Court unless it finds such opinion to be either arbitrary, vague or fanciful.

Held further, that a receiver should not be appointed when the application is based not upon any specific allegation of misconduct, but upon a mere apprehension that the defendant, though he has done nothing in the past, will after the institution of the suit, forthwith proceed to waste the property, and that the principle is applicable also to the case where one of three Hindu brothers seeks gaged to him by the defendant for Rs. 99, the deed of mortgage alleging that Rs. 40 was an old debt due from defendant to plaintiff and the balance was a further advance or loan. The defendant admitted the deed, and the debt of Rs. 40, but denied receipt of the further loan. The deed was not registered, defendant alleging that he refused to register as the balance of the consideration had not been paid to him, and the plaintiff alleging that the non-registration was owing to the parties having reached the office of the Registrar when the office was closed for the day, and the defendant having failed to attend again to register the deed. The Assistant Commissioner, considering it doubtful whether defendant have received the full consideration for the mortgage, dismissed plaintiff's suit for possession of the land, recording that " he was at liberty to sue for such money as was still due to him from defendant." Plaintiff sued in the Small Cause Court for Rs. 99, and that Court dismissed his claim as res judicata, holding that the judgment of the Assistant Commissioner had determined the question of defendant's liability to the plaintiff. The plaintiff appealed to the Additional Commissioner from the Assistant Commissioner's judgment, and his appeal was rejected on the ground that the Court could not give him possession of the land under the deed as the parties had intended that the deed should be registered, and not being registered, it did not create a valid mortgage; but the Court stated that " plaintiff should be left to recover the amount which might be due to him as a simple debt." On special appeal to the Chief Court, it was held that though the Small Cause Court was mistaken in dismissing plaintiff's claim, it had not over-stepped its jurisdiction or unduly restricted it so as to enable the Chief Court to interfere with its proceeding ; but that the case must be remanded to the Lower Appellate Court to dispose of the question whether there was consideration for the deed. Defendant, in consideration of a loan of Rs. 165, promised the plaintiff to mortgage his land to the plaintiff on the death of defendant's father, and not to sell or mortgage the land to any one else until the debt was paid. The agreement was in writing but not registered. Held, that the agreement was valid so far as the defendant promised to mortgage the land on his father's death, but, from want of registration, was invalid as to the promise not to mortgage or sell to any other than the plaintiff until the debt was paid. Defendant No. 1 in 1865 mortgaged his property to plaintiff (the deed not being registered), and afterwards, in 1872, sold a portion of the property to defendant No. 2. The deed of sale was duly registered. Held, that under sections 50 and 100 of Act XX of 1866, plaintiff ought to have registered his deed of mortgage within one year after the Act came into operation ; and as this was not done, the registered sale was free from any lien or incumbrance effected by the prior mortgage. 3. Offence against Registration Act.

Saudagur sold a piece of land to Gunga Ram for Rs. 215, but to defeat the claims of pre-emptors entered in the deed of conveyance that the purchase money was Rs. 400. The deed was taken before the Sub-Registrar for registration under Act XX of 1866, when Saudagur at first stated that Rs. 400 had been paid; but upon being questioned by the Sub-Registrar, he admitted that he had received only Rs. 215. The Sub-Registrar then questioned Gunga Ram, who said—" I have committed a fault and will now pay : I confess." Gunga Ram afterwards on the same day brought the rest of the money to the Sub-Registrar, who refused to receive it or to register the deed. Held, that Saudagur had committed an offence within section 91 of Act XX of 1866, viz. that he had made a false statement before an officer acting in execution of that Act ; but that Gunga Ram had not committed an offence under that Act, neither had he abetted the offence committed by Saudagur. But held, that Gunga Ram had committed an offence within section 423, Indian Penal Code ; and the Chief Court altered his conviction under Act XX of 1866, to one under section 423, Indian Penal Code. Sections 18, 19.

And section 49—Lease for one year certain with option of renewal—Lease of above character when compulsorily registrable—Admissibility of unregistered lease of house to support claim in respect of movable property—Indivisible transaction.

A lease for one year certain containing a provision for the possible extension of the term beyond one year depending upon the option of the landlord or upon something being done before the term can be extended, must be construed as a lease for one year only, of which registration is optional ; but if the term is extensible at the option of the tenant, the lease is not limited to one year, and requires registration.

In a suit based upon a lease of a house, which vested in the lessee a right to continue tenant for a longer period than one year independently of the will or permission of the landlord, and where nothing remained to be done by the tenant to give effect to the lease, no fresh document or title being required, nor any notice having to be given, but where the defendant had simply to hold on under the same document and title from year to year, held, that the document in question conferred an interest for a longer period than one year, and required registration under section 17 of the Registration Act of 1871, and being unregistered could not, under section 49 of the Act, be received as evidence of any transaction affecting the property comprised therein.

It was contended in the above case that if the lease was inadmissible for want of registration, it was only so quoad the immovable property, and that it could be received to prove that part of the claim which related to compensation in respect of the movable property, viz., the furniture contained in the house.

Held, that the lease was inadmissible for all purposes, the document being in its terms indivisible and disclosing one transaction only, that of hiring a house, there being no hiring of the furniture apart from the house ; and this being so, the lease for want of registration could not be received as evidence of the contract to maintain the furniture in good condition, on which the claim for compensation was based. REGISTRATION ACT (VIII OF 1871)—contd.

Section 28.

And sections 49, 60—Admissibility in evidence of document registered in wrong district—Parties acting without fraud and in good faith—Estoppel of party pleading his own mistake.

A registration made in good faith should not be treated as invalid merely by reason of the terms of the Registration Act, even in some substantial respects, not having been complied with.

In a suit for the sum alleged to be due from the defendant to the plaintiff for rent of a house, the plaintiff in support of his claim produced an agreement in writing duly executed and registered at the Panipat tahsil. It was contended by the defendant that the registration of the said agreement having been effected at Panipat, while the house was situate at Karnal which is not within the sub-district of Panipat, was null and void so as to make the document inadmissible in evidence under section 49 of Act VIII of 1871. It was not shown that either the parties to the instrument in presenting it for registration at Panipat, or the Sub-Registrar of Panipat in registering it in his office, had any fraudulent object in view or acted otherwise than in good faith.

Held, that the registration of the agreement on which the plaintiff sued was not null and void merely by reason that it was effected in contravention of the provisions of section 28, Act VIII of 1871, and that the agreement was a registered document within the meaning of section 49 of the Act, and, further, that the defendant not being a stranger to the deed, the objection as to the nullity of the registration was not one which could properly come from him, and it would be in the highest degree unjust to allow him to take advantage of the error of his father who registered the deed at Panipat for the purpose of depriving the plaintiff of his just rights. 3. Section 49—Mortgage of land with right to half produce or crops—Want of registration—Admissibility of deed to support claim to produce—Power of Appellate Court to reject a deed wrongly admitted in evideuce by first Court.

Defendant mortgaged to plaintiff by two written deeds two plots of land, with the right to half the produce thereof. The deeds were for sums over Rs. 100, and were not registered. In a suit brought by plaintiff to recover the value of his share of the produce from defendant for kharif, Sambat 1932, the Court of first instance admitted the deeds in evidence and decreed the claim, but this decree was reversed by the Judicial Assistant on appeal, on the ground that the deeds were inadmissible in evidence for want of registration.

Held, by the Chief Court—1st, that the Judicial Assistant was competent to reject the deeds on the ground that they were inadmissible in evidence, notwithstanding their admission by the Court of first instance; 2nd that as the deeds did not give a right to a share in the growing crops independently of an interest in the land, but as accessory to the interest in it, which the mortgage created, their registration was compulsory, and not having been registered, they were inadmissible in evidence under section 49, Act VIII of 1871, 3rd, that as plaintiff could not prove his right to the money claimed without resorting to the mortgage transaction in order to prove his title to the crops, which he could not do under section 49, Act VIII of 1871, the deeds were inadmissible to prove the title to the crops notwithstanding that crops are movable property within the meaning of the Registration Act. N. D. A. G. and A. L. were occupancy tenants of certain land on which they planted a fruit garden. On 30th January 1893 they mortgaged by a registered deed to the plaintiffs-appellants their right in the land and garden on the condition that possession was to remain with the mortgagors, but the mortgagees would have the right of selling the fruit, and that the former would not be competent to sell except through the agency of the latter, who, after deducting their arat and dallali charges out of the sale-proceeds, were to recover the interest due to them as well as any instalment that might be payable at the time, and hand over the residue to the mortgagors for expenses of maintaining the gardens, and that if the mortgagors should sell the fruit themselves or evade or neglect to sell through the mortgagees, the latter would be entitled to take possession of the land and the garden. For one year, N. D., one of the mortgagors, was allowed to sell the fruit in retail, mortgagees realizing their dues from the sale proceeds, and in another he was permitted to retain the entire proceeds for expenses of garden. On 5th September 1896 N. D. sold without the permission of the other mortgagors the orange crop of that year to K. and S. D. for Rs. 680 by an unregistered deed, with a stipulation that if the sahukars and his co-sharers made any claim or sought ejectment he was to indemnify the purchasers. On 6th of December 1896 the mortgagee appellants sued the mortgagors as well as the purchasers for possession of the land and garden, including the fruit. The first Court gave them a decree for the possession of the land and garden, and Rs. 875, the value of the fruit. The purchasers of the fruit only appealed to the Divisional Judge, who accepted their appeal. On further appeal by the mortgagees to the Chief Court on the grounds that their lien extended to the fruit on the trees in the garden, and that the purchasers were accountable to them for the fruit removed by them and that their deed, which was registered, had priority over the deed of sale, which was unregistered. Held, that plaintiff's deed, although registered, did not give them any priority over the " unregistered deed " of the purchasers of the fruit, as by section 3 of the Registration Act, fruit on trees is defined to be movable property. Held, also, that the mortgagors (although they might have only occupancy rights) could not plead the invalidity of their own acts, whatever the rights of their landlords might be. Held, further, that the plaintiffs' lien extended to the fruit even if the fruit could be treated as movable property, but that the right to the fruit was clearly a right in immovable property, as future fruit crops and fruit on trees must be held to be such under the General Clauses Act, X of 1897, section 3, clause 25, though they are movable property for the purposes of the Registration Act, and that K. and S. D.'s purchase was subject to plaintiffs' lien whether they had notice or not, though as a fact it was proved that they had notice of the plaintiff's mortgage. In a suit for redemption of mortgage in which the defendant pleaded a sale of the mortgaged property, the lower appellate Court held that the sale could not be proved as the terms of the contract had been reduced to the form of a document, and that as this required registration, but was neither registered nor stamped, it was inadmissible in evidence and other evidence of the contract was excluded by section 91 of the Evidence

Act. The document in question was an entry in the plaintiff's diary consisting of two parts, the first of which was merely a memo. by the creditor of the particulars of the transaction between the parties, while the second part was as follows:—

"I. H. M., have sold the house of my own free will to K. C. for Rs. 273, dated Jeth Sudi 1st, 1927."

Held, that the above entry could not be regarded as an instrument declaring any title to or in immovable property within the meaning of section 17 of the Registration Act, the transaction being already complete, and the entry in question being evidently merely intended as an acknowledgment of the correctness of the facts stated in the memo. and not being an acknowledgment of the receipt or payment of the consideration, did not require registration. Such an acknowledgment was a mere admission in writing, which might be contradicted by other evidence, as it could not properly be said that the terms of the contract had been reduced to the form of a document, so as to exclude other evidence. 3. Instrument of exchange of immovable property—Registration compulsory or optional.

A document began by reciting that the parties, after tazdik of the patwari and munsarim had exchanged certain specified plots of land, of which they were respectively the owners, the one party with the other, and had each taken possession; and that if either party should retire from the agreement, then the sum of Rs. 50 would be payable by such party to the other as damages, and each would re-enter upon his own original land.

Held, that the above document was not one the registration of which was compulsory under section 17, Indian Registration Act, 1877. The first portion of the document was nothing more than a recital of what had already taken place; and the operative part merely provided for the payment of a penalty by either party, who prevented the arrangement being fully and finally carried into effect, and for the result of either party going back from the agreement, viz., that each would revert to his original rights. > Whereas we own the occupancy rights in 17 ghumaos 2 kanals, 1 marla of land, which are already mortgaged for Rs. 400 to N. and P., we have now taken a further sum of Rs. 99-8-0 and have absolutely sold the said occupancy rights.

5. Certificate of sale—Admissible in evidence without registration—Right to sue—Omission by auction-purchaser to obtain delivery of immovable property under section 318, Civil Procedure Code.

A certificate of sale granted in December 1880, under section 316, Civil Procedure Code, to a purchaser of immovable property at an execution sale, but not registered, held to be admissible in evidence, when tendered in 1891, under clause (o) added to section 17 of the Registration Act, 1877, by Act VII of 1888, by virtue of the provision in section 65 of the amending Act.

Held, further, that an auction-purchaser (not a party to the original suit) who has taken no action under section 318, Civil Procedure Code, to recover possession of the property sold to him from the judgment-debtor, is not thereby debarred from maintaining a regular suit for po session of the property, as the two remedies are concurrent.

Plaintiff sued on the allegations that the lands in suit were owned originally by defendant and certain other lands were owned originally by plaintiff; that by an agreement in writing, dated 7th March 1892, an exchange of the lands was made between the parties and possession was given accordingly; that the exchange could, by the agreement and on payment of a certain sum, be repudiated within, but not after, one week, and that after plaintiff had cultivated the lands, defendant had wrongfully ejected him. The defendant pleaded that the agreement was ambiguous and unenforceable; that the document required registration; that plaintiff had himself repudiated the agreement within the week, and that possession had not been given of the land now sued for. The suit was dismissed by the first Court on the grounds that it had not been proved that the contract had been completed and each party put in possession of the exchanged lands, and that the written agreement was ambiguous and required registration. On appeal the Divisional Judge reversed the order of the lower Court, holding that the contract of exchange having been completed orally, the written agreement was merely a memorandum of what had taken place with an agreement for payment of money as a penalty under certain conditions; that registration thereof was not necessary, and that it was, therefore, admissible in evidence to show the exact plots of land which formed the subject of exchange. The Divisional Court also held that possession has given under the exchange; that the exchange was a completed transaction, and the plaintiff did not repudiate it. Defendant appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, on consideration of the document as a whole, that it was not intended by the parties to be merely a recital of a completed exchange with an agreement for payment of money as a penalty, but was intended to be the instrument superseding and embodying the oral bargain which necessarily precedes every such contract, and, therefore, required registration and, being unregistered, was not admissible in evidence.

Held, further, on the evidence, that plaintiff not having proved peaceable possession as owner of the lands in suit lawfully derived from defendant as prior owner, the doctrine laid down in No. 102, P. R. 1876, did not apply so as to give plaintiff a decree apart from the instrument of exchange.

7. Deed of sale of right of pre-emption—Registration—admissibility in evidence of unregistered deed—"Right to or in immovable property—" Registration Act (III of 1877), section 17.

Plaintiff having sued for pre-emption in respect of certain land, defendant D. N. relied upon a certain deed which, after reciting a sale of the land by one M. to S. R., and that plaintiff was nephew of M. and a sharer in the khata sold, and as such, entitled to a right of pre-emption, stated that plaintiff had sold his said right of pre-emption to D. N. for Rs. 40, and would have no further concern with the right sold, but that the purchaser (D. N.) would be entitled to take himself, he also being already a malik in the patti in which the land has been sold. It was contended, inter alia, on behalf of plaintiff, that the deed purported to extinguish a right to or in, immovable property within the meaning of section 17 of the Registration Act, 1877, and therefore, being unregistered, was inadmissible in evidence.

Held, that the subjection of village land to rights of pre-emption is a burden on the lands in the hands of every holder of the land, and restricts his freedom of transfer, but from this burden no right or interest in the land so subject arises in any other person, and that, therefore, the document in question did not need registration and was admissible in evidence.

or in future, any right, title or interest to or in immoveable property "—Registration Act, 1877, section 17.

Plaintiff sued for a declaration of proprietary title to a one-sixth share of certain land and based his claim on a document, executed by defendants on the 23rd January 1886, wherein it was stated that defendants had put plaintiff in possession of 500 bighas of land which he was to bring under cultivation and in which he was to sink certain wells. The document further declared that when plaintiff had cleared the ground he would be proprietor of a one-sixth share of it. Plaintiff alleged that he had performed his part of the contract and had spent Rs. 3,000 in breaking up the waste. The defendants pleaded, inter alia, that the document relied on by plaintiff required registration, and being unregistered, could not affect the property in suit, the value of which exceeded Rs. 100.

Held (Plowden, J. dissenting), that inasmuch as it did not convey to plaintiff a one-sixth share of the estate but merely gave him a right to demand a conveyance thereof at a future time if he could show that he had fulfilled the conditions agreed upon, the document relied upon by plaintiff did not require registration under section 17 of the Registration Act, 1877, and was admissible in evidence.

Section 17 of the Registration Act must be strictly construed, and " the right, title or interest " contemplated by thats ection, whether in its nature present or future, vested or contingent, must be created at once by the document, and a document which merely entitles a person to a right to come into existence in future is not within the section. Plaintiff was the assignee of the representative of the original mortgagor, who sued, in June 1883, to redeem a certain mortgage, which suit resulted in a compromise, assented to by the parties to the suit, to the effect that the then plaintiff in consideration of Rs. 90 paid by defendants, gave up a certain portion of the land, and that the rest should remain under mortgage with defendants for Rs. 210. This compromise was brought to the notice of the Court by a written petition on which a Court fee stamp of 8 annas was affixed, and which, after reciting the terms of the compromise, prayed the Court to decide the case in accordance therewith. The petition was signed by both parties, but was not attested by witnesses. The Court thereupon recorded the statements of the parties in vernacular, set out the abstract of the compromise in English, and ordered the dismissal of the suit under section 375, Civil Procedure Code.

Plaintiff subsequently sued on the strength of this arrangement and tendered the Rs. 210. Defendants contended (inter alia) that the suit failed because the plaintiff was unable to prove the said arrangement, the terms of the compromise having been reduced to writing and being unregistered, although registration was compulsory under section 17 of the Registration Act.

Held that the petition of June 1883 if an " instrument " at all (which was doubtful) did not purport or operate of itself to create or declare any interest in the property, but was, in its plain terms, nothing more than an application in a pending suit setting out a compromise orally arranged by the parties, and asking the Court to decide the case in accordance therewith, and that the acceptance of the arrangement in no way altered the character of the document, or rendered it an instrument or deed of compromise requiring to be registered under section 17 of the Registration Act. 10. Document embodying terms of contract—Document inadmissible in evidence—Prior oral contract, proof of.

On the 28th December 1894 B. S. executed a deed by the terms of which he sold a plot of land to G. S. for Rs. 200, and on 21st May 1895 G. S. sued B. S. for possession of the said land, or such other relief as the Court might think fit, the plaint being based on the sale-deed, which was unregistered. The first Court dismissed the suit, on the ground that the sale-deed being unregistered could not be received in evidence or affect the property, but the Divisional Judge held, on appeal, that as plaintiff had merely brought in his sale deed incidentally, and had sued on his oral contract, he was entitled to prove it and subsequent possession.

Held, that the suit should be dismissed. A formal sale-deed having been drawn up which was obviously intended to supersede the oral bargain and to evidence the contract between the parties, the deed was the only proof of the sale and a prior oral contract could not be proved.

1. Petition to Court to recognize arrangement in satisfaction of decree—Document not creating, declaring, or assigning any right in immovable property—Sanction of Court necessary before arrangement could take effect.

Plaintiff obtained a decree against defendant on account of certain instalments due on a bond executed by the defendant. While this decree was in course of execution defendant presented a petition to the Court executing the decree, setting forth the amount due on the decree with interest, and that for the total amount thus arrived at the petitioner agreed that the plaintiff should receive certain specified half-yearly instalments from his jagir income to be paid to the plaintiff from the Tahsildar's office for a specified period; wherefore he applied that the said instalments might be paid half-yearly from the tahsil, and that the adjustment of the plaintiff's claim being approved, the necessary orders should be issued to the Tahsildar, adding that, until the plaintiff's claim was satisfied, the petitioner should have no claim on any grounds to receive the money either from the zamindars or from the Government. The petitioner's seal was attached to the petition, which was also signed by the decree-holder for the purpose of showing his assent to the terms set forth. The Court therefore recorded an order, stating the terms of the agreement as acknowledged by the judgment-debtor in person, an addition being made that the village should be hypothecated as security for the debt due to the decree-holder, adding that the decree-holder's consent was conditional on the money being paid to him from the tahsil, and directing that the instalments agreed to by the parties being approved, the case should be filed, and a proceeding be sent to the Revenue Officer asking that payment might be made through the Tahsildar, after deducting the fixed charges for collection.

In a suit brought upon the above agreement for the instalments stipulated for in the agreement which remained unpaid, held, that the petition did not require registration under section 17 (b) of the Registration Act, its real purport being to inform the Court that the parties had come to an arrangement providing for the satisfaction of the decree and of other claims existing between them, which, so far as it related to the decree, could only take effect on being approved by the Court, the Court being asked to approve of the arrangement, and to give effect to it by communicating it to the Revenue authorities; that as the petition showed that the arrangement was only to take effect on being approved by the Court, it could not be held to have created, declared or assigned any right, for the right only became complete on the Court's approval being subsequently given to terms in part set forth in the petition, and in part stated by the parties in Court. 3. Document, construction of—"Instrument operating to declare right to immovable property"—Document addressed to Court embodying terms of contract and compromising suit—Admissibility of such document as evidence of oral contract—Registration Act (III of 1877), section 17, clause (b).

Plaintiffs obtained a decree against defendant, and proceeded to execute it. An order in execution having been passed, defendant appealed to the Chief Court, and the case was remanded. On the remand the parties came to a compromise, the defendant orally agreeing to settle plaintiff's claim by a sale and a mortgage of certain portions of the land claimed. Thereupon a document, signed by the parties and duly witnessed, in which the terms of the contracts were fully set forth, was addressed to the Court which was to hear the case on remand, informing it that the parties had compromised matters in the manner stated and that the appellant (defendant) withdrew from his appeal. The plaintiffs now sued on the allegations that defendant had given them possession, but had subsequently ousted them, and they claimed possession in accordance with the oral contracts of sale and mortgage, and adduced the document as evidence of such contracts. The defendant pleaded that the document was an "instrument purporting or operating to create, declare, assign, limit or extinguish rights in immovable property within the meaning of section 17, clause (b) of the Registration Act; that as such it ought to have been registered, and that, not being so registered, it could not be received in evidence.

Held, that the word "declare" in section 17, clause (b) of the Registration Act is equivalent to define "or authoritatively set forth," and that the document, on its proper construction, was rather an historical recital of a fact which had already occurred, and which had in itself brought the right into existence than "an instrument purporting or operating "to declare rights in immovable property" within the meaning of the said section, and was admissible in evidence although not registered. parties which was embodied in an application filed in Court under which the equity of redemption of the two disputed houses which had been attached were hypothecated for Rs. 325, being the amount due on account of the decree including costs, four months' time being given for payment. Execution proceedings were then struck off in pursuance of the settlement. In a suit brought upon the above agreement for the recovery of the Rs. 325 by sale of the equity of redemption of the two houses, held, that the petition did not require registration under section 17 (b) of the Registration Act, and was admissible in evidence, its real purport being to inform the Court that the parties had come to an arrangement providing for the satisfaction of the decree, and could not properly be treated as the original contract between the parties, but must be held to be a mere recital of the contract independently entered into between them. 5. Registration Act, 1877, section 17 (b)—Unregistered compromise declaring right to immovable property addressed to Court and judicially acted upon—Admissibility of, in evidence.

A compromise affecting immovable property over Rs 100 in value, signed by the parties attested by witnesses and stamped with an eight-anna Court-fee and addressed to the Court setting forth the names of the parties and the nature of the claim, was filed in Court. The Court thereupon examined the parties, who repeated in full detail all that was set forth in the document, concluded by expressly requesting it to dismiss the suit in accordance with the terms of the document. The Court accordingly wrote an order reciting the said terms and dismissed the suit as prayed.

Held, that the document did not require registration under section 17 (b) of the Registration Act and was admissible in evidence, because (a) it was a mere application to the Court informing it of the terms of the agreement entered into by the parties out of Court, and as such neither created nor declared rights so as to require registration, and (b) it was submitted to and acted upon judicially by the Court and was in itself a step of judicial procedure not requiring registration.

Plaintiffs' suit was based upon an agreement in writing, which was unregistered, to the following effect: It distinctly declared that certain persons (the plaintiffs) were sharers in a decree for half of a certain well, decreed by the Extra Assistant Commissioner to the writers of the deed as pre-emptors, for which half share the plaintiffs had paid to them the sum of Rs. 850. It then explained why the said plaintiffs were not parties to the plaint in the suit, and that cross-appeals were pending by the plaintiffs and defendants in that suit in the Commissioner's Court, and then provided that "it is agreed that when "the appeals shall have been decided, whatever share we (the writers) get, we will "have a registered conveyance duly prepared "and cause mutation of names to be made "in favour of the persons named."

Held, by Plowden and Elsmie JJ. (Smyth, J. dissenting), that the registration of the above document was compulsory under section 17 of the Registration Act, and that plaintiffs' suit must fail.

Per Plowden J.—The document did not fall under clause (h) of section 17 of the Registration Act, as though it clearly created a right to obtain another document which would, when executed, declare or assign a right, title or interest of the kind described in clause (h), it did not merely create such a right, but did also in itself declare or purport to declare that the promisee were jointly and equally interested with the promisors in the decree which gave to the promisor a title to half the well named in the deed on payment of Rs. 1,700.

Per Elsmie, J.—The document fell within clause (c), section 17 of the Registration Act, in that the receipt of consideration on account of declaration of a title or interest in immovable property of the value of Rs. 100 and upwards was expressly acknowledged.

Per Smyth, J.—The document did not of itself create or declare a right in immovable property, and its effect was merely to create a right on the part of the plaintiffs to obtain another document, viz., a deed of conveyance, which when executed would create a right in immovable property, and therefore fell within clause (h) of section 17 of the Registration Act, and did not require to be registered. registration—Suit for specific performance of mortgage—Limitation Act, section 5—Admission of appeal beyond time—Sufficient cause—Appeal filed in wrong Court.

A executed the following document in favour of B :—"I agree and do hereby write "that I have now mortgaged a plot of land "(described) to B. and I agree to the conditions to be entered in a deed of mortgage. "I have mortgaged the said land for Rs. "5,000 ; out of the above sum, I have received Rs. 1,000 as earnest money. I will "receive payment of the balance, Rs. 4,000, "at the time of registration of the deed of "mortgage." Then followed conditions as to interest, the manner in which the debt was to be liquidated, &c., &c., the final clause being to the following effect :—"I will "have registration of the deed of mortgage "effected in favour of the mortgagee within "fifteen days. If I do not effect the registration, or if I refuse to do so, then I will "pay Rs. 1,000, the sum received, and "Rs. 1,000 on account of damages. I also "hereby agree to effect mutation of names. "If I evade giving possession, or refuse "mutation, I shall be liable for the damages stated above."

A refused to execute the mortgage-deed as promised. B sued for specific performance of the agreement, and prayed that A be compelled to execute and register a deed of mortgage on the conditions stated in the agreement. A pleaded that the agreement required registration, and not having been registered was inadmissible in evidence, and as the contents of the document could not be legally proved by other evidence, the suit should be dismissed.

Held by the Full Bench (1) that the words "I have now mortgaged" should be taken merely as a recital that a mortgage had already been made or agreed upon, and that they could not be taken as meaning "I now mortgage by virtue of this deed" ; (11) that the document did not itself create or assign an interest in immovable property. The right created by the deed was merely the right to compel the executant to execute another document, and the deed therefore fell under clause (h), section 17 of the Registration Act, and consequently its registration was not compulsory.

Held, by the Division Bench that the presentation of an appeal within the period of limitation prescribed therefor to a wrong Court in ignorance of the provisions of law may be a sufficient cause within the meaning of section 5, Limitation Act, for admitting the same appeal in the proper Court after the period of limitation prescribed therefor has expired.

A. declined to execute the conveyance and sold the property to C. and D. B. sued to establish the sale and to obtain possession, C. and D. contended inter alia that the receipt contained the terms of the contract in writing—that it was inadmissible in evidence for want of registration, and that oral evidence could therefore not be received to prove the transaction. The District Judge held that the receipt was not intended to constitute the contract, and that it was intended simply as a receipt. He decided that oral evidence was admissible as to the terms of the contract, and finding the sale proved decreed the claim. The Divisional Judge dismissed the claim, agreeing in the defendant's contention.

Held, by the Full Bench that the terms of the contract could not be considered to have been reduced to writing in the receipt, and that oral evidence was admissible to prove the terms of the contract. SANGAM LAL v. MUSSAMMAT SIKANDAR JEHAN BEGAM.

Held, that the mere recital of an annual rate of rent in a lease, determinable at any time at the will of the landlord, does not constitute it "a lease reserving a yearly rent" within the meaning of clause (d) of section 17 of the Registration Act, 1877, and render it compulsorily registrable as such. Section 17 (d)—concld.

The agent of a guardian purporting, though without authority, to act as the agent of the minor's guardian made a lease of certain land belonging to the minor. The minor when he came of age sued to recover possession of the land. Held, that the minor was entitled to recover possession of the land without paying compensation for a house which had been built in accordance with the terms of the lease (the materials of which the lessee was allowed to remove) as the lessee had not proved the authority of the agent or that the act was beneficial to the minor's interest.

Held, also, that a lease by which the landlord reserves to himself the right to take possession at any time he chooses, although a yearly rent has been agreed to be paid, is not a lease for a period exceeding one year within section 17, clause (d) of the Registration Act. 1. Suit for money decree—Admisibility in evidence of unregistered mortgage-deed for Rs. 500.

In a suit for a money decree on an unregistered bond which recorded a single and indivisible transaction of mortgage for Rs. 500, held, that the unregistered deed was inadmissible as evidence when it became necessary to prove the transaction. THAKUR DAS v. FATTEH KHAN.

2. Admissibility in evidence of unregistered mortgage-deed to prove acknowledgment of debt—Divisible nature of transaction.

An unregistered mortgage-deed, the registration of which was compulsory under section 17 of the Registration Act, 1877, but which was in its nature divisible, the first part containing a complete acknowledgment of an existing debt, held, in a suit to recover the original money-debt which was the consideration for the mortgage, to be admissible as evidence of such acknowledgment though inadmissible as evidence of any transaction affecting the immovable property. SYAD MUHAMMAD KHAN v. JAISUKH. 88 P R 1880

3. Admissibility in evidence of unregistered mortgage to prove mortgage-debt.

In a suit for the money alleged to be due on an unregistered mortgage-deed for

Rs. 400, where it appeared that the transaction was one of mortgage only, and that there was no admission of a debt or promise to pay a debt which could be divided from the mortgage and which would remain if everything relating to the mortgage were struck out of the deed, held, that the deed was inadmissible as evidence for any purpose. JAISUKH v. SYAD MUHAMMAD KHAN.

4. Suit on unregistered mortgage-deed—Admissibility of deed as evidence of acknowledgment of liability—Indivisible transaction—Merger of old liability in new contract.

Plaintiff sued for the money due on an unregistered mortgage deed, in which defendant recited that he owed plaintiff Rs. 199-8-0 on a balance of account, as security for which he mortgaged his land, stipulating for the payment of interest, &c. It was contended for the plaintiff that the mortgage-deed, though unregistered and inadmissible in evidence to affect the land mortgaged, could be accepted as an acknowledgment of a subsisting liability, so as to prevent a suit for the original debt being barred by limitation.

Held, that as plaintiff had not sued on the old accounts, and offered the bond as proof of an acknowledgment, but had sued to enforce the bond, the suit must fail, as there was no contract or agreement in the bond sued upon which could be separated from the mortgage.

Quære, whether, if plaintiff had sued on the old account, defendant could not have pleaded that the old liability had been determined, and merged in a new contract? Syad Muhammad Khan v. Jaisukh (No. 88 *P. 5. Bond hypothecating immovable property—Divisible transaction—Admissibility of the instrument as evidence of defendant's personal liability.

In a suit on a bond, which also hypothecated immovable property over Rs. 100 in value, where it appeared that the document in question evidenced a single but not indivisible transaction, namely of a loan, and of a pledge to secure the loan, there being a distinct formal undertaking by the defendant to repay the money lent, and the portions of the document relating to the pledge being capable of being struck out or treated as non-existent without impairing the remaining portion containing the personal undertaking of the defendant, held that, though as regards the pledge, the document not being registered was by reason of section 49 of the Registration Act inoperative and inadmissible to prove the pledge, it was admissible to prove a transaction affecting the defendant's personal liability. Syad Muhammad Khan v. Jaisukh (No. 88 P. R. 1880), followed Thakar Das v. Fatteh Khan (No. 60 P. R. 1880,) Jaisukh v. Syad Muhammad Khan (No. 89 P. R. 1880), and Chuhar v. Wazira (No. 17 P. R. 1881), distinguished. 6. Suit to enforce defendant's personal liability on unregistered mortgage bond—Divisible contract—Admissibility of bond in evidence to prove defendant's personal liability.

In a suit brought in a Small Cause Court to enforce the defendant's personal liability on a bond for Rs. 200, which purported to mortgage certain house property for the debt, but which was unregistered, it appeared from the instrument that after setting forth the mortgage of the property for Rs. 200, it went on to provide that the debt should bear interest at 1 per cent. per month; that Rs. 2 should be paid monthly, the rent being deducted; that if the interest were not paid month by month, the obligor would pay the whole sum at once whenever the mortgagee demanded it, that the mortgagor would redeem the property at the end of 3 years by paying the principal, and that if on the lapse of this term the debt were not discharged, the mortgagee should be at liberty to enforce payment of the debt in whatever manner he thought proper.

Held, that the above contract, in addition to the mortgage of property as security for the loan, made the defendant personally liable for the principal debt, as well as for the payment of interest month by month, and that it was divisible, so that, if the portions relating to the mortgage were struck out, it might still be admitted as evidence of the defendant's personal liability for the debt. Khuddu Mal v. Kunj Lall (No. 80 P R. 1881) followed. 7. Admissibility in evidence of unregistered deed—Acknowledgment—Promise to pay—Proof of liability under unregistered deed by acknowledgment in subsequent deed—Evidence Act (I of 1872), section 91—Admission by defendants rendering question of admissibility of deed unnecessary.

Plaintiffs sued for possession of a house alleged to have been mortgaged to them for Rs. 699 by two deeds, one for Rs. 600 and the other for Rs. 99 both of which were unregistered. Subsequently they put in an amended plaint stating that as they were out of possession, they had sued to get possession, but, in case this could not be given, they asked for a decree for the money. Two of the defendants in their written plea admitted that the Rs. 600 mentioned in the first bond had been borrowed, but the other two defendants put in no plea, and were not asked whether they admitted or denied the plaintiffs' allegation. It appeared that the mortgage-deed for Rs. 600 contained no acknowledgment of a previously existing debt, nor any promise to pay the money, and there was therefore nothing in it which could be admitted as evidence; but it was contended that the debt for Rs. 600 might be proved by an acknowledgment contained in the bond for Rs. 99.

Held, that as the terms of the mortgage were reduced to writing, they could not be proved apart from the mortgage-deed itself, under the provisions of section 91 of the Evidence Act, and as it was not alleged that there was any debt apart from the mortgage transaction, if the debt of Rs. 600 were denied by the defendants it would be out of the power of the plaintiffs to prove it, the mortgage being unregistered.

But held further, that if all the defendants admitted that the Rs. 600 had been borrowed, no issue would arise as to this fact, nor would it be necessary for the plaintiffs to produce any evidence of it, and no question as to the admissibility in evidence of the mortgage-deed for Rs. 600 would arise.

Case remanded that, after examination of the parties proper issues might be framed, and the suit decided according to the result of the determination of the issues. FATTEH SINGH v. MIAN SINGH.

8. Unregistered document, failure of suit based on.

Plaintiff, as superior proprietor of certain land, sued defendant, the inferior proprietor, on a deed of agreement whereby the plaintiff on the one hand agreed to hold himself responsible for the Government revenue, whilst the defendant on the other hand agreed to give plaintiff ⅜ths of the produce for twenty years.

Held, that as the agreement in question, which was in reality a lease, required registration under section 17 of the Registration Act, and was not registered, it could not be admitted in evidence, and therefore on this ground the plaintiff's suit failed. AZAZ v. KALLU.

9. Deed of compromise—Petition to Court—Document declaring right to immovable property over Rs. 100 in value—Inadmissibility of whole document in evidence—Plaint disclosing a cause of action irrespective of the unregistered document.

Plaintiff sued under section 265 of the Contract Act asking for a dissolution of partnership, and the allotment to him of his share in the assets and property of the first and appealing to a document (which was unregistered) as explaining the relative rights of the parties, and the share he was entitled to. It appeared that the plaintiff had previously filed a suit for dissolution, but having come to terms with the defendant, appeared in Court with the document propounded in the present case, which showed that on certain concessions being made, and notably on certain properties alleged in the case to be joint, or firm properties being recognized as defendant's sole property, the partnership business should not be dissolved but go on. This document, though headed with the names of the parties and with the form of claim in the suit, was in itself clearly an agreement between the parties, signed by them and witnessed. On the said document being filed, the Court ordered "that as plaintiff withdrew, the suit should be dismissed."

Held, that the document relied upon in the present suit could not be regarded as a mere petition to the Court conveying information that an agreement had been come to, which agreement was not in the document itself, but existed as an oral agreement apart from, and independently of, it; and that as the document clearly did "declare," that is define or arrange, or settle, some question relating to the title to immovable property, which on the face of the document, though no particular value was set forth, obviously exceeded the limit of Rs. 100 in value, and as it was impossible to separate the parts of the document which required registration from the parts which did not, therefore the whole document was inadmissible for want of registration, and oral evidence could not be taken to supply its place.

But held further that as the prayer in the plaint in the present case (on a reasonable construction of that document) was not absolutely restricted to the enforcement of the particular agreement, but might fairly be taken for a prayer for dissolution and distribution of assets, even though the prayer that such distribution should be in accordance with the (invalid) agreement could not, as such, be acceded to, the Court of first instance should be directed to take up the suit as one for a dissolution, &c., between the parties, and for a distribution of assets, &c., independently of the agreement which had failed, the first point to consider being, whether in fact plaintiff had a new cause of action which entitled him to bring the new suit after the withdrawal of the first, without permission or reservation by the Court, on which point the lower Courts had hitherto expressed no opinion. 10. Deed of compromise—Petition to Court—Deed evidencing waiver of right of pre-emption—Test of value of such right—Inadmissibility in evidence of unregistered deed—Exclusion of oral evidence—Evidence Act (I of 1872), section 91.

In a suit for pre-emption the defendant relied (inter alia) upon an agreement which had been entered into between the parties by way of compromise of a former suit relating to the same property, which, if admissible, was sufficient to prove a voluntary waiver or relinquishment by the plaintiffs of his right to claim pre-emption, but which, though executed on an agreement stamp, and in no sense a petition to the Court, and relating to property worth Rs. 200, was unregistered.

Held, that a right of pre-emption being a right to or in immovable property, and the value of such right in the present case being, according to the true test, the amount the defendant was liable to pay before he could enforce it, viz., Rs. 200, it followed that the agreement relied upon by the defendant being an instrument which purported or operated to extinguish a right of the above value to or in immovable property, required registration under clause (b), section 17 of the Registration Act, and not having been registered it could not be received as evidence of such a transaction with reference to the provisions of section 49 of that Act, while oral evidence of such a transaction was equally excluded under the provisions of section 91 of the Evidence Act.—Malik Karim Baksh v. Mohammad Baksh (No 82. P. R. 1884) cited. MUHAMMAD BAKHSH v. HAYAT KHAN.

11. Letter intimating that plaintiff did not wish to purchase certain land—Abandonment—Extinction of right to immovable property—Compulsory registration—Inadmissibility in evidence.

In a suit for pre-emption, defendant relied on a letter alleged to have been sent to him by the plaintiff admitting that the purchase had been made with the plaintiff's advice and consent, and intimating that he no longer desired to purchase the land sold. This document, if admissible, was sufficient to prove a voluntary waiver or relinquishment by the plaintiff of his right to pre-emption. It was contended for the plaintiff that the document should have been registered being a release and operating to extinguish a right in immovable property and being unregistered was inadmissible in evidence.

Held per Benton, J. (Frizelle, J., dubitante) that the document did not purport or operate to extinguish any right or interest in immovable property. It was only evidence of past conduct, and gave expression to certain future intentions which should give the defendant confidence to complete his purchase. BARKAT ALI v. FAIZ MUHAMMAD.

12. Suit on unregistered agreement—Admissibility of deed as evidence of acknowledgment of personal pecuniary liability—Indivisible transaction.

The purchasers of certain land paid the pre-emptors a certain sum of money in consideration of the latter forbearing to urge their claim The pre-emptors executed a document in which it was provided that, if any of them sued to enforce their rights they should forfeit their share in the money received with half as much again. The pre-emptors notwithstanding this agreement instituted a suit for pre-emption, and obtained a decree. The purchasers then sued to recover the money forfeited as above. The defendants denied execution, and the sole question in the case was whether the document being unregistered was admissiable in evidence to enforce personal liability. Held, that the document could not be received in evidence. In order to succeed, the plaintiffs were bound to prove (a) an obligation not to prosecute the claim for pre-emption; and (b) its breach. The former could not be established without the document, which could not be received in evidence for want of registration, and consequently the suit failed. 13. Document, construction of—Registration Act, 1877, sections 17, 49—Partnership or ownership—Abandonment—Estoppel—Limitation Act, 1877, 2nd Schedule, articles 1 42, 144.

Plaintiffs sued for an account of the income and expenditure of a certain kul (or water-course) jointly excavated by the parties under an agreement in writing, dated 24th February 1873, whereby it was agreed, inter alia, that in consideration of half the outlay in excavating the kul, which originally belonged to defendant and his ancestors, but had fallen into disrepair and become useless, the plaintiff was to become a half-sharer therein, that thenceforth the income and expenditure on the kul was to be shared in the same proportion, and that in the event of a sharer failing to pay the expense of repairs, he was to be debarred from participating in the income of that year. Defendants admitted the agreement and rendition of accounts till 1936 Sambat, but alleged that after that year the kul was stopped, and litigation ensued with the owners of certain villages; that plaintiff refused to contribute towards the expenses and gave up his share; and that defendants had conducted the cases themselves and enjoyed the profits of the kul ever since. The District Judge dismissed the suit on the ground that plaintiff, by refusing to contribute towards the expenses of the said litigation and by his subsequent conduct had abandoned and lost his rights in the kul. This decree was upheld on appeal, by the Divisional Judge, both on the ground that plaintiff, abandoned and lost his said rights, and also that his conduct estopped him from preferring the present claim.

lower Courts, not only on the ground of abandonment and estoppel, but also on the grounds (a) that plaintiff's rights in the kul could not be proved, as the written agreement of 1873 required registration, and being unregistered was inadmissible in evidence; (b) that the suit was practically one for accounts of a partnership, and therefore could not lie without a prayer for dissolution; and (c) that the failure of plaintiff to contribute towards the expenses of repairs debarred him from claiming a share of the produce for any of the years for which accounts were claimed.

Held, that the claim was one relating to profits of immovable property, and that the right, in respect of which the parties were litigating and which formed the basis of the claim, was one regarding such property and that, therefore, the limitation for the possession of a share in the kul would be 12 years, whether under article 142 or article 144 of the Limitation Act.

Found, upon the evidence, that there was no proof of abandonment on the part of plaintiff.

Held, further, that the written agreement of 1873 did not require registration inasmuch as, taken as a whole, it meant nothing more than that the defendant agreed to give plaintiff a half share in the kul, provided that the latter paid a half share of the expenses of excavation, and that such a condition did not create a present right in the kul, but merely one that would come into existence in the event of plaintiff fulfilling the said condition.

Held, also, that even if it were conceded that a present right was created by the instrument, it was only a right in the ruined kul, which had at the time no value at all, and certainly could not be said to have been worth Rs. 100, and that the valuable property which might come to existence if the conditions of the agreement were carried out could not be held to furnish the test of valuation.

Section 17 of the Registration Act must be strictly construed, and unless a document is clearly brought within the purview of the section, it cannot be excluded from evidence, and, in case of doubt, the benefit must be given to the document.

Held, upon the facts of the case, that the claim was one for accounts of a co-ownership in immovable property, and not of a partnership.

Held, finally, that the agreement, rightly construed, only deprived a co-sharer of the income in case he refused to pay his quota of expenses of repairs, etc., and that mere non-payment did not amount to such refusal, though defendant was entitled to deduct the amount of the said expenses from plaintiff's share of the profits. Held, that a document inadmissible for want of registration as evidence of the relinquishment of immovable property, cannot in a suit for possession of the land to which it refers be received in evidence for the collateral purpose of proving an admission of an alleged adoption which to all intents and purposes would be equivalent to an acknowledgment of the adoptees' title to such property, especially where it evidences a single and not an indivisible transaction.

from the defendants, who held possession of the same under a prior, but at the date of the suit, unregistered deed of mortgage, dated 7th October 1879, for Rs. 260. The suit was filed on the 23rd November 1880, and on the 24th December 1880, issues were drawn: but before any evidence was adduced, the defendant mortgagees sued for and obtained a decree directing the mortgagor to cause their deed to be registered, which was accordingly effected on the 13th January 1881. The defendant mortgagees then appeared in Court and claimed to be treated as prior mortgagees in possession under a registered title.

Held, that if the defendants' mortgage-deed was capable of being registered on the 13th January 1881, the effect of section 47 of the Registration Act would be to render it operative as a registered document from the date of its execution.

But held further that, as, under the provisions of section 23—26 of the Act, a document like the deed of the 7th October 1879, which was executed in British India and presented at the registry office fifteen months after execution, was no longer on that date capable of registration; and as it was open to the plaintiff, who was not a party to the suit in which the decree for compulsory registration was passed, to challenge the validity of the registration notwithstanding such decree; and as the registration of a document, which has been presented for the purpose beyond the period allowed by law, is not a defect of such a character as to be cured by the provisions of section 87 of the Act, but is one which affects the authority of the registering officer to register at all, and must, where it exists, be patent on the face of the document, the defendants' deed could not be regarded, in competition with the deed propounded by the plaintiff, as having been duly registered within the meaning of section 49 of the Act.

There being nothing on the record to support a finding that the plaintiff had either actual or constructive notice of a prior mortgage at the time when he caused a registered deed of mortgage to be executed in his favour, and the defendant mortgagor having failed to rebut the presumption of full payment of consideration arising from his admission to that effect before the Registrar, held that the plaintiff was entitled to an unconditional decree for specific performance of the contract of mortgage. Sheo Mal v. Umrdin (No. 60 *P. REGISTRATION ACT (VIII OF 1877)—contd.

Held, that an instrument which ought to have been registered under the rules contained in Judicial Commissioner's Circular No. 11 of 1859 not being affected by the Registration Act (III of 1877), there is nothing in section 49 of that Act which excludes as inadmissible or renders inoperative an instrument executed in the Punjab in 1866. NANAK v. CHAILU. 10 P R 1880

2. Suit on unregistered mortgage—Defendant admitting amount due on mortgage, but pleading payment—Objection to maintenance of suit on ground of inadmissibility of deed.

Plaintiffs sued to recover Rs. 320, alleged to have been advanced to the defendant on a mortgage of land. Defendant admitted that Rs. 320 was due to the plaintiffs, but pleaded that he mortgaged the land elsewhere for Rs. 600, out of which he paid Rs. 320 to plaintiffs. It was contended in an application to the Chief Court under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, that the plaintiffs' suit should have been dismissed as the mortgage deed on which they brought their suit had not been registered.

Held, that such objection was not maintainable, as upon the pleadings it was not necessary for the plaintiffs to produce the deed of mortgage at all, as the defendant admitted that he had received the Rs. 320 under the mortgage, and the only issue was whether this amount had been repaid. NIAZ GUL v. RAM DITTA. 52 P R 1883

3. Inadmissibility in evidence of unregistered deed to prove admission of vendor's subsisting title—Adverse possession—Possession as evidence of title—Evidence Act (I of 1872), section 110.

In a suit by plaintiff for possession of a house, defendant pleaded that he had got the house in proprietary right 30 years ago from the plaintiff's father, but that in 1875 the plaintiff had claimed the house, and defendant had been induced to settle the matter by purchasing it from him for Rs. 180. The deed had not been registered. Plaintiff denied the sale and alleged that defendant had become his tenant in Sambat 1929. The Court of first instance held that the deed was inadmissible, being unregistered and that defendant could not be allowed to prove the sale by other evidence, nor could he plead adverse possession, as, according to his own statement, he admitted the plaintiff's title in 1875 by taking a deed of sale from him. The lower Appellate Court, on defendant's appeal, agreed with the first Court, holding that the circumstances of the execution of the deed could be taken into consideration in conjunction with the evidence on the record as explaining what the defendant's status was in respect to the property before 1875.

Held, that both the Courts below were in error in taking the deed of sale into consideration as evidence of an admission by the defendant that the plaintiff had a subsisting title in 1875, and that the defendant's previous possession was not adverse : had the plaintiff admitted the sale, it would have been unnecessary for the defendant to tender the deed in evidence : as it was, he was not entitled to take advantage of a transaction, which he himself denied, as amounting to an admission in his favour by the defendant.

Held further, that the defendant's plea could not be regarded as an admission of plaintiff's title having subsisted up to 1875, the allegation being that he had an adverse title, but, on the plaintiff claiming in that year, was induced to compromise the matter by a payment of Rs. 180 in full satisfaction of the plaintiff's rights, whatever they were, and as plaintiff denied that any such compromise took place, defendant was entitled to fall back upon his previous possession, which he alleged to be adverse, and which under section 110 of the Evidence Act was prima facie evidence of title. Hassan v. Fazl Wahid (No. 121 *P. 49. Correlation of Contract and Registration Acts—Registration Act, section 49—Meaning of the words "affect immovable property"—Admissibility of document for other purposes.

The words "No document shall be received as evidence of any transaction affecting immovable property," in section 49, Indian Registration Act, 1877, mean "no document shall be received as evidence of any transaction, so far as it affects immovable property." I. L. R. IX Calc. 520, adopted and followed.

Where, therefore, the plaintiff sued upon a document which was unregistered, and the registration of which was compulsory, claiming :

(1) that the defendants be caused to execute a deed of sale of the land and income in his favour, and to deliver possession ; or failing this relief ;

(2) that the sums expended by him, with interest thereon, be awarded to him ; or

(3) any other relief the Court thought proper ;

Held, that although section 49 of the Registration Act excluded proof of the contract for the purpose of obtaining specific performance of the contract, and in consequence of this provision the contract could not be specifically enforced, there was nothing in that Act to excuse the defendants from performance of their promise, or to deprive the plaintiff of the right given by section 73, Contract Act, viz. a right to receive compensation for breach of the contract.

A contract does not wholly cease to be enforceable merely because the right to specific performance of it cannot be enforced —it only ceases to be enforceable in that particular manner ; but if there has been a breach of the contract, a right arises to receive compensation which is independent of the right to specific performance, and which may be enforced by action.

5. Mortgage-deed relating to immovable property—Deed compulsorily registrable, but registered in wrong Registry Office—Admissibility of deed in evidence—Registration Act, 1877, section 49—Fraud.

Held, that the mere fact that a mortgage-deed, which is compulsorily registrable, has been registered in a wrong Registry Office, does not render such deed inadmissible in evidence as against a purchaser at execution sale of the land mortgaged, who, not knowing that such land was subject to mortgage, does not plead that he was misled by the deed not being registered at the proper office. or that he was induced to purchase because, on inquiry, at the latter office, he learnt that there was no outstanding incumbrance.

6. And section 50—Unregistered mortgagee claiming priority over transferee by registered deed—Possession—Presumption of ownership.

The question for decision was whether defendant, who set up an unregistered mortgage of the land in suit from the original owner, had a good and valid claim on the land in respect of his mortgage against the plaintiff, who claimed to be a transferree by registered deed from the heir of the said owner. It was found that the mortgage being for more than Rs. 100, in writing, but not registered, was inadmissible in evidence under section 49 of the Registration Act of 1877, and it was further held that under section 91 of the Evidence Act the place of the document could not be supplied by oral evidence, but it was contended that the defendant was entitled to succeed by reason of his being in possession of the land in question, such possession being presumptive proof of his right.

Held, that as defendant did not claim to be owner, there was no rule of evidence setting up a presumption in his favor ; and that therefore the defendant having no title to the land could not claim priority over the plaintiff, the registered transferree from the heir of the original owner. Chowgatta v. Chatar Singh (No. 18 *P. 7. And section 50—Purchaser under registered deed for Rs. 600 claiming possession of land held by prior purchaser by unregistered deed for over Rs. 100—Notice—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), section 27 (b)—Evidence Act (I of 1872), sections 91, 110—Oral evidence inadmissible to prove contents of written contract—Presumption of ownership arising from possession—Compensation for improvements made under bona fide belief of ownership—Plaintiff purchasing with actual notice of prior unregistered sale—Fraud.

Plaintiff sued the defendant for possession of certain land which he had purchased from the original owner by registered deed for Rs. 600. Defendant, who was found to have been in possession for $2\frac{1}{2}$ years before suit, alleged a prior purchase from the said owner, but his deed of sale was admitted to be unregistered, and being for an amount exceeding Rs. 100, was an instrument which, under section 49 of the Registration Act, would not affect the property. Defendant, however, denied that the original owner had any title to the land purchased from him by the plaintiff, and pleaded that he had made improvements to the value of Rs. 500.

Held, per BARKLEY and BURNEY, JJ., that as the defendant did not allege a contract to sell to him, but an actual sale, it was clear that he could not sue for specific performance, and therefore section 27, clause (b) of the Specific Relief Act had no application, and further, that as section 91 of the Evidence Act excludes evidence being given of the terms of a contract, grant, or other disposition of property, when those terms have been reduced to writing, other than the document itself, if it were necessary for the defendant to prove his title, he must fail.

But held also following Imam Buksh v. Pokhar (No. 26 P. R. 1882), Hassan v. Fazl Wahid (No. 121 P. R. 1882), and Pir Baksh v. Jhanda Mal (No. 157 P. R. 1880), that it was for the plaintiff to prove his own title and to rebut the presumption of ownership, which under section 110 of the Evidence Act, arose, from the defendant's possession, weak as that presumption might be in a case where the defendant could only show possession for $2\frac{1}{3}$ years, and, moreover if the defendant holding the land with a bona fide belief that he had become owner was allowed by the real owner to make improvements which had increased its value, he would be entitled to compensation for those improvements, at least, if the plaintiff, when he purchased, had notice that he was holding the land under a claim of right; and if the plaintiff was entitled to recover the land, he must do so on the term of making compensation for improvements so made. Kunhaya Lall v. Kishan Chand (No. 42 P. R. 1866), cited.

It having been found (after a remand directed for enquiry into the point) that the defendant was in possession as owner by purchase and that the plaintiff knew this when he made his purchase, held, by Elsmie and Burney, JJ. that the plaintiff being found to have had actual notice of his vendor having parted with the ownership, even if he knew that the deed of sale was one which, being unregistered, would not affect the land, he could not claim to be put in a better position than the person from whom he purchased; and that, being aware that his vendor was committing a fraud, he could not be allowed to take advantage of such fraud to which he thus made himself a party. Aziz v. Ladha Singh (No. 102 P. R. 1883,) cited. AKBAR v. PREM SINGH. 2 P R 1885

8. Section 49—Purchaser buying land with notice of prior unregistered mortgage for over Rs. 100—Effect of such notice —Fraud.

The question referred for the consideration of the Full Bench was whether a person purchasing immoveable property with notice of a prior mortgage on the same property for over Rs. 100 in writing but unregistered, can take more than the remaining interest of the vendor, on the ground that the mortgage being unregistered cannot affect the property.

Held, by a majority of the Full Bench (Barkley, J. dissenting) that the purchaser in the above case is entitled to oust the mortgagee from possession of the land, although he had notice of the fact that the land was held by him as mortgagee and to take the property free from any charge on it.

Per Barkley, J.—To defeat the purchaser's claim to possession there must be notice, not only that the defendant got possession as mortgagee, but of facts which put the purchaser in a position to ascertain that the defendant was still entitled to retain possession against the mortgagor, and if there is notice of such facts, the purchaser is entitled only to what his vendor would have been entitledto, had the sale not taken place.

Section 49—concld.

See SECTIONS 3 AND 49 supra.

1. Registered and unregistered mortgage —Priority—Notice.

Plaintiffs claimed possession of the land in suit by virtue of a registered mortgage for Rs. 100, dated 26th September 1878. The defendants held an unregistered mortgage of the same land for Rs. 50, dated 3rd July 1878, in which it was promised that possession would be given on a specified date, subsequent to that of the mortgage to plantiffs if the mortgage debt was not then discharged. It appeared that the defendants were in possession of the land as tenants prior to their mortgage, and under the terms of that mortgage they were to hold as tenants until the date above-mentioned.

Held, that under section 50 of the Registration Act the registered mortgage must take effect against every unregistered document relating to the same property, not being a decree or order, and that therefore unless plaintiff had notice of the prior contract (which was not pleaded in the present case) in which case he would be bound by it—see section 27 (b) of the Specific Relief Act,—he was entitled to be put in possession of the land; and the mortgagor having been in possession at the time of the registered mortgage, he was in a position to give possession to the plaintiffs. ARUR SINGH v. CHUHAR. 37 P R 1882

2. Registered and unregistered documents—Priority—Notice.

Held, that the priority conferred by section 50 of the Registration Act on a registered document of the kinds mentioned therein, cannot be claimed where the person in whose favour the subsequent document was executed had notice of the prior title of another person.

The question as to what constitutes notice discussed and explained. AZIZ v. LADHA SINGH. 102 P R 1883

See also GURANDITTA v. JOWALA SHAH. 102 P R 1883 Note.

3. Priority between registered and unregistered deeds—Notice—Possession.

Plaintiff claimed possession of certain lands by virtue of a deed of sale executed in February 1880, and registered under Act III of 1877. In reply defendant set up two unregistered deeds relating to the same property, viz., a deed of sale bearing date the 24th May 1876 and a mortgage-deed dated the 5th June 1879, the registration of both instruments being optional.

Held, that under Act III of 1877 plaintiff's deed, being registered, took precedence of defendant's unregistered deeds, the registration of which was optional and the circumstance that defendant's deed of sale was executed before Act III of 1877 came into force made no difference.

But held also, that if plaintiff had notice of the right of the prior purchaser when he purchassd, he could not without fraud rely upon a purchase from a person whom he knew at the time to have no title, and that in such case he could not claim the advantage given him by section 50 of the Registration Act.

Held further, that possession, being one of the indications of ownership, may in many cases be sufficient notice to the second purchaser to put the duty of enquiry upon him, but to operate as notice, knowledge of the possession should be brought home to him, possession not being in all cases sufficient notice. GHULAM NAKSHBAND v. MIRA KHAN. 159 P R 1883

4. Priority betwen registered sale and prior unregistered mortgage for Rs. 100—Notice.

Plaintiff sued for possession of an occupancy tenure which he bought from one of the defendants by a registered deed for Rs. 195. The second defendant resisted his entry, alleging that he was already in possession under an unregistered deed of mortgage for Rs. 100. The lower Courts decreed for the plaintiff on the ground that there was no proof that he took with notice of the prior mortgage.

Held, that as the prior deed required registration, and by not being registered did not affect the land, the doctrine of notice did not under the circumstances of the case apply, and that plaintiff was entitled to have the decree in his favor upheld on this ground. Mushka Khan v. Jafir Khan (No. 126 P. R. 1884), followed. Akbar v. Prem Singh (No. 2 P. R. 1885), distinguished. MATHRA v. GURDITTA. 14 P R 1885

5. Registered and unregistered documents—Mortgagee under subsequent registered deed entitled to priority over holder of decree on prior unregistered deed.

G. mortgaged a plot of land to A. by an unregistered deed for Rs. 93.

G. subsequently mortgaged the same plot to R. by a registered mortage-deed for Rs. 125 on the 16th January 1878.

On the 18th October 1878, A. obtained a decree against G. on his unregistered mortgage deed.

On the 6th June 1887, R. sued both G. and A for possession under his registered mortgage-deed.

A. pleaded that R.'s registered deed did not take effect against his decree.

Held, that R.'s registered mortgage-deed took effect from the date of its execution against A.'s unregistered mortgage-deed, and the fact that a decree was subsequently

7. Priority—Priority between registered sale and prior unregistered sale of which the registration was optional—Notice.

The question referred to the Full Bench was whether, when two documents being of the kinds specified in the first clause of section 50 of the Registration Act, 1877, come into competition, the earlier of which the registration is optional being unregistered, and the latter being registered, the question of notice by any means of the prior deed is material. Held, that the holder of the latter document is not affected by notice of the former. 8. Registration Acts—Priority of registered deed of sale over unregistered deed of mortgage—Explanation to section 50, Act III of 1877—Deed executed before Act XVI of 1864 came into operation—Fraud.

In a suit for the recovery of possession of a house which the plaintiff had purchased by a registered deed of sale, dated 11th August 1889, the defendants in possession claimed to hold the property under three unregistered mortgage-deeds from the original owner executed respectively in 1863, 1865 and 1873.

Held, by the Chief Court on appeal, that the plaintiff's registered deed of 1889 was not entitled to priority over the defendant's deeds of 1863 and 1865, by reason of the provisions of section 50, Act III of 1877, but that the plaintiff's deed must prevail over the deed of 1873.

Held, also, that the two deeds were clearly antagonistic, inasmuch as the sale deed ignored the charge created by the mortgage, and that no fraud had been established, for that a transfer was not fraudulent merely because the transferee had notice of a prior unregistered transfer.

Section 50—concld.

Section 50 of the Registration Act, 1877, gives priority to registered documents of certain specified classes, as regards property comprised therein, over unregistered documents relating to the same property, not being decrees or orders, provided, in the latter case, that such decrees or orders are prior in point of date to the registered document.

Where, however, an unregistered mortgagee had already brought his suit to enforce his mortgage, held, that a mortgage, by registered deed, of the same property made during the litigation must, in accordance with the principles of lis pendens, be treated as subject to the result of the suit. PIR BAKHSH v. KADIR BAKHSH.

10. Priority between unregistered sale with possession and subsequent registered sale—Notice.

The defendant No. 1 sold certain land on 26th July 1897 to the plaintiffs by unregistered deed for Rs. 95, the money was paid and possession given. Subsequently, in February 1898, he sold the same land by registered deed of sale to defendants Nos. 2 and 3, who accepted their deed of sale with notice of the sale of July 1897. Held, by the Full Bench, that when it is proved that a subsequent encumbrancer under a registered conveyance had notice of a valid prior unregistered encumbrance and of possession by such encumbrancer of such conveyance without possession, the Courts are not bound to interpret the Registration Act of 1877, section 50, so as to defeat the title of the prior encumbrancer. Held, futher, per Robertson, J. When it is shown that the original transferee was in possession under his transfer at the time of the second conveyance it is to be presumed that the second grantee had notice of the prior title or interest.

And section 77—Suit to compel registration—Omission by plaintiff to present deed for registration within 30 days of obtaining a decree in such suit—Effect of such omission—Lapse of decree.

Plaintiffs sued under section 77 of the Registration Act for an order for the registration of a mortgage and obtained a decree from the First Court, which was ultimately reversed on appeal by the Divisional Court, whereupon plaintiff lodged an appeal in the Chief Court and was met by the preliminary objection that as he had failed to present his deed for registration within 30 days from the date of the decree originally obtained by him in the first Court, that decree had lapsed, and could not be revived by any subsequent proceedings taken after the decree had already become void of itself.

Held, that the above objection must prevail: that the terms of section 77 of the Registration Act read with the provisions of the second para. of section 75 of the same Act, show that no registering officer would be bound to obey a decree directing a document to be registered, if it were not presented for registration within 30 days after the passing of the decree; and that it therefore followed that as the plaintiff in the present case did not obey the requirements of the law, and present his mortgage-deed for registration within 30 days of his obtaining a decree, the decree itself became inoperative, and all rights under it lapsed, and the decree having thus become extinct before it was reversed on the merits by the lower Appellate Court, the plaintiff could not by appealing against the latter decision revive the extinct decree. Section 77.

1. And sections 71 and 75—Suit to compel registration—Omission to execute within 30 days decree obtained in such suit—Effect of such omission.

In a suit brought under section 77 of the Registration Act for an order directing a deed of sale to be registered, registration having been refused both by the Sub-Registrar and the Registrar on the ground of the vendor denying execution plaintiff obtained a decree that the deed of sale be registered in the office of the Sub-Registrar, if presented within 30 days after the passing of the decree. Plaintiff however did not avail himself of this decree by presenting the deed for registration, but defendant having after more than 30 days had elapsed appealed on the merits, the lower Appellate Court reversed the decree of the first Court on the ground that it was not proved that defendant had executed the deed. Thereupon plaintiff filed a further appeal in the Chief Court on the merits, and was met with the objection by the defendant-respondent that the plaintiff's decree had not been executed

Held that this objection was fatal to the plaintiff, as no registering officer would be bound (under the provisions of sections 75, 77 of the Registration Act) to obey an order directing the deed to be registered 30 days from the date of the order of the first Court having long since expired. Section 77—contd.

Act (VII of 1870), 2nd Schedule, article 17 (vi)—Punjab Courts Act (XVIII of 1884*), section* 40 (i) (a).

Plaintiff sued under section 77 of the Registration Act, 1887, for a decree directing registration of a receipt for Rs. 100 said to have been paid as earnest-money of the price of a house which, it was alleged, defendants agreed to sell for Rs. 2,500. No value was put on the suit in the plaint, which was written on a Rs. 10 stamp, but in his appeal plaintiff valued it at Rs. 100.

Held, that (i) as regards Court fees the suit fell under article 17, clause (vi) of the 2nd Schedule to the Court Fees Act, 1870; and (ii) that although the property might have been agreed to be sold for Rs. 2,500 the suit did not "involve directly any question respecting property of the value of Rs. 1,000 or upwards," within the meaning of clause (a) of section 40 (i) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, but was an unclassed suit, of which the value, for purposes of jurisdiction, was Rs. 100 only. 3. Decree directing registration of mortgage deed—Appeal—Registration Act, 1877, section 77*—Further appeal—" Land suit."*

Plaintiff sued under section 77 of the Registration Act, 1877, for a decree directing registration of a deed whereby certain land was mortgaged for Rs. 199. The suit was decreed in the first Court and the deed was duly registered, but subsequently the Divisional Judge, on appeal dismissed the suit. Plaintiff, thereupon, preferred a further appeal to the Chief Court, and it was contended, on his behalf, that no appeal lay from the decree of the first Court, and that, even if an appeal did lie, it must be infructuous, as the document had been already registered and there was no provision of law for the cancellation of registration once effected. For the defendant it was objected that a suit under section 77 of the Registration Act was not a "land-suit" within the terms of section 3 (2) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, and that, therefore, no further appeal lay from the decree of the Divisional Court.

Held, that an appeal lay to the Divisional Court from the decree of the first Court, and that the fact that registration had already been effected under that decree was no bar to such appeal being heard.

Held, further, that inasmuch as the mortgage operated to create an interest in land, a suit under section 77 of the Registration Act to secure legal efficacy for the mortgage transaction, was a suit "Relating to a right or interest in land," and that

9. Maintenance.
In a claim for maintenance by a disciple of a religious institution, held, that it was wrong to award plaintiff " a reasonable " supply of necessaries," and in the event of further disputes between plaintiff and the guddee-nashin a fixed sum; the proper decree was to award simply that plaintiff was entitled to such maintenance as befitted his condition. HOCSAIN SHAH v. HUSSUN SHAH. 84 P R 1866

10. Succession.
Plaintiff claimed to succeed to a thakoordwara in possession of defendant, on the ground that plaintiff was the chela of the last mohunt. Held, that as defendant had built the thakoordwara with the consent of the mohunt, and had been named by the latter as his successor with the consent of the city people, while plaintiff's title as chela was not clearly made out; defendant was entitled to be maintained in possession. POORUN CHUND v. SOONDUR DASS. 32 P R 1867

11. Succession.
Parus Ram, Gooroo, had two chelas, Mungal Dass and Ramjee Dass (plaintiff). Before his death, Parus Ram verbally appointed Mungal Dass, the senior chela, to succeed him until Ramjee Dass should have attained his majority; Mungal Dass subsequently died, having by a written will constituted his chela, Rugbeer Dass (defendant) to be his heir and successor. Ramjee Dass claimed to succeed under the original appointment of Parus Ram. Rugbeer Dass contended that Parus Ram could not appoint more than his immediate successor. Held, that the custom of the institution did not sanction the appointment of an intermediate director of the guddee pending minority of the intended successor, so as to give a title to the latter. Plaintiff's suit dismissed, and the appointment of Rugbeer Dass upheld. RAMJEE DASS v. RUGBEER DASS. 52 P R 1867

12. Birt.

13. Management of affairs of the institution.
A mafi had been released by Government for the support of a thakoordwara. The grant was originally made to S. B. who left four chelas (one of whom was the plaintiff). After the death of S. B. the chelas jointly administered the grant. Defendant claimed the exclusive right to administer, on the ground that he was mohunt in succession to S. B.—Held, that even if defendant had succeeded S. B. as mohunt by virtue of his connection with another temple (which was not satisfactorily shown,) there was evidence of a custom to support plaintiff's case, viz., that the administration of the grant should be given to the disciples jointly. In cases of dispute as to the management of religious endowments, the general presumption is that the mohunt alone is entitled to administer; but the decision as regards any particular institution must be guided by the custom pertaining to that institution. 16. Presumption.
A grant of land made by the proprietors to a person in consideration of his acting as imam of the village mosque, is of the nature of a grant to a village servant, and tenable only during the pleasure of the grantors. But if the grant be made jointly by the village proprietary body, and their shares are joint, the grant is resumable only as a whole and not piecemeal; and it cannot be resumed until proprietors representing the major part of the property of the village, desire to resume it. MAZOOLA v. BAHADUR KHAN. 70 P R 1868

17. Wukf.

The consignment and delivery of consecrated real property to a Mutwalli is not necessary to render a wukf legal; a bare declaration in words is sufficient, and no particular formality or ceremony is necessary to make the declaration binding and the appropriation complete; but there should be clear proof that such a declaration has really been made; and this should not be hastily presumed from casual remarks let fall by the alleged appropriator in the course of conversation unsupported by his acts and conduct. The only things capable of being appropriated by user alone are those mentioned in Chapters VII and VIII, Book IX of Baillie's Digest of Muhamadan law, viz. mosques, caravanserais, cemeteries, inns, reservoirs, ways and aqueducts. Buildings susceptible of use for secular as well as religious purposes such as imambaras, cannot be so appropriated. Once created, a wukf is irrevocable. THAKOOR DASS v. MUSSAMMAT HAJEE BEGUM. 100 P R 1868

18. Protection of sacred buildings.

A, a Hindu, purchased a piece of land from B, a Muhammadan, owner of the village, and built a temple and located a priest thereon. At Settlement the priest was recorded mafidar for life; and on his death the descendants of B took possession, while the descendant of A claimed the proprietary rights. The Lower Courts found for the descendants of B. Held, in appeal, that the latter could not destroy the temple as long as there were worshippers at the shrine. ASA NUND v. RAJA SHUMSHER KHAN.

19. Succession—Custom.

The Punjab Civil Code (section XXII, para 6) laid down the general rule, but did not obviate the necessity of an enquiry into the usage of a particular institution,—The Chief Court directed an enquiry into the customary succession of a dhurmsala and the neighbouring dhurmsalas occupied by the same section of faqirs, where the contest was whether plaintiff was to succeed on the ground of discipleship, or the defendant on the ground of his election by the neighbouring faqirs. ADJOODIA DASS v. DEVI DASS. 73 P R 1869

20. Mutwalli—Tenure of office by, consistent with right of worshippers to restrain his acts—Power of, to determine what is for benefit of mosque

In a suit brought by the worshippers at a mosque to restrain the Mutwalli from encroaching upon the enclosure of the mosque—Held, that the plaintiff's remedy was not necessarily by obtaining the removal of the defendant from the office of Mutwalli; but it was consistent with the defendant's right to be Mutwalli; and to continue in the trust, that the plaintiffs should have the right to restrain him by an order of Court from doing a particular act. Held, also, that the defendant's right to encroach upon the enclosure of the mosque depended either upon his power as Mutwalli to determine whether the encroachment was for the benefit of the mosque, independently of the opinion of the plaintiffs; or upon the question whether the defendant bona fide permitted the encroachment for the benefit of the mosque. Found, also, that the defendant had not as Mutwalli power to determine whether or not an encroachment of the sort was for the benefit of the mosque independently of the opinion of the worshippers. WULLEE OOLA v. KURREEM BUKHSH. 81 P R 1869

21. Sikh temple at Umritsar—Office of "Grunthee" or "Guddee Nusheen" not a descenndible inheritance.—Special offerings intended for use of "Grunthee" are not joint family property.

The plaintiffs and defendant were cousins, and grandsons of one Mukkun Singh, who was some time Grunthee of the Temple at Umritsar. During Mukkun Singh's lifetime the defendant had officiated as Grunthee or Guddee Nusheen, and continued to do so after his grandfather's death. Certain special offerings called ardass went to the Grunthee, and these offerings the defendant shared with the plaintiffs during their grandfather's life-time, and for a time after his death. Disputes then arose, and the defendant refused any longer to share the ardass with the plaintiffs. Held, that in the absence of an agreement binding between the parties that the plaintiffs should receive a share of the ardass, they had no claim to any such share; that the office of Guddee Nusheen was not a descendible inheritance; that the ardass was not joint family property, but went separately to the Guddee Nusheen, though he was a member of a joint undivided Hindu family; and that only what was thrown into the joint family funds must be divided equally between the parties. 22. Power of Court to appoint imam—Act XX of 1863, section 22.

Under Act XX of 1863, a Court can declare the right of a particular person to appoint the imam of a mosque, but cannot nominate the iman or declare a given nomination to be right. BUDDER DIN v. MULLIK ATTAR. 35 P R 1871

23. Right of member of parohit's family to a share in birt.

Defendant, a parohit, received birt or fees from pilgrims who stopped at defendant's house. Plaintiff, on the ground of relationship, claimed from the defendant a share of these fees; the defendant resisted the claim with the plea that he obtained the fees by performing services, and the plaintiff without rendering any services was not merely as a relative entitled to share in the fees. The Lower Courts held this plea a good answer to the action, and dismissed plaintiff's suit. Held, by the Chief Court, remanding the case for a new trial, that such a suit as the plaintiff's might be maintainable if there were any relation of ancestral right or contract or customary proceeding between the parties, giving rise to a liablity on the part of the parohit to allow his relative to share in the fees. RAM RUTTUN v. GORI. 38 P R 1872

24. Suit for profits of a shrine—Res judicata—Effect of decision upon property in foreign territory—Jurisdiction of Small Cause Court.

Sodi Utum Singh had four sons—viz. Ranjit Singh (father of plaintiff) by his first wife, and the three defendants by his second wife. Plaintiff sued for Rs. 148-8-3, being a share of the profits of a share at Kiratpur in the Jullundur district, claimed by him on the ground that by custom the sons of the senior or first married wife were entitled to a tenth share in addition to what they would obtain on division. Plaintiff based his claim on a decision of the Political Agent, Ambala, (dated 14th December 1837), which then determined a dispute between the defendant and plaintiff's father relating to Utam Singh's estate, and which, the plaintiff now contended, judicially established the custom in his favour and made the matter res judicata. The Political Agent's order was—"to divide the "estate in the following way—viz., that "each of the four brothers was to have "an equal share, and Sodi Ranjit Singh, "(plaintiff's father,) the eldest son, was to "have a tenth share of all the property, "both movable and immovable, in addition "to his regular share." Held, that this decision only affected property situated in British territory, and did not therefore extend to the Kiratpur shrine, which at the time of the decision was in territory under the rule of Maharajah Ranjit Singh; and that the matter in suit was not consequently res judicata. Held, also that the claim was not one of the nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court. SODI BRIJ BULLAB SINGH v. SODI KARTAR SINGH.

25. Private or separate estate of members—Custom.

Plaintiff, mohunt of a religious institution, sued the defendant, a member or suniassi, in order to be recorded proprietor of certain land, as head of the institution, which land defendant alleged he had purchased from his own resources. Held, that the position of suniassis being in many cases such that they could not acquire private property, and all that they acquired went to the benefit of the institution, the proper points for inquiry were,—first what was the custom of suniassis generally as to holding private property; secondly, what was the practice of this institution, and was that practice sufficiently in conformity with general custom to be enforceable. TOTA PURI v. PADAM PURI. 21 P R 1874

26. Succession of females.

Plaintiff, a female, found to be entitled to succeed as mohant of a religious institution, having been nominated successor by the deceased mohant. MUSSAMMAT MUNNIA v. JIWAN DAS. 76 P R 1874

27. Nature of relationship—Office of parohit—Hereditary right of heir of deceased parohit to sue for fees paid to another parohit.

A. and B. were members of a family of parohits. Under an arrangement between the ancestors of both, it was settled that A.'s ancestor C. should receive the fees paid by the jujmans during two months of each year. This arrangement was carried out during C.'s lifetime, and after his death his widow received the dues in his place. At her death, certain jujmans, erroneously thinking that B. was the heir of C., and that A. had no pretentions to be such heir, paid their fees to B. during the said months. A., C.'s daughter's son, sued B. to recover the amount so paid.

Held by a Full Bench (BOULNOIS, LINDSAY and CAMPBELL, JJ.), affirming the order proposed by PLOWDEN, J., and dissenting from that of FITZPATRICK, J., that the suit would lie.

Per PLOWDEN, J.—The office of parohit was hereditary as amongst his successors and descendants, and gave the heir the right to share the emoluments of the office; but the relation of parohit and jujman was voluntary, the latter being at liberty to pay his fees to the priest of his own choice, and the parohit being entitled to exercise his office in his individual capacity and retain the fees paid to him in that capacity as his own,—in what capacity a particular fee was received being a matter of evidence in each instance. A., as daughter's son of C., was the heir of C., and entitled to recover from B. the fees received by the latter during the appointed months.

Per FITZPATRICK, J.—At a time when the exclusive right of a parohit to minister to and receive fees from his jujmans, was recognized by the Courts, the claim of A. would have been maintainable, but as the office was now, as between parohit and jujmans, voluntary, the question of hereditary right could not arise. A contract between the relations of a deceased parohit as to officiating at different seasons and their shares in the fees, might be enforced, and a fee paid to one parohit, but intended for a whole collective body, might be recovered from the receiver of it. As A. sued as heir of C., his suit should be dismissed. GOBIND v. SADDA. 7 P R 1877

28. Donation made to member of family of priests—Express exclusion of specified parohit from benefit of donation.

Where a jujman in making a donation (birt) to a member of a family of priests intentionally and expressly excludes another member of the family from the benefit of the donation, held, that the latter is not entitled upon the mere ground of hereditary right to recover the whole or a part of the donation so made to the recipient. MATHRA v. KANHYA. 119 P R 1879

29. Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Suit for the right to a religious office—Custom—Kangra Bhojkis of Bhowan shrine—Right to officiate at temple.

A suit by a family of priests for a decree prohibiting another branch of the family from conducting religious services in a shrine, held, to be cognizable by the Civil Courts.

Found that by the custom of the Bhojkis of the Bhowan shrine at Kangra, only Bhojkis by wives who are the daughters of Kangra Bhojkis are entitled to officiate at the temple, and not sons of Kangra Bhojkis by daughters of Jawala Mukhi or Naina Devi Bhojkis. BHAG MAL v. SANT. 27 P R 1880

30. Alienation by manager of property attached to institution—Necessity.

A mohant, who holds the position of manager of the property of a religious institution, has the power in that capacity to alienate such property, if it is necessary to resort to this means of raising money for the purposes of the institution.

In considering whether it was necessary to raise money for the purposes of the institution, the income as well as the necessary expenses of the institution must be taken into account, and it should further be shown how much of the money was required for such purposes, the power to incur debts binding the institution must be measured by the necessity of incurring them. Shahabal v. Ram Das (No. 95 P. R. 1879), referred to. BISHEN DAS v. GHASITA. 39 P R 1882

31. Relative position of mujawars and sajjada-nashin of shrine—Liability of mujawars to dismissal at will of sajjada-nashin—Custom of Peshawar District—Suit for declaratory decree.

A suit brought by certain mujawars of a shrine in the Peshawar district for a declaration that they were entitled to receive a third share of the offerings of the shrine whilst the defendant (who it appeared was the sajjada-nashin) was entitled to the other two-thirds, dismissed on the ground that it was fully established by the evidence in the case that mujawars generally in the shrines of the Peshawar District were servants liable to be dismissed by the sajjada-nashin at pleasure; and that the plaintiffs had failed to prove that they, owing to the post having come down to them from three generations, or for any other cause, were on a more privileged footing; and that this being so, they were not entitled in a suit for a declaratory decree, to require the Courts to define and ascertain their rights. MUHAMMAD TAHIR v. NAJIBULLA. 154 P R 1888

32. Succession to office of mahant—Custom of Institution—Onus of proof—Nomination or election—Will of deceased mahant.

Plaintiff sued to dispossess defendant from a shrine and property which he held as mahant elected by the brotherhood, on the strength of a will executed by the last mahant, nominating him as his successor and alleged to have been confirmed (after registration) before the brotherhood.

Held that to succeed in his suit, plaintiff had to show that he had a better title than defendant, that is, that according to the rule of succession governing that particular shrine he as nominee of the last mahant, had a right to oust defendant, and that as he had failed to prove this, his suit failed. GURDIT SINGH v. RANJIT SINGH. 87 P R 1889

33. *Custom—Succession—Bairagis of Rawalpindi—Nomination—Election—*Chela.

J., the mahant of a Bairagi shrine at Rawalpindi, executed a will whereby he nominated his own brother R., as his successor. It was found that the will was not executed in the presence, or with the consent, of the members of his religious brotherhood, and that R. had never been initiated as a chela. Held that by the custom applicable to the institution to which the deceased mahant belonged, a mahant may appoint his successor from among his chelas with the approval of an assembly of the religious brotherhood, and some of the respectable chowdhris of the place, and if one has not been so appointed in the life-time of the said mahant, that he is elected by an assembly of the brotherhood on the death of his predecessor, and that defendant's nomination, not being of this character, failed and must be set aside. 35. Suit to recover possession of shrine —Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 539—Right of sewaks or worshippers to remove a mahant for alleged misconduct—Onus probandi.

In a suit by a person claiming as the lawful mahant of a shrine for recovery of possession thereof and of the lands attached thereto, defendant who had been elected mahant by the worshippers of the shrine pleaded inter alia that section 539, Civil Procedure Code, barred the suit. Held, that section 539 had no application to such a suit; that section deals with two classes of cases—(i) where there is an alleged breach of any trust created for public, charitable or religious purposes, and (ii) where the direction of the Court is necessary for the administration of any such trust. On the facts of the case, held, that the defendant, on whom the onus lay, had failed to prove—(i) that by general or special custom, the worshippers of a shrine were competent to remove a mahant, and to appoint his successor, and (ii) that the plaintiff had acquiesced in his removal. BAWA SUKHRAM DAS v. BURHAM PURI. 122 P R 1890

37. Sadhs—Alienation—Power of father to alienate his life estate.

Found, that no special custom applicable to the parties who were sadhs (Bairagis) was proved justifying a departure from the usual rule in the Punjab, that a proprietor with a restricted power of alienation can, even in the case of ancestral property, deal with such property so as to bind the heirs during his lifetime. In determining the right of succession to the office of gaddi-nashin, the only law to be observed is to be found in the custom and practice, which must be proved by evidence.

Hitherto the rule of succession in the case of the Darbar Sahib, or Golden Temple at Amritsar, has been that the gaddi-nashins have nominated successors who have been installed in each case without objection.

Held, that no good grounds existed for applying the doctrine of survivorship to a case such as this, there being no analogy between three gaddi-nashins, who were to all intents and purposes separate and not joint, and the case of an undivided Hindu family among whom the doctrine of survivorship prevails.

Held, also, that it would not be just or equitable to reduce the customary number of gaddi-nashins from three to two, merely to benefit the plaintiff and to the detriment of the insttution and its supporters. BHAI BHAGAT SINGH v. HARNAM SINGH. 49 P R 1892

39. Dharmsala—Right of worshipper at, to contest alienation of property attached to —Application of section 539, Civil Procedure Code.

The plaintiffs were worshippers at a dharmsala and interested in the maintenance of the institution and preservation of the property intact.

Held, that in this capacity they had a locus standi to challenge certain alienations of property alleged and found to be waqf and attached to the dharmsala, not as self-constituted representatives of the body of worshippers who should have obtained an order under section 30, Civil Procedure Code, but as persons themselves interested in the preservation of the property.

Held, further, that section 539, Civil Procedure Code, has no application to a suit of this description. SEWA SINGH v. BUDH SINGH. 66 P R 1892

40. Right to sue—Habitual worshipper at mosque—Ejectment of trespasser.

In a suit by one who was a habitual worshipper at a certain Muhammadan mosque, of which he was also a neighbour and a supporter or well-wisher, for the ejectment of the defendant from certain land alleged to be attached to the mosque and to have been unlawfully encroached upon, the Divisional Judge dismissed the plaintiff's suit, holding that he was not competent to maintain it.

Held, that the suit would lie. Every Muhammadan who has a right to use a mosque is competent to maintain a suit against any one who interferes with the exercise of his such right to use; and by the same analogy every Muhammadan has a right to maintain a suit against persons who commit an injury upon property which has been devoted to the support of a mosque. MUHAMMAD UMAR v. RAM CHAND. 87 P R 1892

41. Custom—Succession to office of mahant—Dharmsala Thakar Bahawal Singh, Amritsar—Nomination of successor—Approval of brotherhood.

In a suit regarding the succession to the office of mahant of the dharmsala of Nirmala Sadhs, known as Thakar Bahawal Singh, situate outside the city of Amritsar, held, that by custom the rule of succession was that the mahant may nominate his successor, but that the nomination will not prevail unless the brotherhood formally approve the appointment.

If there be no nomination, then the brotherhood meet and formally appoint.

If the mahant misconducts himself the brotherhood have the power to dismiss him.

The brotherhood, strictly speaking, are those connected by spiritual ties with the founder of the institution, although it apparently may be held to include also the whole sect who are also related to each other by spiritual ties.

42. Muhammadan shrine, Dera Ismail Khan District—Succession to land and offerings—Alienation—Religious office.

J. M., who died about a year before suit, was owner of half the land attached to the Shah Habibwala khangah in the Dera Ismail Khan District and was entitled to a half share in the management and offerings of the shrine; he settled this property on N. M., his sister's son, on condition that he (the grantor) should receive maintenance during his lifetime.

The plaintiffs, members of the family and related to J. M. in the fourth degree (computed in accordance with the opinion expressed in No. 126 P. R. 1890) were entitled to a two-thirds share of the other moiety of the management and offerings, sued to set aside the above arrangement on the grounds (1) that the property was waqf; and (2) that J. M was not competent to make the alienation.

Held, that by custom the plaintiffs were entitled to inherit the share in the management and offerings in preference to N. M., a sister's son, his place being after collaterals related in the fourth degree.

Held, also, that assuming that J. M. as proprietor could alienate only for necessity, there appeared to be satisfactory reasons for holding that the alienation of the land was justified by necessity. The land was simply heritable property unconnected with the shrine, save that hitherto both had belonged to the same people.

Held, also, that the shrine must be regarded as a religious institution of a sort. It could not be regarded as a waqf, it being nowhere laid down that a mausoleum raised to a saint is to be so treated. The succession to the superintendence and management of the shrine are to be determined by the rules and customs which have hitherto been applied to the particular institution, as in other like cases.

Held, further, that the transfer of a share in the shrine and the offerings was akin to the transfer of a religious office and was invalid. I. L. R. VI Mad. 76, referred to and followed. NUR MUHAMMAD v. GHULAM HABIB. 106 P R 1892

44. Mahant, appointment or deposition of—Powers of bhekh—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Chitta Akhara, Amritsar City.

Questions of succession and appointment to, and dismissal from the office of mahant must be governed by the evidence in each case.

In a case relating to the mahantship of the Chitta Akhara, Amritsar city, found, on the evidence, that the bhekh, or college of mahants, when composed of the mahants of the principal akharas at Amritsar, including mahants nominated by the guru of the mahant who has to be dealt with, has full power to remove a mahant for misconduct, and that in the event of a vacancy in the mahantship, whether caused by the removal or otherwise of the mahant, a successor can be validly appointed only with the sanction of, or ratification by, the bhekh.

Held, that when a mahant has been appointed by the bhekh, a Civil Court should not interfere with the appointment except for very cogent reasons.

Quære : whether a Civil Court, after it has once held that a bhekh has power to depose a mahant for misconduct and has actually deposed him, can go into the question whether such mahant's conduct was or was not bad. GIYAN PARKASH v. HUZURA SINGH.

45. Suit by plaintiff as mutwali of mosque—Dismissal of suit and death of plaintiff pending appeal—Application by persons named by plaintiff in plaint as co-mutwalis to be brought on record as legal representatives—Burden of proof.

One I. B. sued as mutwali of a certain mosque, and in his plaint named the present appellants as joint mutwalis with him, but at the time resident at Mecca, I. B., whose suit was dismissed in the District Court, appealed to the Chief Court but died pending the appeal, whereupon the appellants applied to be brought on the record as the legal representatives of the deceased. The Chief Court refused to allow this to be done until appellants had proved by a regular suit that they were joint mutwalis with deceased, the appeal of I. B. being meantime postponed. Appellants accordingly instituted the present suit, but their claim was dismissed. On appeal to the Chief Court it was contended that inasmuch as appellants had been named by I. B. as his co-trustees, there could be no objection to their obtaining a decree declaring them his legal representatives for the purpose of continuing the appeal originally preferred by him, without going into the question of how they may have become co-trustees.

Held, that, in accordance with the previous order of the Chief Court, it was incumbent on appellants to prove their status as joint mutwalis with the deceased before their application to be brought on the record could be entertained.

Held, on the evidence, that appellants had failed to prove that they were the duly appointed joint mutwalis of the mosque in question, and that accordingly, whether defendants' title to retain possession of it was good or bad, appellants had no right to interfere in its management. ABDUL HAMID v. AHMAD HUSSAIN. 28 P R 1900

46. Jurisdiction of Civil Court to remove kardar or manager from the management of the endowed property—Locus standi of plaintiff—Act XX of 1863, sections 14 and 18—Regulation XIX of 1810.

In a suit which was instituted after sanction of the District Judge under section 18 of Act XX of 1863 by some of the tenants of the land endowed on two temples in Kulu along with several others against the defendants, who was the kardar or manager, asking for a decree for the money value of the property belonging to the temples, which was alleged to have been misappropriated by the defendant, the first Court gave a decree for the major portion of their claim and directed his removal from the office of kardari. On appeal the Divisional Judge found that the defendant was not responsible for the loss for property, but upheld the order of his removal. The defendant preferred a further appeal to the Chief Court on the grounds—

(i) that the order of dismissal was without jurisdiction, as Act XX of 1866 was not applicable ;

(ii) the plaintiffs had no locus standi ;

(iii) no legal permission has been obtained ; and

(iv) the order of dismissal was not justified.

Held, that Bengal Regulation XIX of 1810, was extended to the Punjab by general rules and orders which were given the force of law by the Indian Councils Act, and that Act XX of 1863 is applicable to this Province : that the endowment, the subject-matter of the present dispute, was one of the nature of those contemplated in that Act ; that the suit had been rightly instituted after obtaining permission under section 18 ; and that the facts that the application asking permission made no mention of the Act, and that all the plaintiffs were not applicants for permission to sue, did not constitute defects vitiating the order for the dismissal of defendant from managership.

47. Management of—Funds of the temple —Worshippers not entitled to call for accounts from the mahant unless there is proof of a custom or practice entitling them to do so—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section

539—Sanction—Court cannot grant relief outside the sanction.

Where the plaintiffs had applied for permission under section 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure to sue to have a committee appointed by a Civil Court for the management of a certain religious trust, and to obtain such other relief as they might be entitled to under the said section and the Collector had merely accorded permission."

Held, that the suit must be limited to matters covered by the sanction and that the plaintiffs were not competent to sue for the removal of the defendant from the office of mahant, the Court having no authority to enlarge the scope of the suit and to grant any other reliefs other than those included in the terms of the sanction.

Held, also, that the mahant of a religious institution is presumed to be the manager of the institution over which he presides, and is not bound to submit accounts for the information or approval of the worshippers at the shrine unless it is proved by evidence that it is the custom and practice of the institution for him to do so. Civil Courts are not justified in forcing a scheme of management on a religious or charitable institution unless there is clear proof that there has been such mismanagement or misconduct as calls for judicial interference. PREM SINGH v. LABH SINGH AND OTHERS.

48. Religious Institution—Alienation of immovable property belonging to a shrine—Power of mahant—Necessity—Burden of proof.

Held, that the powers of a mahant of a religious institution in matters of alienations of the endowment property are analogous to those of a Hindu widow. He can only alienate for the necessary purposes of the institution, and it should be shown that such purposes could not be fulfilled by contracting debts, and, that the ordinary income of the endowment was not available, and was insufficient for them, and that the debts could not be discharged from the income.

The lender advancing money to such a person on the security of trust property must show that he has made a proper enquiry as to the necessity, which will be tested by the principles enunciated above.

49. Religious Institution—Management of Religious Institution—Founder's right—Bungah Nur Mahlyanwala, attached to Golden Temple, Amritsar.

Held, that the bungahs in the outer quadrangle of the tank of the Golden Temple, according to Hindu Law, were (where the nature of the property remains unchanged and its management at the discretion of the founder or his representatives) imperfect trusts and not religious institutions pure and simple, and that the bungahis were not equal in status to mahants. KISHEN SINGH v. SARDARNI PARTAB KAUR. 81 P R 1902

50. Religious Institution—Liability of, for debts incurred by mahant—Duty of lender when advancing money to heads of religious institutions—Necessity.

Held, that it is not sufficient for persons who lend money to heads of religious institutions and desire to charge the institution with liability to show that the purposes for which the loans are taken are necessary, but they must also show that they made inquiries and satisfied themselves that on the occasion on which they made the advance the loan was justified by the state of the institution's finances.

51. Religious institution—Suit by person interested in endowed property for dispossession of an assignee of the last manager—Limitation—Limitation Act, 1877, Schedule II, article 120.

In 1899 plaintiff brought a suit as a worshipper to contest an alienation made in 1889, by the last manager of the endowed property and asked for the dispossession of the assignee in favour of the endowment, held, that the limitation applicable to such suit was that prescribed by article 120 of the Second Schedule to the Limitation Act, and that time began to run for the purposes of limitation from the date of the alienation.

52. Religious Institution—Mahant—Right of supporters or worshippers to remove a mahant for immorality.

In a suit by a person claiming as the lawful mahant of a dera for recovery of possession thereof and of the lands attached thereto, where it appeared that the plaintiff enticed away a young widow from the village and had gone off with such property belonging to the dera as he was able to seize, and deserted the dera which had been entirely supported by the villagers, and in the arrangements for which they had always taken a predominant part, and had after the plaintiff's desertion installed another mahant in his place and to which appointment the bhek had taken no exception, either as to the rejection of plaintiff or as to the appointment of the substitute in his place.

Held, that the plaintiff's conduct being unworthy of his office, the worshippers of the dera were fully justified in removing and competent to remove him and to appoint his successor.

53. Religious Institution—Endowment—Succession to endowed property—Right of a son or widow to succeed—Udasi Sahds.

Held, that according to general principles regulating the devolution of endowed property belonging to a religious institution of Udasi Sadhs, where the last incumbent dies without leaving a spiritual disciple or chela, the endowment reverts to that order, and that a claim by a son or widow of the last incumbent to succeed to such property under the ordinary law of inheritance is not maintainable HAR DEVI v. CHARN DAS. 101 P R 1905

54. Religious Institution—Succession to office of mahant—Right of a son to succeed—Udasi Sadhs of Ludhiana district.

55. Religious Institution—Mahant—Suit relating to appointment and removal of—Right to sue without obtaining sanction—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 539.

Held, that a suit for the removal of the incumbent mahant of a dharmsala who has misbehaved as mahant and misused the funds of the institution and for the appointment of the plaintiff in his place falls within the scope of section 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure and is not maintainable without obtaining previous sanction of the Collector to the institution of such suit. 56. Right of a head of a religious institution to succeed to occupancy rights in his representative capacity—Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, section 59.

Held by the Full Bench (1) that the limitation applicable to a suit by a mahant to set aside a mortgage of waqf property attached to a religious institution by his predecessor in office on the ground that the alienor had no power to alienate such property is that prescribed by article 144 of the Second Schedule to the Limitation Act and not that prescribed by article 134, and that it begins to run from the date of the plaintiff's appointment as mahant, i.e., the date on which he becomes entitled to possession by virtue of his appointment.

(2) That a suit for possession of land and also for a sum of money realized by the defendants as rent from persons to whom the said land had been leased, is not bad for misjoinder of causes of action. BASHESHAR LAL v. NATHA SINGH. 30 P R 1908 F. B.

58. Sale by mahant of immovable property belonging to his shrine—Suit by his successor to recover property—Limitation for such suit—Starting point of limitation—Limitation Act, 1877, Schedule II, article 134.

Held by the Full Bench that where immovable property conveyed in trust to a mahant of a religious institution for the time being for the benefit of the institution is sold by him for value, a suit by his successor in office to recover the property so alienated is governed by article 134 of the Indian Limitation Act, and is barred if the purchaser has been in possession of such property for more than twelve years from the date of his purchase. Held that a duly constituted manager of a religious institution cannot be removed from his office otherwise than by a civil suit instituted with a previous sanction obtained under either sections 14 and 18 of Act XX of 1863 or section 539 of the Civil Procedure Code.

It is not open to a self-constituted temple committee in the event of dispute with the manager either to suspend or remove him from office or to appoint another in his place.

REPEAL OF ACT.

1. Act XVII of 1877, section 39—Act IX of 1873, section 4- Second regular appeal —Pending appeal.

A second regular appeal was presented to the Additional Commissioner, Jullundur, under Act IX of 1873, in a suit under Rs. 50 in value, of the nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court but was heard and determined after Act XVII of 1877 came into force, which repealed the former Act, and (in section 39) excepted, from the benefit of the general provision as to second regular appeals in Small Cause Court suits under 50 rupees in value. Held, that Act XVII of 1877 did not take away the jurisdiction of the Court over a pending appeal in such a suit. PANA LALL v. ALA DIA SHAH. 4 P R 1878

2. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 617—Reference in case open to appeal —Reference in suit pending when Act X of 1877 came into force.

Plaintiffs instituted on 8th August 1877 a suit to cancel one of two decrees passed against them for Rs. 40 in respect of the same cause of action. On 12th November 1877 the Court of first instance referred certain questions of law arising in the suit, for the decision of the Chief Court, under section 617, Act X of 1877. Held, that as the suit was instituted before 1st October 1877 (the date on which the Act came into force) the procedure prior to decree was not governed by Act X of 1877 (vide last clause of section 3), and section 617 did not apply.

Per Smyth, J. Held, further, that the reference was not authorized by section 617, Act X of 1877, even if the suit had been instituted after 1st October 1877, as any decree which might be passed in the suit would not be final. ALADIN v. JOWAYA. 40 P R 1878

Held, by the Full Bench, that a special appeal lies from an order passed on appeal in course of execution of decree under Act VIII of 1859, where that Act allowed such appeal, although the appeal was presented after Act X of 1877 came into operation. BHAG SINGH v. BISHAMBER DAS.

4. Execution proceedings commenced under Act VIII of 1859, and continued under Act X of 1877—Application by auction purchaser for refund of part of purchase-money—Appeal from order.

Proceedings in execution of decree commenced while Act VIII of 1859 was in force, and continued after Act X of 1877 came into force, held, to be governed by the former Act.

Held, also, that, under Act VIII of 1859 the purchaser at an auction sale in execution of decree cannot recover summarily a portion of the purchase money paid by him on the ground that the judgmentdebtor had a less interest in the property sold than the auction-purchaser supposed himself to have purchased.

Semble, that under Act X of 1877 the auction-purchaser would have no right to the refund claimed, nor would the order of the Court refusing such refund be open to appeal. BULAKI CHUND v. MOKUNDA MALL. 16 P R 1880 such payment—Notice of claim—Duty of executors—Negligence, effect of.*

Held, that as no one is under legal obligation to pay debts due to the estate of a deceased person to any one claiming to be entitled to the effects of the deceased, except on the production of a probate, letters of administration, certificate or some authority to collect the debts due to the estate of the deceased, therefore a payment by a debtor to the widow of his deceased, creditor who had not obtained any authority to recover the debts due to her deceased husband's estate, was not a valid discharge to the debtor, and that the executors of the deceased creditor were fully entitled to ignore such a payment, and to sue for the same.

Mere neglect on the part of the executors to give notice of their claim to the debtor did not debar them from claiming the debt, although it might be a good reason for declining to give interest, damages or even costs as regards such a claim.

Held, that as all the facts in dispute had been thoroughly sifted and decided upon the action of the Settlement Officer in taking up the case without any petition or plaint before him, was not such an irregularity as would vitiate the decision and that the matter was res judicata. 18. Omission to appoint guardian ad litem for minor defendant.

Eshur Das purchased at a sale in execution of a decree the right and interest of Inderman in a house; and subsequently sued Inderman and Kour Sein, infant son of Inderman, for possession. The Court trying the suit held that Inderman was sole proprietor of the house, and on the 4th June 1867, gave Eshur Das a decree for possession of the entire house, which decree was not appealed from. In that suit a guardian ad litem was not appointed for Kour Sein, who, upon attaining his majority, sued the widow of Eshur Das for possession of half the house, alleging that the house was the ancestral property and that he had a half share in it. The suit was dismissed by the Lower Courts, on the ground that it was barred by the decree of 4th June 1867, under section 2 of Act VIII of 1859. The Chief Court held that the suit was not so barred, as Kour Sein was not properly before the Court in the former suit, no guardian ad litem having been appointed for him, and his co-defendant and father, Inderman, not being such guardian from the mere fact that he was his natural guardian. It was found by the Court that K. S. had not been adopted, and the widow obtained a decree. After her death, K. S. again took possession, and the collateral kindred of J. S. sued him. K. S. again pleaded his adoption by J. S. Held, that the finding of the Court in the suit between the widow and K. S. did not estop the latter from again setting up the plea of adoption as against the collaterals, there being no privity of estate between them and the widow. FATTEH SINGH v. HAKIM SINGH.

The judgment in that case declared the property to belong to the gaddi and not to the defendants by acquisition. In 1874, plaintiff sued again for a second act of alienation by the defendant with regard to the same land. Held, that the judgment of 1872 finally determined the question between the parties as to whether the land belonged to the gaddi or was defendant's acquired property, and that defendants could not re-open the question. 21. Decree of Court—Occupancy rights.

The landlord in 1865 obtained a decree in the Court of the Settlement Superintendent declaring certain tenants not to be hereditary and giving them protection for ten years. The Superintendent at first did not pass a final order but sent the case to the Extra Assistant Commissioner of Settlement for confirmation of an order that the Jats were non-hereditary tenants, but should be protected for ten years; the Extra Assistant Commissioner ordered a further inquiry and eventually directed the Superintendent himself to pass orders, leaving the Jats to appeal; upon this, the Superintendent recorded that his former order would take effect; no appeal was preferred. In 1875, the ten years' protection having expired, the landlord proceeded to eject the tenants under the Tenancy Act; and the present suit was brought by one of the tenants alleging that his ejectment was illegal, and that he was a tenant with right of occupancy. Held, that the suit would lie, and that it was not barred by the proceedings in 1865. 24. Decree—Compromise—Decree as to occupancy rights prior to passing of Tenancy Act—Punjab Tenancy Act, section 2.

In 1865 the present plaintiff brought a suit claiming proprietary rights in and possession of land. A jury of five assessors was appointed, and on their finding, which was accepted by the parties, the Court on 6th November 1865, passed its order that plaintiff should be maintained in cultivation as a tenant with rights of occupancy for seven years. In 1876 (after the seven years had expired), the plaintiff having been served with a notice of ejectment, brought the present suit to contest his liability to be ejected and claiming to hold as a tenant with rights of occupancy under section 5 of the Tenancy Act. Held, that the claim to occupancy rights was barred.

Per PLOWDEN, J.—1st, by the rule of res judicata, because the question of plaintiff's status was decided by a competent Court in a contested suit in 1865, and 2nd, by section 2 of the Tenancy Act, 1868.

Per FITZPATRICK, J.—That the suit was barred by the rule of res judicata; but even if that rule did not strictly apply, the order of 1865 having been made by consent of parties on a compromise, still that order barred the suit, the cause of action being the same.

Per PLOWDEN, J.—That if the order of 1865 was based on a compromise, without any decision being come to by the Court, the compromise itself furnished a complete answer to the second suit to establish the disputed right. BAGGU KHAN v. SUJA.

On 27th May 1870 the present plaintiff obtained a decree against the present defendant for redemption of mortgage of a shop on payment into Court within 15 days of Rs. 1,000. No steps were taken by plaintiff towards redeeming the mortgage, and no money was paid by him into Court or to the defendant on account of the Rs. 1,000. In May 1876 the plaintiff brought a fresh suit against defendant to redeem the shop on payment of Rs. 1,000. Held, that the second suit was not barred by the rule of res judicata. papers as joint owners of a holding. B. D. applied in 1877, in the Revenue department, for partition of his share, and the partition was objected to by N. M. on the ground that the holding had been divided in July 1874 by private partition, and was no longer joint. The objection was disallowed, and, on 20th December 1876, a partition was made and sanctioned.

On 22nd March 1877, N. M. brought a suit against B. D. and B. to cancel the partition made in the Revenue department, but the plaint was on the same day rejected on the ground that under section 65 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1871, such a suit was not maintainable.

Meanwhile, N. M. appealed to the Commissioner from the order of partition dated 20th December 1876, made by the Revenue authorities who on 19th July 1877 suspended that order so as to allow N. M. an opportunity to bring a civil suit. Accordingly on 18th August 1877, N. M. brought a fresh suit against B. D. and B. to prove that the holding had beeen privately divided in July 1874.

Held, assuming the order in the first suit to have been passed under section 32, Act VIII of 1859, that the second suit was barred by section 2, Act VIII of 1859.

On 12th April 1877, L. S. brought a suit against J. for custody of J. as his wife. J denied that she was married to L. S. and alleged that she was the wife of B. S.

L. M. and H. S. then sued M. M. for specific performance of an alleged agreement to sell the property to them for the Rs. 1,200 advanced, making R. C. and his grandmother as guardian M. Z., also defendants. That suit was dismissed on the ground that M. M., widow of N., had no power to convey the interest of R. C. whose guardian she was not.

L. M. and H. S. then instituted the present suit against the same defendants, seeking to recover Rs. 1,200 lent with interest and to bring to sale the interest of N. in the ancestral property, for the possession of which they formerly sued, excluding the interest therein which devolved on R. C. through his father, J. Both the lower Courts found that L. M. and H. S., plaintiffs, did in fact pay M. C. Rs. 1,200 in order to discharge the mortgage created by N., and decreed their claim in its entirety.

Held, that the present suit was not barred by the rule of res judicata. MUSSAMMAT ZAHRO v. LALLU MAL. 21 P R 1879

30. Finding of issue not material or necessary to decision of suit—Custom—Hindu Jats—Kalkat Got, Hoshiarpur district—Alienation by childless village proprietor in favour of brother's daughter's husband.

In 1873 D. S. and N., collateral relations of S. in the eleventh degree, sued to set aside a deed of sale of certain lands executed by S. in favour of K. S., husband of his brother's daughter. The Additional Commissioner, on appeal, while affirming the finding of the first Court that the sale was fictitious and fraudulent, dismissed the suit as premature, S. a male proprietor being then alive, reserving liberty to D. S. and N. to sue after his death.

S. shortly after died, whereupon D. S. and N. instituted the present suit against K. S. for possession of the same land, as heirs of S.

Held, by the Full Bench (LINDSAY, PLOWDEN and SMYTH, JJ.) that the former issue as to the sale being fictitious aud fraudulent, not being an issue material or necessary to the decision of the suit of 1873, the finding on the same was not res judicata so as to preclude K. S. from setting up his title to the land in suit, under the deed of sale as a bona fide transaction.

Held, further, by the Division Bench (PLOWDEN and ELSMIE, JJ.) that, by the custom of the Kalkat Got of Hindu Jats in the Hoshiarpur district, the collateral relations of S. in the eleventh degree, were not entitled to set aside the transfer made by S. of his land, which was followed by possession, even though such transfer was made without consideration. 31. Suit for possession—Plea as to occupancy rights—Reference to separate suit to establish occupancy rights.

V. sued K. and B. for possession of certain land. K. and B. pleaded as an answer to that suit that they were tenants with rights of occupancy. V's claim to possession was decreed, and K. and B. directed to bring a separate suit to establish their occupancy rights, whereupon they instituted the present suit. Held, that the decree for possession in the former suit, though erroneously ignoring the defence of K. and B. on the ground of occupancy right and leaving the question of their status undetermined, was a bar to the second suit. 32. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 13, Explanation V—Special appeal—Plea in bar taken for first time in.

In 1877 R. D. sued A. N. for possession of land over which a right of way was claimed in the present suit, on the ground that A. N. had sold it to R. D.—A. N. pleaded that the plot in suit had been reserved at the time of sale as a road.

The present suit was brought by J. and four others against R. D., H. and B. to establish a right of way over the same land. The Courts below found that the real purchaser from A N. was H. not R. D., and decreed a right of way in favor of plaintiffs.

On special appeal to the Chief Court, it was urged that the suit was barred under Explanation V to section 13 Act X of 1877.

Held, that, inasmuch as R. D. and A. N. were each singly, and not on behalf of others or in a representative capacity, litigating in the former suit, and inasmuch as it had been found that H. and not R. D. was the real purchaser, R. D. and A. N. had not, in the suit of 1877, bona fide litigated in respect of a right claimed in common with others within the meaning of Explanation V. of section 13, Act X of 1877, and, therefore, that the present suit was not barred.

Quære, whether such a plea can be taken in special appeal if not pleaded in bar to the suit in the first Court. HAR GOBIND v. JOTH RAM. 59 P R 1879

33. Act VIII of 1859, section 2—Partition—Suit by Hindu father as representative of ancestral estate—Subsequent suit by son raising issue decided in former suit—Finality of decision in former suit.

One J. M. sued his brother M. M. for a part of a house, alleging that at a partition of the family property the said house had fallen to his share. M. M. pleaded that no partition had ever taken place; but it was decided by the lower Courts that there had been a partition of all the ancestral property under which each had obtained possession of his share. This finding was upheld by the Chief Court. Subsequently J. M. sold his houses to one R. C. whereupon A. D., the eldest son of J. M., sued the vendor and vendee for possession of his share in the family property which he alleged was still joint, afterwards joining his brothers and father as co-defendants.

Held, that the suit was barred by section 2, Act VIII of 1859, as the present and former suits were respecting the same property, and the present plaintiff was clearly "claiming under" his father M. M. within the meaning of the above section and not in his own right. A son, according to the Mitakshara, takes by birth an interest in the ancestral estate; but until a partition has been effected between a father and his sons, the father possesses large powers over the ancestral estate, which he may exercise for lawful purposes in the interest of the family independently of his sons. By virtue of these powers, and whether with or without express authority from his sons, he is competent in the interest of the family of which he is the head to defend on behalf of his sons and the other subordinate associated members of the family as well as on his own behalf, a suit brought against him in respect of the ancestral estate of the family. The decision in such a suit brought against the father and defended by him in good faith and in the interests of his family, is binding upon the sons associated with him, even although he may not have had express authority from them to defend the suit, and although the suit may not have been expressly brought against him as representing the joint family. 34. Act X of 1877, section 13.

In a suit for redemption of mortgage, where it was found that a former suit between the same parties, and involving the same right, had been dismissed on the ground that certain third parties, the sons of one M., were the proper persons to sue, but the Court gave a direction in its judgment (which was not embodied in the decree) that if the said third parties did not sue within three years the plaintiffs might then do so, provided they were still within limitation; held, that a subsequent suit by the same plaintiffs after the lapse of the three years above mentioned (the sons of M. having made no claim in the meanwhile) was barred as a res judicata, as the direction contained in the Court's judgment must be regarded as mere surplusage, which could not enable the plaintiffs to institute a fresh suit with respect to a cause of action once heard and determined. 36. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 13, Explanation V.

The present suit was brought by all the proprietors of two out of three thullas of the village of Rohat against the proprietors of the third thulla to recover possession by right of inheritance of ⅔ths of the estate of one H., deceased, lately held on a life tenure by one Mussammat M. K. (the widow of H.'s son), on the ground of their being equally related with the defendants to the said H. It appeared that in a former suit, eight of the present plaintiffs (four from each thulla) sued Mussammat M. K. for the land now in suit, on the ground that she had forfeited her life interest by a remarriage. In that suit the present defendants were subsequently joined as parties, and it was finally decided that the then plaintiffs had no locus standi in Court, as defendants and not plaintiffs were the nearest heirs of H. It was found in the present suit that those of the plaintiffs who were not parties to the first suit had notice of that suit: that the plaintiffs in both suits had identical interests in the rights involved: that the then plaintiffs were clearly suing in a representative capacity for the whole of the two thullas: and also that the former suit had been litigated by the then plaintiffs in good faith and with due diligence.

Held, that the present suit was barred as a res judicata under Act X of 1877, section 13, read with Explanation V to that section, as (1) the question of title now raised was directly and substantially in issue in the first suit, looking at the substance rather than the form of the two actions, and (2) the present plaintiffs were claiming under the plaintiffs in the former suit within the meaning of the above Explanation. RES JUDICATA—contd.

—Jurisdiction of Revenue Court—Act XXXIII of 1871, section 65, Clause 3—Dispute at partition as to tenure of village—Suit for declaration of right according to possession.

Held, by the Full Bench, that when a common question, such as the tenure of a village community, arises between the members of a community, and one of such members sues the rest, the determination of such common question in that suit will not bind the whole of the defendants as res judicata, so as to bar a subsequent suit among themselves in which the same question is again raised, unless they have been distinctly at issue on the point in the suit, and acting as opposite parties, and the order made is one affecting the rights of the defendants among themselves.

At partition of the village lands, plaintiff claimed proprietary rights in certain lands in his possession, on the ground that the tenure of the village was Bhyachara and not Zamindari, as asserted by the opposite side, and that therefore possession regulated the measure of right. Held, by the Division Bench, that a suit by plaintiff in the Civil Court for a declaration of his right as above, was not barred by section 65, clause 3, of the Land Revenue Act of 1871. 40. Suit on mortgage bond—Omission by defendant to plead that the mortgaged property was waqf—Subsequent suit by defendant in former case to release from attachment the mortgaged property on ground of its being waqf.

The plaintiff in the present suit was sued as a defendant in a former suit based upon two mortgage bonds, the prayer of the plaint being in the alternative either for payment of principal and interest, or for possession of the mortgaged property. The then defendants pleaded that the money lent had been returned: the fact of the mortgage was not denied, but no plea was raised that it was inoperative as against the property on the ground that it was waqf. The present suit was for a declaration that the mortgaged property, which the plaintiff had attached in execution of the money decree obtained in the first suit, was waqf, and for its release from attachment.

Held, that the plaintiff might and ought to have pleaded in the former suit that the mortgage was inoperative to bind the property of which the plaintiff sought possession in the alternative; that the plea would have been relevant, and would, if decided in the defendant's favour, have been a complete answer to the prayer for possession, and that, therefore, the present suit was rightly dismissed as a res judicata. 41. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 13, Explanation II—Suit by reversioners to set aside alienation by widow—Former suit by same parties to set aside a similar alienation—Question of plaintiffs' locus standi as reversioners—Decision of that question in the first suit binding on parties to second suit—Matter directly and substantially in issue.

In a suit brought by the plaintiffs, as reversioners of one W., deceased, against Mussammat J., the widow of W., and one K., her brother's son-in-law, to obtain a declaration that an alienation by Mussammat J. in favour of the said K. of W.'s land was not binding upon them, it was urged, among other pleas, that the plaintiffs were not the reversionary heirs and entitled as such to bring the suit. It appeared that in a former suit brought by the same plaintiffs against Mussammat J., and the then alienee, to set aside an earlier alienation of the same land, it was put in issue and decided that the plaintiffs were by custom entitled to bring the suit.

Held, that the question of the plaintiffs' locus standi in the present suit was a res judicata, as the allegation by the defendants in the former suit that the plaintiffs were not the reversioners and therefore not entitled to sue to set aside the alienation, would, if proved, have been a good defence to that suit, and therefore the question of the plaintiffs' right as reversioners to challenge by suit the validity of an alienation of W.'s land made by Mussammat J., was directly and substantially in issue in the first suit within the meaning of Explanation II to section 13 of Act X of 1877, and the decision then passed was therefore binding upon the parties to the present suit. 42. Act X of 1877, section 13, Explanation II—Suit to contest his liability to ejectment—Omission of plaintiff to contest his liability to ejectment on ground of non-payment of compensation—Subsequent suit for compensation.

Held, that a suit for compensation claimed as due for improvements made before the service of the notice, is not maintainable by a tenant, who has been served with notice of ejectment, and has brought a suit under section 25 of the Tenancy Act to contest his liability to ejectment, without making non-payment of compensation a ground for disputing his liability, and whose suit has been dismissed. The right of the plaintiff to compensation at the time when the notice of ejectment was served being a matter which ought to have been made a ground of attack in such suit, must, under Explanation II to section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, be deemed to have been directly and substantially in issue in the former suit, and consequently the trial of the second suit is barred under the provision of that section. 43. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 13, Explanation II.

The widow of one A. Y. having succeeded to a 5-biswas share in the village, mortgaged this share by way of conditional sale to one S. R., now represented by the defendant. The mortgagee having foreclosed was put into possession of the land under a decree for possession. After the death of the widow, one of the present plaintiffs, brother of A. Y., sued to recover from the mortgagee certain resumed revenue-free grants in the village, which had been settled with the widow, on the ground that this land was not included in the mortgage or in the decree for possession, saying that he would sue separately for the mortgaged land as heir of A. Y. The only issue in this case was whether the land claimed was included in the mortgage and subsequent decree. This issue was decided by the first Court in plaintiff's favour, but the appellate Court (after impleading the the plaintiffs nephew, the second plaintiff in the present suit) accepted the appeal and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. Meanwhile, and while the above appeal was pending, the two plaintiffs brought the present suit to recover the 5-biswas share from the defendant on the ground that the widow's alienation was only valid for her life and did not bind them as heirs of A. Y.

Held, that the present suit was not barred by section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code; as, though the plaintiff in the former suit might have made the invalidity of the alienation ground of attack, he did not in fact do so, and, the question not having been raised in that suit, the matter could not be said to have been heard and finally decided by the Court. SYAD YAR KHAN v. RAM CHAND. 24 P R 1882

44. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 13, Expl. II.

Plaintiff sued to recover a sum alleged to be due for interest on a mortgage originally entered into by the defendant with one S., the benefit of which was alleged to have been transferred by defendant to her brother-in-law, the present plaintiff, in consideration of his having paid to S. the principal sum secured by the mortgage. It was found as a fact that plaintiff had paid the mortgage money out of his own funds to S., and it was therefore contended that he held the position of an equitable mortgagee and succeeded to all the rights possessed by S. under his mortgage.

It appeared that, previously to the above suit, the present defendant sued the present plaintiff to recover possession of the mortgaged land. In that suit the then defendant did not plead his rights as mortgagee, and it was therefore contended that he was debarred from maintaining the present suit by section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, Explanation II.

Held, that this contention was not well founded, as the present plaintiff had never contended that he was under the terms of the mortgage entitled to possession of the land, and the defence that he was mortgagee would have been no answer to the former suit for possession, unless he could have shown that as mortgagee he was entitled to retain possession. 45. Estoppel by conduct.

When a defendant has successfully objected in a previous suit between the parties that the Court had not jurisdiction to entertain a portion of the claim, he cannot be allowed in a subsequent suit for such portion to contend that the subject-matter of the latter suit should have been adjudicated upon in the former. 46 Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 13—First suit brought by plaintiffs as reversioners to set aside alienation by widow—Subsequent suit for pre-emption of the subject of the same alienation.

The present plaintiffs first brought a suit against one Mussammat H. and the present defendant, to have the sale of a house by Mussammat H. to the said defendant cancelled, on the ground that they (plaintiffs) were the reversionary heirs of Mussammat H.'s late husband and entitled as such to succeed to the house on her death and that the sale was made without necessity. That suit having been dismissed on the ground that the sale was for necessity, the plaintiffs brought the present suit against the purchaser (Mussammat H. having in the meantime died) to obtain possession of the house in virtue of their right of pre-emption.

Held, that the suit was not barred by section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, as the matter directly and substantially in issue in the present suit, that is, the plaintiffs' right of pre-emption in respect of the house in dispute, was clearly not in issue in the former suit, either expressly or constructively, with reference to Explanation II to section 13 of the Code. 47. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 13—Explanation V—Suit by or against one co-sharer how far binding on another co-sharer—Notice.

In the present suit, the plaintiff claimed (1) a declaration that he was entitled to build up a wall, (2) to erect a balakhana or upper story, so as to exclude defendants from the use of a roof, and (3) an injunction to restrain the defendants from interfering with his building the said wall, alleging that his right to build both the wall and the balakhana was established by previous decisions. The present appellant, who was one of the defendants, urged (among other pleas) that the previous decrees upon which the plaintiff relied were not binding upon him as he was no party thereto, and had received no notice of action. It appeared that in the first of the two suits referred to, in which the right to build the wall was in issue, plaintiff sued one M. M., the brother of the present appellant, alone for an act of obstruction committed by the defendant some few days before suit, and although M. M. in his written answer set up a claim to the wall in dispute and urged that the plaintiff had taken advantage of his father's death and of the absence of his elder brother (the present appellant) in Hindustan to open out a doorway leading to the top of the defendant's house, there was nothing to show that he professed to defend the action otherwise than on his own behalf; it was also clear from the file that M. M. had no authority from his brother to defend the suit or to submit its determination to the plaintiff's oath, as he eventually did, nor was it alleged that the present appellant had any notice of action. In the second case in which the right to the roof on which it was now sought to build the balakhana was in issue, the position of the parties was reversed, M. M. the brother of the present appellant being the plaintiff, and the present plaintiff one of the defendants. In this suit also there was no allegation that the plaintiff was suing not merely on his own behalf but also on behalf of his absent brother, although it appeared that the doorway which he sought to have closed opened out on to the roof of a house which belonged to the plaintiff and his brother jointly, and it was clear that he had no authority from his brother (the present appellant) to conduct the case on his behalf, nor was it alleged that the said appellant had any notice of this suit.

Held that, under the circumstances stated above, the present appellant was not bound by the decisions in the suits above referred to, with reference to the provisions of Explanation V, section 13, Act X of 1877.

Per RATTIGAN, J.—The language of the above clause seems to contemplate a case where a large number of persons are interested in the one right, and the provisions of the above section must be read with section 30 of the Act, as the Legislature could never have intended to so far depart from the rule so consonant with natural justice and so well established, that persons should not be bound by a decision in a suit of which they had no notice and which was obtained behind their backs.

Per ELSMIE, J.—Although I have some difficulty in holding that it is open to us to rule positively that section 13, Explanation V, must be read with section 30, I am quite clear that this part of the law must be construed very strictly, and that the Courts are bound not to allow Explanation V, section 13 to operate as a bar to litigation unless they are firmly persuaded that it applies to the exact case in point. This provision of the law was not intended to apply to a case like the present, where a junior brother finding himself involved in litigation regarding property held jointly by himself and an elder brother, during the absence of that brother in a distant part of the country, did his best to defend the joint rights, but at the same time pointed out to the Court that advantage had been taken by the opposite party of the fact of his elder brother's absence; and where no notice whatever had been given through the Courts to that elder brother of the fact of the pendency of the litigation. Held by the Full Bench, that the decision in a former suit between the same parties of a matter of which the decision was necessary to the decision of the former suit is conclusive upon the same matter when it comes in issue in a subsequent suit between the same parties in the same Court, both suits being equally within the competency of such Court. MUHAMMAD BAKSH v. NAMDAR KHAN. 118 P R 1882 F. B.

49. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 13, Explanation III.

Plaintiff's father, who was mafidar of ¾ths of the village of Sekhwan, entered into a private arrangement with his brother, the grand-father of defendant, whereby in consideration of the brother assisting him in collecting the produce in kind from the proprietors he was to be allowed a half-share of whatever remained from the proceeds of the sale of the produce, after deducting the Government revenue on the resumed portion of the mafi and the mafidar's own dues. In pursuance of this arrangement the produce of certain harvests was stored, preparatory to division, in two granaries, but before any division was effected the two brothers died. Disputes then arose between their descendants, and the present plaintiff filed a suit against the present defendant in which, ignoring the former agreement between his father and uncle, he claimed possession of the entire grain, contending that defendant had no title to it whatever. This suit was eventually dismissed, the Court holding that the plaintiff was not entitled to more than a ½ share of the grain, which the defendant had never refused to give him, and that according to the practice which had prevailed between the father and grand-father of the parties, it was usual to sell the grain, and after deducting the Government revenue to divide the balance in equal proportions. The Court added that it appeared that a sum of Rs. 673-12-0 was due to plaintiff for the Government and mafidar's share of the revenue, but as it was not clear whether any portion of this sum had already been paid by the defendant's grand-father, or what was the state of the accounts between the parties, it left it open to the plaintiff to bring a separate suit for this item. Plaintiff then brought the present suit for the revenue of 10 harvests.

Held, that the present suit was not barred by reason of section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. As a defence to the action brought by the plaintiff in the first suit, it was open to the defendant to plead, as he did, that the plaintiff was not entitled to more than a half-share of the grain stored up in the granaries under an agreement which was binding between the parties, and that as his right to this portion had not been denied he had no cause of action, and since the Court held the agreement proved and dismissed the plaintiff's suit, it may be taken as having finally decided that the rights of the parties were governed by the terms of the agreement and to this extent the decision in question was a res-judicata controlling the rights of the parties; but it could not perse operate as a bar under section 13 of the Code to the maintenance of another suit by the same plaintiff to enforce the agreement, nor again, as the plaintiff did not claim in his first plaint any relief with respect to the revenue and mafi charges, could the dismissal of his suit be deemed to be a refusal by the Court to grant any relief with respect thereto, within the meaning of Explanation III of section 13. Syad Yar Khan v. Ram Chand (No. 24 *P. Plaintiff, who was the purchaser of the rights of one L. D. before the sale, but that defendant had wrongfully taken the produce. This suit was dismissed on the ground that as redemption had not been effected, no right to the produce had yet accrued to the plaintiff. Subsequently, in another proceeding, the plaintiff and L. D. obtained a decree for redemption on payment of a certain sum in addition to that already paid; and the plaintiff then instituted the present suit against the defendant, again claiming the mesne profits of Kharif 1937, alleging that as the mortgage-money had been paid in Har 1937, the defendant was not entitled to the produce subsequent to that date.

Held, that as the previous case was between the same parties and for the same matter as the present suit, and the plaintiff was not allowed to withdraw his claim with permission to sue again, but the claim was dismissed, it could not be maintained that the previous decision was not a final decision of the same matter: if the plaintiff was entitled to the produce of Kharif 1937, he was entitled at the time when that suit was brought, and the Court was in error in deciding that no cause of action had arisen; but the decision not having been appealed against became final and barred the present suit. An ex-parte decree, which has never been executed and which the defendant therefore could apply to have set aside, cannot be held to have become final within the meaning of Explanation IV, section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code: but such a decree is admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit between the same parties, and where a question arises in the second suit common to that and the former suit, it is not enough for the defendant to say that he absented himself from the trial of that question; but he must at least show grounds which would have justified the Court in setting aside the ex parte decree, had he applied for this, or that owing to some fraud, or some irregularity in the proceedings, it should not be treated as binding on him. In a suit to recover possession of certain land from the defendants, it appeared that a previous suit for the same relief had been dismissed by the Munsiff on the erroneous ground that an earlier decision had made the matter res judicata, and that the plaintiff's proper course was to take out execution of the decree then passed.

Held, that the Munsiff's decision was a final decision of a matter directly and substantially in issue between the parties within the meaning of section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (see Explanation IV), and that the same question could not

55. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 13—Matter directly and substantially in issue in former suit but not finally decided—Estoppel.

In a former suit between the parties to the present case, the plaintiff sued the defendant, the widow of a Sikh Jat, on the allegation that by contracting a karewa marriage with one K. S. she had forfeited the property of her deceased husband, which the plaintiff claimed accordingly. The defendant denied the karewa marriage, and the Court without any enquiry on this subject dismissed the suit on the ground that, whilst the defendant was alive, plaintiff had no cause of action. Subsequently the plaintiff sued the defendant on the same ground, alleging that whatever might have happened at the time of the first suit, there was no doubt now that the widow had married R. S. three years ago, or two years after the first suit was decided.

Held, that the previous decision did not make the matter of the karewa marriage a res judicata, as though the said marriage was alleged on the one hand and denied on the other, the Court did not decide whether it had taken place, and therefore did not decide what its effect would be; and the defendant could not be allowed to plead in the present case, when the plaintiff alleged that karewa had since taken place, that it had really been carried out before the former suit was brought, if this would be any bar to the plaintiff's right to bring the present suit. 56. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 13—Competent Court.

In a suit for possession of a shop valued at Rs. 1,500 it was contended that the issue whether the relation of landlord and tenant continued to exist between the parties in respect of the shop was res judicata, because in a previous suit for rent decided between the same parties in 1879 the same material issue was decided. It appeared, however, that the Court in which the suit for rent was brought could not have entertained a suit for possession of the shop, or for a declaration of the plaintiff's title as landlord, its value, Rs. 1,500, being beyond the jurisdiction of the said Court.

Held by the Full Bench, following the decision of the Privy Council in Misir Raghobandial v. Sheo Baksh Singh (I. L. R. 9 Calc. 439), that the plea of res judicata was not maintainable, as the words "finally decided "by a Court of competent jurisdiction" in section 13 of Act X of 1877 make it necessary that the Court which decided the issue relating to the title in the previous suit for rent should have been competent to decide a suit for possession of the property, in order to make its decision upon that issue conclusive in a subsequent suit for possession. Muhammad Baksh v. Namdar Khan (No. 118 *P. 57. Suit for correction of Settlement record—Subsequent suit for declaration of title—Act X of 1877, sections 13, 43.

In a suit for declaration of proprietary right in certain shamilat land, it appeared that the plaintiffs had instituted a previous suit against the same defendants for correction of the Settlement record by entering their names as sole proprietors of the same lands in the Settlement Court, which at the time was the only Court which could entertain such suit under a notification which further declared that a suit for declaration of the title to rights of which the claimant was in possession was cognizable only by the Civil Courts of ordinary jurisdiction. The plaintiffs' suit was dismissed by the Settlement Officer on the sole ground that the suit for correction of the Settlement record was barred by time, no adjudication being made upon the merits of the claim.

Held, that neither the form of the claim in the former suit nor the decree therein was a bar under section 43 or section 13, Civil Procedure Code, to the maintenance of the present suit for declaration of proprietary rights in the same land to which the former suit related. 59. Decision in former suit of question not essential to decision of case—Finality of such decision.

In a suit for possession of certian land, it appeared that in a previous case the present plaintiff sued the present defendants for the rent for one season of the same land, alleging they were tenants of his father, H. The Judicial Assistant (on appeal) found that the plaintiff was the son of H., but instead of proceeding to decide the suit on the merits, dismissed the plaintiff's appeal on the ground that he should first sue for possession of the land and then for mesne profits, or should sue for both together.

Held, that the previous decision that plaintiff was the son of H. did not make the same question a res judicata in plaintiff's favour in the present suit, as the previous decision of the Judicial Assistant must be regarded as a decision that the suit would not lie as framed, and therefore no conclusion come to by him upon any question of fact arising in the case which was not essential to that decision could be regarded as a final decision of that question between the parties. by their landlord for enhancement of rent, that the plaintiff had not paid compensation for improvements made prior to the institution of a former suit for enhancement between the same parties.

Held, that as the defendants might and ought to have pleaded in defending the former suit that they had not been compensated for improvements as required by sections 37 and 38 of the Tenancy Act, their omission to do so precluded them from now bringing forward such plea under Explanation II to section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Kaka v. Bhola (No 96 *P. Held, that a decision in a proceeding under the solvency sections of the Punjab Laws Act (IV of 1872), though based on findings exactly coinciding with the requirements and terms of section 351 of the Civil Procedure Code, does not bind the same parties as a res judicata in a subsequent proceeding under section 344 of the Civil Procedure Code; as insolvency proceedings under the special provisions of the Punjab Laws Act do not amount to a "suit" as the term is used in section 13 of the Code. The first Court gave a decree, but on appeal to the Commissioner the claim was dismissed as barred by section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that the previous decision of the Chief Court did not in any way bar the claim as now brought. The first suit was dismissed as premature, but the plaintiffs having cured this defect by presenting the hundis, a cause of action arose when defendants refused to pay. Held, that the second suit was not barred by reason of the plaintiffs not having claimed the ownership of the land in the former suit, first, because the plaintiffs in the two suits were acting in different capacities, as in the first suit they were promoting with others a joint claim, whereas in the second they were propounding a private and exclusive title: secondly, because the words "matter which might and ought to have been made ground of attack" in Explanation II, section 13, Civil Procedure Code, show that a plaintiff is not bound to assert at once all his titles to property or to be estopped from hereafter advancing them. Held, following Shiba Mal v. Paira Singh (No. 86 P. R. 1877) and Ram Singh v. Nodh Singh (No. 93 P. R. 1879), that the present suit was not barred by section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. BALMOKAND v. RAMJI LAL. 20 P R 1887

Plaintiff in a former suit against the same defendant claimed possession of a site after demolition of a building thereon. On appeal the Judicial Assistant made an order dismissing the appeal, observing that plaintiff had not sued to demolish the building. No decree was drawn up in the Appellate Court, nor did the plaintiff make any further appeal or apply for a review of judgment or for a formal decree to be drawn up in the Appellate Court. Subsequently, however, he brought a second suit against the same defendant for demolition of the same building.

Held, that the second suit could not be maintained, as plaintiff was claiming a relief sought in the former suit and refused by the Munsif in his decree in that suit, which decree stood unreversed. SARDAR WASAWA SINGH v. AMIR 79 P R 1887

Held that a plea of res judicata may be raised at any stage of a case, the words of section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code being imperative, provided that where the plea is urged in the Appellate Court the facts are already in evidence which are alleged to bar the suit under the above section.

Held further, that a widow, whether Hindu or Muhammadan, in possession of her husband's estate in the Punjab, and holding on the usual customary life interest, is a representative for binding all future heirs on matters which may be decided, after a full and fair trial, in bona fide litigation between her and third parties.

In a suit by plaintiff, who was in possession of defendant's land as mortgagee for a declaration that he had a right (inter alia) to the fruit of the trees standing on the land at the time of the mortgage, it appeared that the question of such right had formed the subject of previous litigation between the parties, plaintiff having sued for Rs. 15, the value of the fruit of certain trees taken by the defendant, in which suit it was held by the Munsif, and on appeal by the Judicial Assistant, that the agreement in the mortgage-deed did not entitle the plaintiff to the fruit of the trees standing at the time of the mortgage. It was found that the Munsif who decided the first suit would have had jurisdiction to try the present suit.

Held, that the part of plaintiff's claim relating to the fruit of trees standing at the time of the mortgage had been rightly dismissed as a res judicata.

The dismissal of a suit in terms of section 102 of the Civil Procedure Code for the plaintiff's non-appearance does not operate in favour of the defendant as res judicata, though it precludes the plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action.

A. and B. who were agnates of K. sued K.'s widow for an injunction restraining her from alienating the property of K. in her possession, but the suit was dismissed under section 102 of the Civil Procedure Code on account of the non-appearance of the plaintiffs. The widow afterwards executed a deed of gift to P. who was a stranger to the succession of the fee of K.'s estate, and A. and B. with two other agnates of K. sued the widow and K. for a declaration that the deed of gift did not affect their reversionary rights.

Held by the Privy Council, that the dismissal of the first suit was not a bar to the second suit. MUSSAMMAT CHAND KOUR v. PARTAP SINGH. 177 P R 1888 P. C.

70. Res judicata—section 13—Directly and substantially in issue—Decision on a point not material to the ultimate decision of the case.

The question referred was whether when a suit is dismissed by reason of the decision on some collateral point, a decision upon an issue not necessary to the dismissal of the suit upon the ground on which it is actually dismissed, is a final decision upon a matter directly and substantially in issue, so as to be res judicata.

Held by the Full Bench that the true test is whether the matter has been directly and substantially in issue in the former case, and has been heard and finally decided. No matter can be said to be directly and substantially in issue or to have been finally decided unless a decision thereon is necessary for the decision of the case upon the ground on which the final decision ultimately proceeds. Other matters may have been directly, though not substantially, but rather incidentally in issue and may have been heard without being finally decided, and the decision on these matters does not constitute res judicata.

In 1869, C. sued his brothers, M. N. and K. for partition of ¼ share in ancestral property. N. pleaded that he, as the adopted son of P., was entitled to one half, and the other half only was liable to distribution among the remaining brothers. M. and K. combined with C. in denying the adoption, but the Court found in N's favour that he had been adopted as alleged. Some years later, N. sued to recover half the property from M. C. and K. Defendants pleaded that the plaintiff had not been adopted, and was entitled to ¼ share only. N. contended that this question had been finally decided in the previous suit. Held, that this contention was correct. In cases where there is a conflict of interest between defendants inter se, an adjudication of rights may be res judicata between them as well as between the plaintiff and the defendants.

73. Res judicata—Claim to inheritance—First suit based on custom—Second on Hindu Law—Material findings.

Plaintiffs first sued defendant for a declaration that by custom they were entitled to succeed to the estate of T. in preference to defendant. It was decided in that case that the suit failed on the merits as also on the ground that the plaintiffs being entitled to sue for possession had sued for declaration only. Plaintiffs then sued defendants for the same estate on the ground that they were entitled to it by Hindu Law. Defendant pleaded the bar of res judicata. Held, (i) that the decision in the first cases on the merits was material and necessary ; the decree was based on it, and that therefore the second suit was barred ; (ii) that it was also barred on the ground that the plaintiffs had only one ground of action—their title to inheritance. If they were entitled to succeed both by law and custom they were bound to make both as their ground for attack in the first suit not having done so, the second claim was barred by Explanation II, section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. The collaterals of a sonless proprietor sued the donor and the donees to obtain a declaration that the gift by him of certain land, houses and movables would not affect their reversionary interests. They obtained a decree in the Court of first instance. Defendants appealed, pending appeal, the donor died and the plaintiffs, reversioners, their estate having now fallen in possession, brought a second suit for possession. This also was decreed and defendants appealed. Both appeals were heard on the same date. In the declaratory suit the Court of first appeal upheld the gift as to the houses and the movables and declared it invalid as to land. In the possession case following its decision in the previous case, it dismissed the claim to houses and movables and decreed as to land. Plaintiffs appealed from the latter order alone. Held that the hearing of the appeal was barred by section 13, Explanation IV, by plaintiffs' omission to appeal from the decree of even date in the declaratory suit. 75. Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13—" Court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit."

In 1888, the plaintiff in the present suit instituted a suit against F. and G., the present defendants, for Rs. 5, the value of the loppings of certain trees which plaintiff alleged to be his property.

The defendants denied the cutting of the branches, and further pleaded that the trees were their own property standing on their own land.

The issues were : Whether the trees

belonged to the plaintiff, and if so, whether the defendants had misappropriated the loppings.

The suit was heard by a Munsif, 2nd class. He found that the trees stood upon plaintiff's land and were his property, and gave plaintiff a decree for Rs. 2, at which sum he estimated the loppings taken by the defendants.

The defendants appealed to the Subordinate Judge. He decided that the trees stood on defendants' land ; and therefore dismissed the suit, an application by the plaintiff to the Chief Court on the Revision Side being summarily rejected.

The plaintiff then instituted the present suits, claiming separately from each defendant the land and trees in his possession, the land and the trees being admittedly the same as in the former suit.

The present suits were tried by a Munsif, 1st class, the value of the subject-matter of one suit being Rs. 15 and of the other Rs. 5.

The Munsif decreed both claims in part; but the Divisional Judge on appeal dismissed both suits as barred by the provisions of section 13, Civil Procedure Code, 1882.

The plaintiff appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that the Court which decided the first suit was not a Court of jurisdiction competent to try the subsequent suits, within the true meaning of section 13, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, and that the subsequent suits were therefore not barred by the rule of res judicata.

The true test of the competency of the Court which decided the former suit or issue is not merely the jurisdictional powers of the original Court in which the previous suit was instituted, but the jurisdiction of that Court viewed in connection with the course of appeal allowed in that particular case, and the degree of finality attaching to the decisions of each of the Courts, original and appellate, which may be called upon to exercise jurisdiction in the case.

In the present instance, the Munsif who tried the suit of 1888 would have had jurisdiction to try the present suits ; but he would not have tried the second suits with the same jurisdiction as the first, inasmuch as the first suit was a small cause and one appeal lay to the District Judge, whose decision was final, whereas the present suits were land suits, appealable in the first instance to the Divisional Judge, with a possible further appeal to the Chief Court.

By an administrative proceeding in 1863, the object of which was to determine whether the tenants of the village should be recorded as having rights of occupancy, the Settle-

Held, in a suit instituted in 1890, to contest a notice of ejectment, that if the tenant be found to possess the qualifications required by section 5, sub-section (1) (c) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, he would be entitled to a decree for occupancy rights (No. 7 P. R 1890, Revenue followed.)

Since 1863, two Tenancy Acts have been passed, and they have conferred rights of occupancy on many tenants who, prior to the passing of these laws, might have failed to prove themselves to be occupancy tenants. It was no answer to the plaintiff in the present suit who claimed to be entitled to occupancy right under section 5, sub-section (1) (c) of the Act of 1887, to say that, in a Settlement proceeding in 1863, or even for the matter of that in a judicial proceeding, they were found to be tenants-at-will. 77. Civil Procedure Code, section 13—Cause of action—Mortgage—Sale.

In January 1878, defendant's father mortgaged a house to plaintiff for Rs. 90, the house to remain in possession of the mortgagor, and the mortgage-debt to carry interest repayable in one year. If not paid within this period, the mortgage-deed provided that the mortgagor would sell the house to the mortgagee for the mortgage-debt.

In January 1885, plaintiff sued on the mortgage-deed, his plaint concluding with a prayer for entry on the house and completion of the sale. The suit was decided ex parte in favour of plaintiff. In execution, plaintiff attempted to get possession of the house but the Court of execution construed the decree as merely entitling him to a conveyance, and eventually itself gave him a deed of sale of the house.

Plaintiff then brought the present suit for possession of the house setting out in his plaint the mortgage that he sued upon the mortgage-deed for completion of the sale and got a deed of sale from the Court; and that this, notwithstanding, the defendant refused to give him possession.

The lower Courts dismissed the plaintiff's suit as barred by section 13, Civil Procedure Code, because the plaintiff in the suit of 1885, had asked for possession and the decree had refused him that relief.

Held, upon application for revision that the decrees of the lower Courts must be reversed. The plaintiff alleged a cause of action subsequent to the decree of 1885. All that was in effect decided by the previous suit was that plaintiff was not at that time entitled to possession.

The suit remanded for retrial as though it were a suit by the plaintiff as mortgagee for possession of the house consequent upon foreclosure proceedings having been duly taken by him prior to the suit of 1885, and subject to any defence that the

The defendant in the present suit executed a mortgage-deed for Rs. 757 in favour of the present plaintiff, the deed reciting receipt of consideration in full.

When before the Registering officer the mortgagor denied receipt of Rs. 217 out of the mortgage-money. The deed was nevertheless registered, the objection being recorded.

Thereupon the mortgagee sued the mortgagor for Rs. 217, which was decreed by the Munsif and District Judge but the Chief Court, upon revision, dismissed the mortgagee's suit on the ground that the plaint disclosed no cause of action.

After the decision of the lower Courts in the mortgagee's favour, and while the petition for revision was pending in the Chief Court, the mortgagee filed a suit for possession of the mortgaged property under the terms of the mortgage-deed. The first Court without fixing issues or recording evidence, rejected the plaint on the ground that the plaintiff (the mortgagee) having already sued for and obtained a decree for a refund of a portion of the mortgage-money which decree then stood unreversed, could not be heard to ask for specific relief on the ground that the defendant (the mortgagor) had received the whole of the consideration money.

After the Chief Court had rejected the mortgagee's claim (decreed by the lower Courts) for Rs. 217 the mortgagee instituted a fresh suit for possession of the land.

The Divisional Judge dismissed this last suit as barred by the rule of res judicata.

Held, that the suit was not res judicata, it being impossible to affirm that the matter in issue in the first suit had been heard and finally decided, the fact being that the Court had refused to adjudicate upon the merits at all. KOKAN MAL v. MIR ALAM.

81. Civil Procedure Code, section 13, Explanation II—Ground of defence or attack in former suit—Parties litigating under the same title.

The widow of one K. B. sued K. B.'s brother (G. H. and daughter for her deceased husband's share of the estate for her life, and obtained a decree for half the property. While the above suit was pending G. H. died, and the present plaintiff, who was K. B.'s son-in-law, was brought on the record (with others) as G. H.'s legal representative, but was not allowed by the Court to put forward any claim of his own as K. B.'s khanadamad in answer to the widow's claim. Subsequently the said plaintiff sued the widow and daughter of K. B. for K. B.'s estate as his heir and khanadamad.

Held, that the suit was not barred as res judicata under Explanation II, section 13, Civil Procedure Code, by reason of the previous decision as the plaintiff was not litigating under the same title in the two suits, and moreover his title to succeed as K. B.'s khanadamad was properly rejected as a ground of defence in the previous litigation. AHMAD KHAN v. MUSSAMMAT BHAGBHARI.

82. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13—Res judicata—Matter directly and substantially in issue between parties under whom they or any of them claim.

An assignee cannot be held bound by a decision relating to the property assigned in a suit instituted after the assignment and to which he was not a party.

An assignor who has assigned away his interests in certain property cannot claim to represent his assignee in a suit relating to that property which has been instituted after the assignment.

Semble.—The words "parties under whom they or any of them claim" in section 13, Civil Procedure Code, can only refer to a title which had not come into existence at the date of the former suit. MADU v. UMAR DIN.

83. Civil Procedure Code, sections 42 and 43—Whole claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make—Previous suit dismissed as premature, there being no cause of action.

Section 43, Civil Procedure Code, is not applicable where the suit set up in bar has been dismissed because there was no cause of action.

A plaintiff must under section 43 include the whole of the claim which he is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action and cannot afterwards sue for any portion of the claim in respect of which he may have omitted to sue. The object of the section, which is a sequel to section 42, is to prevent further litigation. A premature suit is not within the purview of the section at all.

What is contemplated in the second clause of the section is a second suit advancing a claim supplementary to the first and in respect of "the portion omitted or relinquished in the first suit." When the cause of action arises a second suit may be brought for the whole of the claim arising out of it, notwithstanding, the dismissal of the first suit as premature and it need not be for the same claim or the same remedies as was sued for in the first plaint. 84. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 43—Suit to include whole claim—Plaintiff having several causes of action suing in respect of one only—Subsequent suit in respect of another cause of action.

Held that a plaintiff is not required by section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code to bring his suit upon all the causes of action he has, nor is he prevented if he renounces any, from suing again; all that is required by that section is that he should include the whole claim which he is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action. 85. Succession—Daughters—Suit by reversioners to contest daughters' succession—Compromise—Subsequent suit by same reversioners to set aside alienation by daughters—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 43.

One K. S., a Hindu Jat, died leaving a son Kh., two daughters, the present petitioners, and certain immovable property. Kh. married and had a son L., who survived him. After the death of Kh. and the remarriage of his widow the daughters of K. S. went to the house left by K. S. to reside with, and take care of, their minor nephew L. On the death of L., the reversionary heir of K. S. sued the said daughters who had taken possession of both the land and horses left by K. S., but in 1860 this suit was compromised, one-third of the land and houses being left with the daughters. On the 28th January 1893 the daughters having sold part of the said house property to B. S. and C. S., the reversioners again sued, praying for a declaration that the sale should not affect their rights after the death of the female vendors, and they pleaded that the sale was not for a necessary purpose and that the consideration was fictitious. The defendants who were the daughters and the vendees pleaded that the daughters had inherited the property in dispute from K. S.; that they were full owners and had been in possession for the preceding 27 years, and that the sale was for necessity and for full consideration.

The lower Courts found that in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the presumption was that the daughters were not full owners but merely life tenants; that their possession was permissive and not adverse to the plaintiffs; that the sale was not for necessity or for consideration, and that the plaintiffs were not barred, under section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code from suing by reason of their suit in 1860, and decreed plaintiff's claim. A certificate to appeal having been refused by the Divisional Judge, the defendant-daughters applied to the Chief Court on the Revision side, to admit a further appeal on the following grounds:

"(I). That the certificate should have been granted as there is a point of law and custom involved;
 (a) does section 43 apply or not?
 (b) have, or have not, the daughters by custom more than a life tenancy?
(II). The daughters have full power to alienate.
(III). There was a necessity."

Held, that the real question was not whether the daughters by custom took more than a life tenancy, but what were their rights under the compromise of 1860, and that there was no ground for admitting an appeal upon that question.

Held, further, that the present suit being upon an entirely new cause of action was not barred under section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code by the omission to claim the house in the former suit. MUSSAMMAT IND KAUR v. SUJAN SINGH. 47 P R 1894

86. Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13—"Parties under whom they or any of them claim."

Held, that where A. claims under, in the sense of deriving title from B. and C., who were parties to a previous suit relating to the same subject-matter but who did not fill that character before, or at the time when A. obtained his title from them, A. is not claiming under a party to that suit within the meaning of section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code and is not bound by the decision in such previous suit.

87. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13—Pro forma defendant in former suit suing former plaintiffs in respect of same subject matter—Res judicata.

In 1890 the sons of one Nadu sued the descendants of Janu and Kadu on the allegations that certain land which they stated had been given by one Nur, the father of Nadu and Kadu, to Mussammat K. for her maintenance and ought to have reverted on her death to the descendants of Nur, had improperly been entered in the names of all the descendants of one Neka, the common ancestor. The plaintiffs admitted that the sons of Kadu were equally entitled with the plaintiffs, but they made them defendants on the ground that they had refused to join in the plaintiff's claim. At the trial the sons of Kadu applied to be made co-plaintiffs but no order was passed on this application and the Court finding that the land had belonged to Nur, decreed the whole claim in favour of the plaintiffs. On an appeal by the other defendants (in which the sons of Kadu did not join) the decree was upheld by the Divisional Court. The sons of Kadu now sued the sons of Nadu claiming their share in the land formerly in dispute, and their claim having been dismissed on appeal by the Divisional Judge on the ground that the suit was barred under section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, they appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, per PLOWDEN, S J. and RIVAZ, J., (BENTON, J., dissenting) that the present plaintiffs having been merely pro forma defendants in the former suit and the only question "heard and finally decided" in that case being as to the respective rights of the then plaintiffs and the defendants, sons of Janu, the present suit was not barred under section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, by reason of the said previous suit.

Per BENTON, J.—There is no distinction according to the Civil Procedure Code between pro forma defendants and other defendants, and if a pro forma defendant does not come forward and show that he is substantially interested or if he do come forward and fail to establish his interest in the matter, the decree will bind him.

88. Res judicata—Suit by reversioner for declaration that deed of mortgage should not affect his rights—Mortgagor and mortgagees co-defendants—Reversioner's claim decreed—Subsequent suit by mortgagees against mortgagor for possession.

One Mussammat M., a widow, having mortgaged certain land to the present plaintiffs, her husband's kinsman and heir sued her and the mortgagees, praying for a declaration that the deed of mortgage should not affect his reversionary rights. Several issues were raised and decided, but there was no issue as to whether the deed was valid and binding as between the mortgagor and mortgagees. The reversioner obtained a decree such as he prayed for, and none of the defendants appealed. Subsequently the mortgagees, the present appellants, sued the widow mortgagor, and her daughter's husband, who was her tenant for possession of the land mortgaged.

The first Court, holding that the mortgage was good as between the mortgagor and the mortgagees, decreed the claim, but the Divisional Judge, on appeal, held that, as in the previous suit the deed was found to be farzi and without consideration, that the validity of the mortgage was res judicata as between the present parties, notwithstanding they were co-defendants in the former suit. The plaintiffs appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that inasmuch as the issue raised in this case was not tried and decided in the former suit, the present suit was not barred as res judicata by reason of the decision in the former suit.

Held, that though a decision by a competent Court in an execution proceeding that on application for execution is not time-barred is, unless reversed on appeal, conclusive between the parties in a subsequent proceeding for execution of the same decree, such decision is not binding upon an Appellate Court on an appeal from a final order in the same proceeding merely because the interlocutory order was not appealed from immediately.

On the 22nd December 1888 certain persons applied to the Revenue Officer for partition of shamilat land as against certain persons, among whom were the present plaintiffs, alleging that of these defendants some were proprietors and others tenants; that each was in possession of more than his rateable share of the shamilat, and that, though there was a large quantity of such shamilat, the whole of it was unculturable with the exception of the area for partition of which they prayed. The usual proclamations having been issued, several persons objected to the partition, and on the 29th January 1889 plaintiffs presented a petition stating that they were in possession of part of the shamilat which they had brought under cultivation at their own expense, and of which they had obtained a lease at barani rates, and prayed that even if the shamilat were partitioned, the partition might be effected on condition of their being re-imbursed for their outlay in rendering the land culturable. They also joined with others in presenting a petition on the same date praying that partition might not be effected on the ground that the proprietors had, in 1875, agreed not to partition the shamilat and had ratified their agreement before the Tahsildar. On the same date, the Revenue Officer passed an order to the effect that such of the proprietors as had not joined in the agreement of 1875 were entitled to partition, and directed the partition to be completed by the 1st March 1889. On the 22nd February 1889, plaintiffs and others presented a further petition praying for the stay of partition proceedings on the ground that they had, at great expense, reclaimed their ratable share of the shamilat, and that it had been agreed that any plot reclaimed by a proprietor should be his (usi kg hua) and the other proprietors should have no concern with it. This petition, and an appeal to the Commissioner from the order of the 29th January 1889 having been rejected, the latter as being barred by limitation, partition proceedings went on for about two years, and on their termination, plaintiffs, on the 30th March 1891, again objected to land which had been reclaimed by them being given to others. The partition, however, was finally sanctioned by the same Revenue Officer on the 5th July 1891, and an instrument of partition prepared on the 29th January 1892. On the 14th December 1891, plaintiffs instituted a suit in the Civil Court for possession of certain land, alleging that they were proprietors thereof by reclamation, the sinking of a well and the planting of trees, but that it had remained wrongly recorded as shamilat and had at a partition been allotted and made over to defendants. Defendants pleaded that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the claim, and further that the plainiffs were not proprietors of the land by reason of having reclaimed it. The District Judge held that the Civil Court had jurisdiction, but that plaintiffs had not established their title, and the Divisional Judge, on appeal by plaintiffs, held that the suit was barred under section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882. Plaintiff appealed to the Chief Court on a certificate granted by the Divisional Judge.

Held that inasmuch as the Revenue Officer had not tried the question of title involved either as a Civil or as a Revenue Court, but had merely decided the question as to property to be divided, the suit was not barred under section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code; but held, further, that inasmuch as partition had already been carried into effect and was no longer "sought" when the suit was instituted, the Civil Court had no jurisdiction under section 158 (2) (xvii) of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887, to entertain the suit despite the fact that there was a question of title in the property partitioned involved. Riwaj-i-am—Muhammadan Gujars of Ludhiana District—Res judicata—Waiver.

On the death in 1854 of one Shahbaz, a Muhammadan Gujar of the Ludhiana District and a landed proprietor in mauza Bhukri Khurd, his widow Mussammat Raso, was entered in the village records as proprietors of his lands, and in 1861 gifted the said lands to her two sons-in-law, B. plaintiff's husband and M. The reversionary heirs of Shahbaz thereupon sued to set aside the gift and obtained a decree to the effect that the gift would be considered effectual only for the widow's lifetime and that after her death whosoever proved his title would be considered the proprietor. In 1878 the widow gifted the same lands to her two daughters, plaintiff and Mussammat J., wife of M. The reversioners again brought a suit which was decided in their favour in both the first and the Appellate Courts, and on the death of the widow in 1886 they sued B. and M. for possession of Shahbaz's lands and obtained a decree for their respective shares in the same. Subsequently plaintiff sued the said reversioners and her own husband, B., claiming the lands of Shahbaz, her father, on the ground that by custom among Muhammadan Gujars of the Ludhiana district, the daughter of a sonless proprietor who has never left her father's house is, on the father's death, entitled to succeed to the exclusion of her father's male relatives. Plaintiff relied in support of her claim upon the entry in the Riwaj-i-am. Defendants, with the exception of plaintiff's husband, who admitted the claim, denied plaintiff's right and pleaded, inter alia, that the matter was res judicata; that plaintiff by her conduct in the previous litigation had waived her title to succeed as heir of her father, and that, in any event, she was not entitled to so succeed by custom. The first Court decreed plaintiff's claim but the decree was reversed, on appeal, by the Divisional Judge, on the ground that plaintiff had by her conduct waived her right to succeed as her father's heir. Plaintiff appealed to the Chief Court, and it was Held, that inasmuch as the officer who tried and decided the suit in 1878, when the reversioners contested the gifts by the widow to her two daughters, would not have had jurisdiction to try the present suit, plaintiff's claim was not res judicata by reason of the former decision.

Held, also, that as plaintiff could not have objected to the gift to her sister and her sister's husband during the life-time of her sister and her mother, her conduct did not amount to waiver of her right to succeed after their death, as the heir of her father. binding on the daughters of such brother claiming to succeed as heirs to their father's separate property—Daughters not parties to former suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13.

In 1876, in a suit brought by plaintiff against Mussammat I. B., the widow of one B., for a declaratory decree that after the death of the said widow plaintiff was entitled to succeed, as the adopted son of A., brother of B., to the entirety of B.'s joint property, it was decided that plaintiff was the validly adopted son of A, and, as such, entitled to succeed as claimed. To this suit the daughters of B. by Mussammat I. B. were not parties. Subsequently Mussammat I. B. made a gift of the separate property left by B. in favour of her said daughters, whereupon plaintiff sued for a declaration that such gift should not affect his reversionary rights after the death of the widow, and made Mussammat I. B. and her daughters co-defendants. The latter pleaded that plaintiff was not the validly adopted son of A., and that, in any event, he was not entitled, by custom, to succeed as claimed. For plaintiff it was contended that the question as to his right, to succeed as the adpoted son of A. to property left by B. was res judicata by the decision in the former suit.

Held, per PLOWDEN S. J., and Benton, J., (FRIZELLE, J., dissenting), that inasmuch as (i) the widow of B., succeeding to her husband's estate as his heir, represented the estate fully; (ii) reversioners claiming to succeed after her were bound by decrees relating to her husband's estate obtained against her without fraud or collusion; and (iii) the widow's daughters were not necessary parties to the former suit, the daughters though not made parties in the former suit, were bound by a decision on a relevant issue tried and decided therein, and that therefore the question as to the validity of plaintiff's adoption was res judicata and was not affected by the fact that the property now in dispute was different.

But held further, that it was competent to the said daughters to plead in the subsequent suit that the adopted son of A. was not entitled by custom to succeed as heir to the separate property of B. MUSSAMMAT INDRA BAI v. GADU DHAR. 29 P R 1895 F. B.

94. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13—Res judicata.

In 1891 plaintiffs sued defendants in the Civil Court for possession of certain land, and alleged that in 1865 a dispute between the parties was settled by a decree which gave plaintiffs possession of the said land on payment of Rs. 40; that thereafter J. S.

plaintiffs' uncle, remained in occupation, but that on his death, a few years before the suit, defendants obtained possession which they now refused to surrender to plaintiffs. At a late stage of the suit one of the plaintiffs stated that, on the death of J. S. defendants had been allowed to hold the land on payment of a yearly rent of Rs. 20. The Munsif who tried the case thereupon recorded an order that it appeared from the statement of plaintiffs' other witnesses that the relationship of landlord and tenant existed between them and defendants, and that the case was therefore cognizable in the Revenue Courts. He therefore dismissed the suit without going into the issues, and told plaintiffs to seek their remedy in the Revenue Court. This order having been upheld on appeal by the Divisional Judge, plaintiffs sued for the ejectment of defendants in the Revenue Court, but lost their case before the Collector and the Commissioner, who concurred in holding that defendants were not in possession of the land as tenants of the plaintiffs. Plaintiffs then instituted the present claim in the Civil Court for possession of the land and omitted the allegation of defendants' tenancy as the point had been decided against them in the Revenue Court. The defendants pleaded that the suit was barred by the rule of res judicata with reference to the former decision and could not be heard again in the Civil Court. This objection was overruled by the first Court, but on appeal the Divisional Judge dismissed the suit as barred by the former decision.

Held, that inasmuch as in the former suit there was no finding by the Munsif, that the parties stood in the relation of landlord and tenant, but merely that the plaint, taken together with the plaintiffs' statement towards the close of the case, disclosed a case, cognizable by the Revenue Court, the present suit, which was not based on any allegation of tenancy between the parties, but was merely for the recovery of the land on the strength of plaintiffs' title as owners, defendants' possession being treated as wrongful, was not the same as that instituted in 1891, and the rule of res judicata had no application. 95. Suit for proprietary possession of land—Dismissal of suit—Subsequent suit by same plaintiff for possession as non-proprietor—Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13, Explanation II.

Plaintiff sued defendants for possession of certain land, alleging that he was proprietor thereof and the Munsif, who tried the case, granted him a decree for possession only, on the ground that he was not a proprietor in the village in which the land was situate. On appeal by defendants, the District Judge dismissed the suit, holding that as the proprietary possession for which plaintiff had sued had not been proved the Munsif had no jurisdiction to grant a decree for possession. The District Judge, however, allowed plaintiff to bring a separate suit for possession as a non-proprietor, but the Munsif before whom it was instituted dismissed it as barred by section 13, Explanation II, of the Civil Procedure Code. This decree having been reversed by the District Judge and the case remanded for re-decision, defendants appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that the second suit had been rightly dismissed as barred by section 13, Explanation II, of the Civil Procedure Code. Although in the first suit plaintiff did not expressly plead his right of possession as a non-proprietor, he should have done so, and even without his doing it, the suit was of a nature in which the Court was justified in considering the point without its being specially put forward. 96. Two suits tried together by consent of parties—No appeal from decree in one suit—Res judicata.

One Malik Karim Bakhsh of Sabzi Mandi, a suburb of Delhi, died on the 5th March 1890, leaving a large property in land, houses and movables, and the following descendants (i) by his first wife, three sons and two daughters, and (ii) by his second wife, one son and four daughters. After his death one of his sons by the first wife brought a suit for partition and possession of a one-fourth share in the deceased's property, first, in terms of an award made by one A. D., to which all the defendants were alleged to have agreed, and failing that under a custom by which daughters were excluded from inheritance, and lastly, if no such custom was proved, for two out of fourteen shares under Muhammadan Law. The present plaintiff, who was one of the daughters by the second wife was made a party in order to have all the questions relating to succession to the deceased's property finally decided, though it was admitted in the plaint that the entire property in dispute was in the possession of the four sons. Shortly after the institution of the above suit, the present plaintiff also instituted a suit in the same Court, claiming to be entitled to one-fourteenth share of the said property under Muhammadan Law. By consent of all the parties the suits were tried together and a full judgment disposing of all the issues was written in the first case, and a short one in the second, deciding it in accordance therewith. Present plaintiff appealed from the decree in her suit, but there was no appeal from the decree in the first suit, which, therefore, had become final at the date of hearing of plaintiff's appeal. A preliminary objection having been taken by respondents to the effect that, there having been no appeal in the first suit, the questions involved in plaintiff's appeal were res judicata, and could not be adjudicated on by the Chief Court.

Held, following I. L. R. XVI Calc. 233, that on the facts of the present litigation, plaintiff's appeal was barred neither under section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, nor on the general principles of res judicata, and that respondent's objection must be overruled. MUSSAMMAT FAKHIR-UN-NISSA v. MALIK RAHIM BAKHSH.

97. Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13, Explanation V—Effect of decree as regards minor who was unrepresented in former suit.

In a former suit the then plaintiffs (now defendants), while in their plaint recognizing the existence of the present plaintiff, who was at the time of decree a minor, took no steps to bring him on the record or to have a guardian ad litem appointed for him. To a subsequent suit by the said minor, in which the point at issue in the former suit was again directly involved, the present defendants pleaded that the suit was barred under Explanation V of section 13, Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that a minor, although he may sue through a guardian or next friend, cannot, in the absence of any such representation, be held bound by a suit the very nature of which he is incapacitated by his nonage from comprehending, or taking part in, unless duly represented, the rules with reference to notice laid down in some authorities not being applicable to minors. 98. Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 13, Explanation (II), and 365.

Plaintiffs sued for possession of certain property transferred by their father on the ground that the transfer being unnecessary and the property ancestral their reversionary interest was not thereby affected. The suit was dismissed by the first Court as barred under Explanation (II) to section 13, Civil Procedure Code, on the ground that the plaintiffs should have pleaded the right now sought to be established, when they were brought on the record of an appeal to which their father and defendants were parties, as legal representatives of their father. In that litigation the present defendants sued plaintiff's father, one G. S., for possession of the property now in suit under a mortgage-deed. Plaintiffs were originally impleaded as co-defendants, but their names were subsequently struck off as not being parties to the mortgage. G. S. raised numerous pleas, but no plea was taken that the property was ancestral or that the mortgagor's interest was limited. The suit having been decreed in the lower Court, G. S. appealeld to the Chief Court, but died pending appeal and his sons, present plaintiffs, were brought on the record as his legal representatives. In that appeal no plea was raised by them that the property was ancestral, or that G. S.'s interest therein was limited to his own life-time. In the present suit plaintiffs appealed from the decree of the first Court to the Divisional Judge, who accepted their appeal and remanded the case for a decision on the merits. Defendants having appealed from this order to the Chief Court, it was inasmuch as no question of the reversionary rights of G. S.'s sons arose in the suit between defendants and G. S., and the decree of the first Court in that suit passed against G. 100. Res judicata—Omission by guardian ad litem of minor to appeal against decree—Gross negligence on part of guardian—Effect of such decree.

Where in a previous suit a decree was passed against the present plaintiff, who at the time was a minor, and was duly represented by his mother as his guardian ad litem, held, that the omission by the latter to appeal on his behalf from such decree, notwithstanding that there were excellent grounds, both in law and on the facts, for an appeal, amounted to gross negligence on her part, and that under such circumstances it would be contrary to law and equity to hold the plaintiff bound by the former decree.

The position of a guardian ad litem of a minor being that of a trustee, he is bound strictly to act in the interests of the minor, and he has not the liberty, as long as he retains his position of abandoning the case as he would have were it his own, unless such abandonment is clearly in the interests of the minor. Every case must be judged by its own facts, and for the purpose of finding out whether such guardian was guilty of laches or fraud in previous proceed-

101. Res judicata—House and land sold by one deed of sale—Suit in respect of house—Subsequent suit in respect of land—Finding in first suit that deed of sale was void, effect of, as regards subsequent suit.

A. had a decree against B., and in execution thereof attached a house belonging to B. whereupon C. objected that B. had conveyed the house to him by a deed of sale which covered the house in dispute and also a building site. The objection was disallowed and C. was referred to a suit which he brought, and in which it was held that the sale by B. to C. was fictitious and in fraud of creditors and was therefore invalid. Subsequently A. attached the building site, and C. again objected on the same ground as before. The objections having been again disallowed, C. filed the present suit to establish his right to the building site. The question referred to the Full Bench was whether the decision in the first suit as to the validity of the sale was binding on the parties in the second suit.

Held, by the Full Bench that though the subject-matter of the second suit was different in the sense that in the one suit a plot of land and in the other a house was claimed, yet the material issue, whether the sale deed conveyed a title or was fictitious and fraudulent, was identical in both suits, and that, therefore, the finding thereon in the first suit operated as res judicata, and precluded the issue which it had decided being raised again between the same parties in a subsequent suit, the latter suit being within the jurisdiction of the Court which decided the prior suit. 102. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13, Explanation II—Res judicata.

In 1882, one K. L. and his brother, sued for possession by redemption of a shop mortgaged by H. M., and founded their right to sue on the ground that they were the grandsons of H. M. who had, as they alleged, adopted their father. Defendants pleaded that H. M. had not adopted plaintiff's father, but that H. M. was equally related to both defendants and plaintiff, and that the shop had fallen to defendants on partition. The Court, without considering any other issue, dismissed the suit on the first issue, on the ground that plaintiffs had failed to prove that they were the sons of an adopted son of H. M., and as such entitled to the whole of the latter's property. In this suit, however, it was admitted by defendants and found by the Court that the plaintiffs were collaterals of H. M. and entitled to one-eighth of his property, but plaintiff put forward no alternative claim on this basis. Subsequently K. L., one of the former plaintiffs, sold his rights to the present plaintiff, who thereupon sued for possession by redemption of half the said shop, basing his claim on the ground that K. L.,

his vendor, was one of the heirs of H. M., the mortgagor. The defendants, who were the same as in the former suit, pleaded that the plaintiff's claim was barred under section 13, Explanation II, of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that inasmuch as it was open to K. L. and his brother when they sued in 1882, alternatively to their exclusive title as grandsons by adoption, to have made their title by inheritance through collateral relationship a ground of attack and to have obtained a decree for possession of the whole shop (subject to the rights of other heirs) as some of several heirs of H. M., their omission to put forward such alternative ground of attack was fatal to the present suit, which was based on that very ground (section 13, Explanation II, of the Civil Procedure Code. 103. *Previous suit dismissed on merits as well as on ground of limitation—" Matter directly and substantially in issue"—Effect of former suit as regards one of several joint brothers who was no party to the suit brought by the latter—*Pro forma defendant.

Held, that when a suit is dismissed after a full consideration of the facts and merits of the case, a finding being given adversely to the plaintiffs on each of the issues framed, the decision on such findings is none the less res judicata, because the suit was also dismissed on the ground that it was barred by limitation.

A practical test for determining whether a matter has been directly and substantially in issue in a previous suit is furnished by effecting a separation of the discussions and findings on the various groups of issues dealt within the judgment. If, after the elimination of all but one such group, the judgment still remains intelligible and in itself sufficient for the adjudication of the suit, and the decree is in entire harmony with it, then the matter so dealt with has been directly and substantially in issue.

Where the elder brother of one B. R. brought a suit, in conjunction with other reversioners, for possession of certain land which formed part of a joint holding, but in such suit no mention was made of B. R., or any hint given even of his existence, the plaint not professing to claim anything for him and it not being shown that he had any knowledge of the litigation, held, that though the land claimed might be part of a joint holding, as each claimant in the suit, had he been successful, would have acquired separate rights in the land, the plaintiffs could not be regarded as claiming anything for B. R. within the meaning of Explanation V of section 13 of the Code, merely because some of them happened to be his elder brothers.

Held, therefore, that as against B. R., the decision in the said suit was not res judicata.

A pro forma defendant in a suit who neither put in an appearance nor defended it, and from whom no relief was asked, no decree being given either for or against him, held not debarred from subsequently bringing a suit as plaintiff, although the matter in issue in the second suit had also been in issue and formally determined in the suit in which he was a pro forma defendant. LABHU v. HIRA SINGH. 41 P R 1899

104. Res judicata—"Matter directly and substantially in issue"—Unnecessary finding.

In 1893, after some previous litigation, one H. A., the present defendant, sued a widow and her reversioners for possession of certain land which he alleged had been sold to him by the former. The suit was dismissed in the first Court and also by the Divisional Judge on appeal, but while dismissing H. A.'s appeal, the Divisional Judge found that though no sale had been effected by the widow "the reversioners had sold their contingent interests to the plaintiff and had received full consideration for the sale." The reversioners after the death of the said widow, sued for a declaration that the land had not been sold to H. A., and that they were proprietors. It was contended on behalf of H. A. (and so held by the Divisional Judge on appeal) that the Appellate Court's finding in the previous litigation was res judicata.

Held, that the only finding that was necessary for the decision of the appeal in the former litigation was that H. A. was not entitled to the remedy for which he prayed, viz., possession of the land, there having been no sale by the widow, and her life estate still subsisting, and that the further finding with regard to the reversioners was necessary, and must be regarded as mere obiter dictum, in no way binding on them in subsequent litigation. 105. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 13, 14—Decree of Foreign Court—Kabul Court—Compromise.

Plaintiff sued on the allegations that defendant had entered into a sort of partnership with His Highness the Amir of Kabul in regard to the tolls to be levied on fruit leaving Kabul territory, one of the terms of such agreement being that defendant was to receive one-third share and His Highness the Amir the remaining two-thirds share of the said dues; that defendant had sold his one-third share to plaintiff, and that the said transaction had resulted in a profit. Plaintiff, therefore claimed a settlement of accounts, and a sum of Rs. 17,500 to be due to him. Defendant in reply pleaded that there was a loss and not a profit on the transaction, that nothing was due to plaintiff, and that the plaintiff had already sued him in the Kabul Court, which had found that a certain sum was due to defendant, that this claim had been settled, and that plaintiff's present claim was barred by the decision of the Kabul Court. Defendant further pleaded that as plaintiff had affixed his seal to the said decision and as it had been acted upon, it should be regarded as a mutual settlement and should stand as a bar to the plaintiff's suit. It was alleged that plaintiff, in December 1894, filed a petition praying His Highness the Amir to have plaintiff's accounts with defendant settled, and that this petition was referred by His Highness to the officer in charge of the Panchayat-khana at Kabul "to be directed to decide according to the principles of equity and justice the case relating to partnership business between plaintiff and defendant." It appeared that some of defendant's witnesses were examined by the said Panchayat-khana, but on plaintiff asking for time to produce his witnesses from Peshawar, the Court rejected his application on the ground that if plaintiff could produce proof from Peshawar, he might bring this fact to the notice of His Highness, "so that His Highness may pass orders on his behalf." On the 20th January 1895 the Panchayat-khana submitted its findings to His Highness, and on the receipt of his orders upon them, the Court, on the 3rd February 1895, passed its judgment, whereby plaintiff was directed to pay defendant Rs. 3,213 of Kabuli coin, and defendant was mulct in Rs. 1,150 Queen's coin. The seal of plaintiff and the signature of defendant were then taken upon the said judgment.

The lower Court held that though the order of the Kabul Court, considered as the judgment of a Foreign Court, could not be pleaded as a bar to the present suit, it amounted to a compromise binding on the plaintiff, and therefore dismissed the suit.

Held, on the facts of the case, that the said order did not amount to a compromise binding on plaintiff.

Held, further, that the judgment pleaded in bar to plaintiff's suit had not been shown to be the order of a regularly constituted tribunal having jurisdiction to pass final orders in this case, and that it had not in fact passed any such final orders, the fact that the Panchayat-khana did not pass orders on its own authority, but before giving judgment referred the case for the opinion of His Highness, clearly showing that the Court was not one of independent jurisdiction capable of finally deciding the matter before it.

When the judgment of a Foreign Court is pleaded in bar, under sections 13 and 14 of the Civil Procedure Code, it must be shown that the judgment so relied on is the judgment of a duly and regularly constituted Court of law having independent jurisdiction to decide the matter in dispute, and, so far as the Court itself is concerned, to decide it finally. 106. Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 2—Foreclosure proceedings—Suit by mortgagor for redemption after expiry of year of grace.

In a suit for redemption of mortgage by one of four sons of the original mortgagor, it appeared that some time previously another of the said sons had sued for redemption of the mortgage in question; that on the defendant's objection that the plaintiff could not sue alone, the latter endeavoured to make out that he was suing on behalf of his brothers, and as regards the present plaintiff, undertook to either produce him in person or to procure a power-of-attorney from him, and that he failed to do either. There was, moreover nothing to show that the present plaintiff who was at the time absent in Jhang knew of, or participated in, his brother's suit except the mere statement of the latter made in his own interest.

Held, under the circumstances, that the present suit was not res judicata by reason of the decision in the previous suit.

Held, further, that inasmuch as foreclosure proceedings are merely ministerial and carry no final judicial sanction, it is open to a mortgagor to bring a suit for redemption after the expiry of the year of grace, and that such mortgagor would be entitled to a decree if he proved his claim on the merits, and that the foreclosure proceedings were for any reason not good or conclusive as against him or for other sufficient cause.

A mortgagor is not bound to take any notice of foreclosure proceedings which he knows to be defective, or to wait till the mortgagee sues to complete his title, to plead irregularity in the said proceedings. In such a case he may sue for redemption even after expiry of the year of grace. GURDITTA MAL v. SANDHI KHAN. 27 P R 1900

107. Res judicata.

J. D. having died his widow and two sons together were entered as proprietors of his land in equal shares. In a suit by the widow for possession of her share of her husband's property which she had allowed her step-sons to cultivate on the condition of their giving her maintenance out of the profits of the land, held, that her suit was not barred under section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, by reason of her having been made a party to a suit by a person who had obtained a mortgage from the step-sons and had sued for possession, as the point as to her being entitled to possession on non-payment of her maintenance had never been raised or decided in the former suit. 108. Res judicata—"Matter directly and substantially in issue"—Effect of former suit as regards pro forma defendants.

On the death of a childless occupancy tenant some of the village proprietors filed a suit and obtained a decree for possession of the land against persons who had taken possession as representatives of the deceased tenant and impleaded as pro forma defendants the co-proprietors of the village who had refused to join with them.

Held, that the respondents, who were the plaintiffs in the former suit, could not, in a subsequent suit brought against them by the co-proprietors, who were pro forma defendants in the former suit, plead res judicata, as the question of their right to exclusive possession against the plaintiffs was not directly and substantially in issue or affected by the decree in the former suit, and that the soi disant representatives were substantially the only defendants and the pro forma defendants were no parties to that suit. 109. Order dismissing suit—Subsequent suit between same parties—Res judicata.

On the date fixed for settlement of issues, defendant was not present and an adjournment was necessary under all circumstances as no evidence had been called for, and accordingly an adjournment was made, a date being fixed for the production by plaintiff of a certain deed and for the hearing of the evidence ex parte. On the date specified the deed called for was put in, and a further adjournment was asked for and granted. On the second date fixed for plaintiff to produce his evidence he was not present but sent a pleader to ask for a further adjournment. This was refused and the suit dismissed, but it was not clearly recorded that the dismissal was under section 158 of the Civil Procedure Code. A review of judgment having been applied for and refused, plaintiff subsequently instituted the present suit, which was dismissed as barred by reason of the former suit having been dismissed under section 158 of the Code.

Held, that though it may not be necessary in order to take action under section 158 of the Code to give specific warning to the party concerned that action under that section will be taken, there must be something on the record to show clearly that the adjournment is one which brings the case within the purview of that section, and also to make it plain that the order itself is one under that section and not under section 157, and that this was not the case in the present instance.

Section 158 of the Code is a very stringent one, and is only to be applied when the facts do not admit of the application of any other. KALE SHAH v. SHAHABAL SHAH.

110. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13—Res judicata—Competency of Court to try subsequent suit.

In order to make a matter res judicata concurrency of jurisdiction is essential. Where the former suit was exclusively triable by a Revenue Court and for the proper trial of such a suit that Court had to decide incidentally every point including that of the subject-matter of the present suit the decision of that Court, it not being a Court of jurisdiction competent to try the present suit, was not binding on the Civil Court, and the present suit was not barred by the rule of res judicata.

111. Execution of decree—Order releasing property from attachment—Finality of such order—Res judicata.

The heir and representative of a deceased judgment-debtor, being himself also a judgment-debtor under another part of the same decree, objected to the attachment of the property of the deceased on the ground that he had a lien upon it. On the date fixed for evidence, as the decree-holder did not appear, the executing Court without taking any evidence allowed the objections and released the property. The decree-holder, not having attempted to have the ex parte order set aside, applied for a fresh execution by attachment of the same property, and in defence it was urged that he had finally lost his right of executing against that property, as the previous order of release was final and conclusive, between the parties.

Held, that though the order aforesaid allowing the objection was passed in a proceeding under section 244 (c), Civil Procedure Code, that order was in effect nothing more than a dismissal for default, and therefore it was no bar to a fresh application for execution of the same decree.

Similarly such an order could not operate as res judicata as the matter was not "heard and finally decided."

112. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13—Res judicata.

Plaintiffs sued in 1896, in the Court of the District Judge, for possession of land from the present defendants who claimed to be the occupancy tenant. The land was formerly held by one Hari Singh as an occupancy tenant, and on his death was inherited by his widow, who got her brother (defendant No. 1) entered as occupancy tenant of one-half, while the other half continued to be recorded in her own name and remained in her possession. On her death her half was mutated in plaintiffs' names, but the defendant No. 1 continued in possession of the whole. The District Judge held that the case was triable by a Revenue and not by a Civil Court, and returned the plaint for presentation in the proper Court with the remark that the plaintiffs' proper course was to sue under section 77 (3) (d) of the Punjab Tenancy Act. The plaintiffs acting on this suggestion sued in the Revenue Court for a declaration that the defendant was not such a tenant under section 77 (3) (d) of the Tenancy Act and obtained a decree. The plaintiffs then brought the present suit for possession of the whole. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit on the ground of res judicata by reason of the previous order of the District Judge.

Held, by the Full Bench that as the matter of jurisdiction had not been put in issue and finally decided by the District Judge in 1886, the rule of res judicata had no application to the present case. The mere fact of a Civil Court declining to exercise jurisdiction either by returning the plaint or by dismissing the suit on the ground that the jurisdiction lay in the Revenue Court could not be treated as an adjudication on the point. 113. Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13—Matter which might have been a ground of defence in former suit.

A, in execution of a decree against B (an Arain Zamindar), attached B's share in certain landed property. C, who alleged himself to be a mortgagee, objected to the attachment. Subsequently, however, C withdrew the objection based on his mortgage-deed and put forward a deed of sale. The objection founded on the deed of sale was held to be sound, and the property released from attachment. A then brought a suit for declaration, to the effect that the property was liable to attachment, C resisted the claim on the strength of his deed of sale, but it was decreed by the Munsif and confirmed on appeal. A then proceeded in execution of his decree to attach the share of B in the property, but the sons of C, who had died in the interim, again objected to the attachment, basing their objection on the mortgage-deed purporting to have been executed in favour of their father by B. The objection being upheld, A instituted the present suit for a similar declaration, the sons of C pleaded the deed of mortgage.

Held, that the sons of C were precluded from pleading the mortgage-deed in bar of the present claim, as it was "a matter "which might and ought to have been made "a ground of defence" in the former suit, and that it must accordingly be deemed to have been a matter substantially and directly in issue in such suit. 114. Res judicata—Omission or addition of parties.

The plaintiffs obtained a decree against the present defendant in 1897 in the Court of the Divisional Judge to the effect that the defendant be restrained from using a certain door and certain parnalas except for the purpose of discharging rain water, with a direction that, if the defendant should thereafter use any of the said parnalas for the discharge of water from the privy, the plaintiff might claim to have such parnala or parnalas closed. In 1901 the plaintiffs again sued the defendant on the allegation that she had been using the door and one of the parnalas contrary to the terms of former decree and asked that they might be closed. The defendant having pleaded that the plaintiffs were not the sole owners of the lane, two other persons were added as defendants. The first Court decreed the plaintiffs' suit in respect to the closing of the parnala, but dismissed the claim with respect to the door, holding that the former suit was not a bar to the re-opening of the point or question in dispute, as the parties to the suit were not the same. On appeal the Divisional Judge held that the point or question in dispute was res judicata, and decreed the claim in full. On further appeal to the Chief Court the defendant contended (i) that the question in dispute was not res judicata, as the parties in the two suits were different, and all the necessary issues in the previous suit were not determined by the first Court; and (ii) that the only remedy of the plaintiffs was by execution of their former decree. Held (i) that the question in dispute between the parties was res judicata, the omission or addition of parties in a former or subsequent action making no difference where the parties to the subsequent action were before the Court in the previous action, and the plea that in the previous suit the Divisional Judge had determined several points which were not decided by the first Court having no force, inasmuch as the decision on those points could be arrived at on the pleadings and the evidence on the record;

(ii) that having regard to the form of the decree in the previous suit, the present claim was not barred by any rule of law.

115. Jurisdiction—Res judicata, plea of —Competency of inferior Court to enquire the jurisdiction of superior Court which passed the former decree—Consent to jurisdiction.

Held, that a decree given by a Court not competent to grant it is a mere nullity and cannot be pleaded as a bar to a subsequent suit, the parties being entitled to ignore its existence altogether, and in such a case there is no impropriety in an inferior Court deciding in the subsequent proceeding whether the decree of the superior Court in a former suit (pleaded as a bar) was not void on the ground of defect of jurisdiction.

116. Compromise of suit—Subsequent suit to enforce promise on strength of which original claim was foregone—Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 13, 373.

In 1901 plaintiff sued for settlement of accounts. The case was referred to arbitration. The arbitrator, having induced the parties to enter into a compromise to the effect that they had settled all the accounts and had no further dispute, forwarded the same to the Court together with a petition asking that the suit should be consigned to the record room. The parties acknowledged the terms of the compromise before the Court, whereupon the suit was dismissed.

Subsequently the plaintiff brought a second suit against the same defendant, which was in substance to the same purport and for the same relief with the addition of a statement to the effect that the defendant had in the presence of the arbitrator promised to explain the accounts to him and to pay whatever sum was found due thereon, provided that a compromise was first filed in the case then pending; that although relying on that promise, compromise had been filed in Court, the defendant had yet not rendered the accounts as agreed.

The defendant denied the promise on which the suit was brought and pleaded the bar of res judicata and estoppel by the compromise.

Held, (1), that although a consent decree based on a compromise is final and operates as res judicata in regard to matters disposed of thereby, yet as the present suit was one based on an alleged agreement made at the time the compromise was arrived at and on an express understanding that plaintiff was to enter full satisfaction of his claim and to keep it outside the Court, and its breach which did not exist before the former suit was brought and could not have consequently been set up or denied or be directly and substantially in issue, the causes of action involved in the two cases were quite different, and the present suit therefore was not barred by the rule of res judicata and (2), that the provisions of section 373, Civil Procedure Code, have no application to it.

Held, also, that the statement of the plaintiff in the previous suit that accounts had been fully understood could create no estoppel against him, as the defendant was not led to do anything thereby which he would not have done otherwise.

'T' instituted two suits for pre-emption with respect to two sales of land. Four days after, one 'G' instituted two similar suits on the same sales. Eventually each pre-emptor was made a defendant in the other's suit. The Court framed similar issues and heard one set of witnesses in all four cases and disposed of all the cases by one judgment. 'T' was held to have a preferential right to 'G' and similar decrees were drawn up in all the cases, by which 'T' was directed to pay the price within a certain time, and on his default 'G' was to get the property on payment of the prices within another fixed time. 'G' appealed only in the two cases in which he was plaintiff.

Held, that the omission to appeal against the decree of the rival claimant was a fatal defect, which having become final and binding operated as res judicata between the two pre-emptors.

In a suit by a tenant to contest his liability to be ejected on the ground that he was settled by the founder and otherwise fulfilled the conditions of section 5 (1) (c) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, it appeared that in 1889 the plaintiff had instituted a suit for a similar relief against his landlord which he subsequently withdrew.

Held, that the present suit was not maintainable, as the matter directly and substantially in issue in the suit withdrawn in 1889 was the same as in the present suit.

Held, that under customary law the dismissal on the merits of a suit brought during the lifetime of a sonless proprietor by a reversioner to have an alienation of ancestral property by the former declared null and void as against his reversionary rights bars a subsequent suit by his son for possession of that property after the death of the alienor.

the suit brought by other reversioners, but whose father was impleaded therein pro forma defendant.

Held, that a reversioner is not debarred from contesting an alienation in favour of his own brother merely because in a previous suit instituted by certain other reversioners of the deceased proprietor against the alienee, his father was impleaded as a pro forma defendant, especially where there was no adjudication of the father's rights as opposed to the alienee his own son, and that therefore the present suit was not barred under section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code by reason of such previous suit.

Two identical suits for pre-emption were filed by two rival pre-emptors against the same defendant and each pre-emptor was impleaded as a defendant in the other's suit. Similar issues having been framed in each case, both were tried together and disposed of by one judgment and decree. In one of the suits the pre-emptor was held to have a preferential right over the other, and a decree was passed giving him the right to pre-empt within a certain time and to the other on his failure to do so. The unsuccessful pre-emptor appealed from the decree in his own suit, which was thrown out by the Divisional Judge upon the ground that the omission to appeal against the decree of the rival claimant was a fatal defect and operated as res judicata.

Held, by the Full Bench, that it was not necessary for the unsuccessful pre-emptor to file an appeal in each of the two cases, and that the Court of Appeal was not precluded under the rule of res judicata from going into any matter common to the two cases by reason of the finding in the cross case not having been appealed.

125. Res judicata—Suit by reversioner for a declaratory decree that a certain deed of sale would not affect his reversionary interest—Dismissal of suit as barred by limitation—Subsequent suit by same reversioner after the death of the alienor to recover the immovable property so sold.

Held, that when a previous suit brought by the reversioner of a sonless male proprietor during the lifetime of the alienor for a declaration that a sale effected by the latter would not affect his reversionary rights is dismissed as barred by limitation, no matters affecting the rights of the parties being decided between them, such dismissal does not operate as res judicata to a subsequent suit brought by the same reversioner after the death of the alienor for recovery of possession of the property so sold from the vendee. 128. Res judicata—First suit to set aside a gift made by a widow—Subsequent suit for possession on the death of such widow—Finally heard and decided, necessity of—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13, Explanation II.

Plaintiffs some of the reversioners of a sonless proprietor instituted a declaratory suit against his widow for setting aside a gift made by the latter in favour of one of her sons-in-law and obtained a decree. On the death of the widow they sued her daughters for the possession of the property. The defence contended that the plaintiffs had not a superior right to succeed but their contention was overruled as barred under section 13, Civil Procedure Code.

It appeared that in the former litigation the daughters were not impleaded as parties and the question whether the collaterals had a preferential right against them was neither in issue nor judicially determined by the Court.

Held, that the matter in issue now raised is not such as ought to have been made ground of defence in the former suit and that at any rate it was not heard and finally decided expressly or even by implication by the Court within the meaning of section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure and the defendants were therefore not precluded in the present suit from raising it now. BHARI v. PIR BAKHSH. 107 P R 1906

129. Res judicata—Alienation by widow—Suit by reversioner to have such alienation declared null and void—Compromise of such suit between the widow in possession and the reversioner—Subsequent suit by the son of such reversioner—Estoppel.

Where a person entitled to object to an alienation made by a widow brought a suit to have such alienation declared null and void and ultimately entered into a compromise in good faith with the widow held, that he and his successors in title were bound by it and that a similar suit by the son of such reversioner was barred by the rule of res judicata. 130. Suit by mortgagor for redemption—Dismissal of suit for default—Subsequent suit for the same object.

131. Res judicata—Suit for declaration of ownership of land by purchase—Dismissal of suit on merits—Subsequent suit for possession by same plaintiff as heir—Different causes of action—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13.

Held, that the dismissal of a suit for a declaration that the plaintiff was the sole owner in possession of certain land by purchase is not res judicata a subsequent suit brought for the possession of the same property on the ground that the plaintiff was entitled to the said land not as an owner but as heir and adopted son of the last male owner, inasmuch as his title as an heir being an inconsistent claim could not have formed an alternative ground of attack in the former suit without creating confusion.

lthough a party is bound to put forward all grounds of attack as have reference to the same cause of action, but where several independent grounds are available to him he is not bound to unite them all in one suit. CHIRAGH DIN v. NIZAM DIN. 55 P R 1907

132. Res judicata—Matter directly and substantially in issue—Unnecessary finding—Pro forma defendants—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13.

"A" died leaving four sons and six daughters. One of the four sons brought a suit impleading all his brothers and sisters for partition and possession of a one-fourth share in the deceased's property, first by enforcement of an award against his brothers and sisters, the latter having, according to his contention, consented to the reference, and failing that for partition (a) under a custom by which daughters were excluded from inheritance and (b) if no custom was proved, in accordance with the personal law of the parties. The Court found that the sons were bound by the award, but that the daughters had been duped into signing an agreement consenting to the reference and were therefore not bound by the award. It then took up the question of the rights of the daughters, and came to the conclusion that they were excluded by custom, and consequently, their consent to the reference being immaterial, decreed substantially in accordance with the award.

No declaration against the daughters was prayed for or given in the decree. No part of the property in dispute was alleged or found to be in their possession, nor were they required by the decree to surrender any. Subsequently four out of the six daughters instituted separate suits for possession by partition of their shares of the estate left by their deceased father in accordance with Muhammadan Law. The defence pleaded that the suit was res judicata under the decree in the previous cause, inasmuch as it was thereby found that daughters were excluded by custom, and as they did not appeal from that adjudication it had become final.

Held by a majority (JOHNSTONE, J. dissenting) that on the facts as found the suit was not barred either under section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure or on the general principles of res judicata, the issue relating to daughters' right in the former judgment being unnecessary for the decision of the case on the ground on which it proceeded, viz., the award being binding on the brothers who had all the property in suit in their possession, and not being raised by the pleadings, such rights not being in question in the claim upon the award, but by the Court gratuitously after it had held the award to be binding on the brothers; and that the finding on it could consequently not be pleaded as a bar to the present suit.

Held, also, that a party setting up a plea of res judicata is bound to establish it, and the Court competent to examine, whether the point was necessary for the decision of the case upon the ground upon which the final decision ultimately proceeded and was directly in issue in the former litigation. RAJAB-UN-NISSA v. HABIB BAKHSH. 57 P R 1907

133. Res judicata—Court of jurisdiction competent to try subsequent suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13.

Held, that for the purposes of section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the competency of a Court to try such subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised as compared with another is not affected by the circumstance that in one case an appeal lies in the first instance to the Divisional Court and from that Court to the Chief Court, and in the other directly to the Chief 134. Res judicata—Decision on a question of law—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 13.

Defendants, being engaged in litigation with third parties regarding a plot of land, entered into an agreement with the plaintiffs, wherein it was stipulated that the latter should undertake to act as their agents and institute an appeal at their own expense in the Chief Court connected with a pre-emption case in consideration of receiving a half share of the land which might be decreed to them. The appeal was successful, but immediately after the defendants sued for the cancellation of the said agreement on the ground that it was without consideration and unenforceable. The Court trying that case decided all the issues against the defendants, and no appeal was preferred. Plaintiffs thereafter instituted the present suit for half the land in accordance with the terms of the said agreement, and defendants pleaded that it was contrary to law and procedure. The First Court held that by reason of the former suit this question was res judicata, but on appeal the Divisional Judge, being of the opinion that the question being purely one of law could not operate as res judicata, accepted the defendant's contention.

Held that a judgment in the previous suit being a decision on a mixed question of law and fact was a bar to the present suit. The agreement having once been held to be valid as between the parties, it was not open to the Court subsequently to try the same question between the same parties.

Held, that a suit for recovery of possession by a tenant who had been ejected in execution of a decree of a Revenue Court, on the allegations that the decree in question included, in addition to the land leased to him, other plots over which he had either rights of occupancy or had become proprietor by long adverse possession, is cognizable by a Civil Court only, and the decree of the Revenue Court cannot operate as a res judicata, that Court having no jurisdiction to try the present suit. Section 22 of Act XIX of 1865 and section 13 of Act IV of 1866 prescribe the only mode in which suits falling within the conditions of the former section can be disposed of on appeal and in review. Under those sections the Chief Court has no jurisdiction to review the decisions of the Financial Commissionergiven under section 22 of Act XIX of 1865 ; on the other hand the Financial Commissionercannot review the decisions of the Chief Court passed when the settlement of land revenue is not in progress, or before the investment by the Local Government with the powers of a Court of final appeal The classes of suits provided for in section 22 of Act XIX of 1865, are not "business" transferred to the Chief Court within the meaning of section 9 of Act VII of 1868.

21. Review granted after 90 days—Reasonable cause—Act VIII of 1859, section 377.

Where review was granted after the lapse of 90 days, held by the Chief Court, following the decisions of the High Court of Bengal (CAMPBELL, J., doubting), that an Appellate Court can legally consider the question whether just and reasonable cause for the delay in presenting an application for review has been shown. Two suits in which the plaintiffs were proprietors and the defendants' two brothers, hereditary cultivators, were filed together, heard on the same days and evidence in one held good in the other. In appeal the Deputy Commissioner decreed the plaintiffs' suits, whereupon the defendant in one suit appealed to Commissioner, who reversed the order of the Deputy Commissioner. The defendant in the 2nd suit (who did not appeal, believing that his case would be decided according to the decision in his brother's case) then applied to the Deputy Commissioner for a review of the order in his case, which was granted, notwithstanding that 90 days had elapsed. Held, by BOULNOIS and CAMPBELL, JJ., (LINDSAY J., dissenting) that just and reasonable cause had been shown for the delay in presenting the application for review. HURREE SINGH v. MUKHA. 51 P R 1871

22. Act XXIII of 1861, section 28—Reference on review.

Plaintiff five or six years before suit made over some camels to the defendant to graze. Defendant refusing to restore the camels, plaintiff sued for their value (rupees 400). The original Court dismissed the suit, holding that it ought to have been brought within three years from the date of plaintiff's making the camels over to defendant. The Commissioner on appeal affirmed this decision. On plaintiff's application for a review of judgment, the Commissioner submitted a statement of the case under section 28, Act XXIII of 1861, to the Chief Court for decision. Held, that if the limitation was three years the suit would lie, unless there had been a demand and refusal more than three years before action brought. Semble, the defendant being an agister or depositary, the period for suing was thirty years (section 1, clause XV, Act XIV of 1859). Held also, that the reference, though made on review, could be entertained by the Chief Court, as coming within the intention of section 28, Act XXIII of 1861. 24. Wrongfully withholding exercise of jurisdiction—Interference of Chief Court under section 35, Act XXIII of 1861.

Plaintiff's suit on a bond for Rs. 218-9-6 was dismissed by the Court of first instance, whose decision was affirmed on appeal, on the ground that the suit was barred by section 7 of Act VIII of 1859. Plaintiff petitioned the Chief Court under section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861, alleging that he had not in fact split his claim, and urging that the Lower Court had, in rejecting its suit as barred by section 7, Civil Procedure Code, exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law, i. e., had wrongfully withheld the exercise of its jurisdiction. Held, by the Chief Court, that it was not a case where the proceeding of the Lower Court could be revised under section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861 ; but that the petitioner's remedy was a review of the Lower Court's judgment. JUSSA SINGH v. NOORA. 36 P R 1872

25. Ground for review.

Held, by the Financial Commissioner, that except where the decision is so absolutely wrong in principle that there can be no doubt as to the impropriety of the judgment granting a review is unadvisable. DULA SINGH v. JOWAHIR SINGH. 1 P R 1872 Rev.

27. Review of ruling of Chief Court on case stated by Judge of Small Cause Court.

Upon a case stated by the Judge of Small Cause Court of Ludhiana, the Chief Court ruled (following Billings v. Bank of Upper India, No. 4 P. R. 1872), that the receipts of dividends in bankruptcy kept a decree alive under section 20 of Act XIV of 1859. The judgment-debtor applied for a review of the Chief Court's ruling. Held, that the application for review was inadmissible, there beingno "decree" of the Chief Court. 28. Small Cause Court.

The decree of a Small Cause Court was for payment by instalments ; and afterwards the decree-holder applied, on the ground that the circumstances of the judgment-debtor were altered, to be allowed to execute at once for the full amount. Held, that the decree was final and could not be varied on review. 29. Admitted after 90 days—Explanation of delay—Jurisdiction.

An order admitting a review of judgment after the expiration of 90 days from the date of decree, without stating that there was, or that it was shown to the satisfaction of the Court that there was, sufficient cause for the delay, is an order framed improperly, and must be set aside together with all subsequent proceedings in the cause ; the party being left to renew his application for review and to explain his delay, as if no such subsequent proceedings had taken place (per BOULNOIS and LINDSAY, JJ. (CAMPBELL, J., dissenting).

Per CAMPBELL, J.—Where the order admitting the review was not objected to by the opposite side on the ground that the delay had not been explained, and the objection was put forward when the subsequent proceedings had lasted two or three years, it might be assumed that the delay was at the proper time satisfactorily explained. MUSSAMMAT FATTO v. LASHKAR KHAN. 101 P R 1876

30. Explanation of delay in applying for review—Special appeal.

The admission of a review applied for after the lapse of 90 days, lies in the discretion of the Court, but an error in the principle governing the exercise of that discretion is ground for special appeal. It is an error for the Court to satisfy itself only as to the delay for 90 days; the subsequent delay must also be explained by the applicant. Where the Lower Court admitted a review nearly two years after decree, and inquired only as to the delay for 90 days the Chief Court returned the case for the applicant to explain his further delay. HYAT v. RAHIM-UD-DIN. 114 P R 1876

31. Second application for review—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877*), section* 629.

A second application for review which is in effect an application to review an order passed on an application for review, cannot, under the last clause of section 629, Act X of 1877, be entertained. KHARAK SINGH v. PANJAB SINGH. 6 P R 1878

32. Decree by confession.

Per PLOWDEN, J.—Under the Code of Civil Procedure, a decree by confession may be set aside by review if the attainment of the ends of justice require it, and therefore, if it appears that the confession of judgment was made by an agent under such circumstances that it operated as a fraud upon the defendant, or was made in error or acted as a surprise upon him, he would be prima facie entitled to the relief sought in an application for review of the judgment following on such confession. ABDUL MAJID v. FAZL HAQ. 58 P R 1878

33. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877*), sections* 5, 623, and Schedule II—Decree or order of Small Cause Court constituted under Act XI of 1865.

Held by a majority of the Full Bench (ELSMIE, J., contra), that the decrees or orders of Small Cause Courts constituted under Act XI of 1865 are subject to review of judgment under Chapter XLVII of the Civil Procedure Code. SITA RAM v. HUKM SINGH. 29 P R 1879

34. Act X of 1877, sections 281, 283—Order disallowing claim to attached property—Review.

Held, by the Full Bench, that an order passed under section 281 of Act X of 1877 disallowing a claim to release of property attached in execution of decree, is not open to review, such review being excluded by the concluding words of section 283, Act X of 1877. In re BANWARI LAL. 143 P R 1879

35. Small Cause Court Judge reviewing his predecessor's judgment—Act X of 1877, sections 210, 624—Fixing instalments without decree-holder's consent—Jurisdiction.

Where the Judge of a Small Cause Court on the judgment-debtor's application modified a decree passed by his predecessor by ordering that the said decree should be payable by instalments, the Chief Court on the revision side set aside the order as made without jurisdiction, the Judge having no power to entertain an application for review of his predecessor's judgment, except on the grounds specified in section 624, Act X of 1877, nor being able under section 210 to alter the decree by fixing instalments without the decree-holder's consent, which was not given. GOPI MAL v. AHMED HASSAN. 144 P R 1879

36. Power of Chief Court to review order of Financial Commissioner.

Held, that the Chief Court has no jurisdiction to review an order of the Financial Commissioner passed when a Settlement of land revenue is in progress, after the Settlement operations have been declared at an end. Devi Ditta v. Ghuseeta (No. 38 P. R. 1869), followed. Bijja Singh v. Namdar (No. 16 P. R. 1871), referred to. NIAMATULLA v. KAIMDIN. 5 P R 1881

37. Small Cause Court—Deposit of amount of decree by applicant—Act XI of 1865, section 21—New trial.

Held, that an application for a review of a judgment of a Small Cause Court by a defendant can be entertained though he fails to deposit with it the amount for which the decree is passed against him, as the provisions of section 21 of Act XI of 1865, regarding deposit upon application by a defendant for a new trial, do not extend to an application for a review of judgment under section 623 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Sita Ram v. Hukm Singh (No. 29 P. R. 1879, F. B.) cited. PRESIDENT, MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, DELHI v. SULLUR. 60 P R 1881

38. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877*), sections* 522, 623—Review of judgment passed in accordance with an award of arbitrators.

Held, that under the provisions of section 623 of the Code of Civil Procedure, a review is admissible of a judgment passed in accordance with an award of arbitrators, there being nothing in section 522 of the same Code, which merely excludes an appeal from the decree in such a case, to exclude the admissibility of a review. BUTA v. GUNI DAS. 111 P R 1881

39. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877*), sections* 578, 623—Error in law—Sufficient cause—Power of appellate Court to reverse decree passed after review erroneously granted—Error not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court.

It cannot be laid down as a matter of law

that an application for review made upon the ground of error in law in the judgment to be reversed is not based upon a sufficient reason for review, within the meaning of section 623 of the Civil Procedure Code, so as to justify a reversal of the final order passed upon review. Even if the proper procedure, in order to correct a positive error in law, is by way of appeal rather than review, and an order admitting a review for this purpose is for this reason erroneous, still, as it is an error not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court, it is contrary to the express prohibition in section 578 of the Code for an Appellate Court to reverse the decree subsequently passed, merely on the ground that the application ought not to have been granted. HIRA v. MUSSAMMAT MALO. 128 P R 1881

40. Plea of want of jurisdiction of first Court—Ground for review.

On an application for review of judgment in which the plaintiff urged that the first Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit, and it appeared that no plea of want of jurisdiction had been advanced by either of the parties in the lower Courts, nor by the plaintiff till after his appeal to the Chief Court had been dismissed by a single Judge in Chambers, the Chief Court held without deciding whether the plea advanced was correct or otherwise, that it was not one which the Court was bound to admit at the present stage of the case, especially coming as it did from the plaintiff himself. MARATIB KHAN v. MUSSAMMAT MOUJO. 94 P R 1882

41. Respondent applying for review of Chief Court's order on ground of discovery of new evidence—Admissibility of such application—Act X of 1877, section 623.

Held by the Full Bench, that under section 623 of the Civil Procedure Code a review can be granted of a judgment passed by the Chief Court on second appeal upon the ground that the respondent has discovered new and important evidence since the decision of the appeal, his inability to produce such evidence before not arising from any want of due diligence on his part. LALA MAL v. GHULAM MUHAMMAD. 145 P R 1882

42. Act X of 1887, section 629—Admissibility of second application for review.

Held, that the prohibition contained in the last clause of section 629 of the Civil Procedure Code to the admission of an application to review the order passed on review or on an application for review, does not extend to the admission of a second review of the original order, when some fresh ground is advanced in support of such application which the applicant was not in a position to adduce in a former application. Kharak Singh v. Punjab Singh (No. 6 P. R. 1878), referred to. JAI GOPAL v. JOWAHIR. 107 P R 1883

43. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 624—Application "made" to Judge other than Judge who delivered the original judgment.

Held, that upon a reasonable construction of section 624 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the mere presentation of a petition praying for a review of judgment is not "making an application for review" within the meaning of the section, such application being made when the petitioner moves the Court to bring its mind to bear upon the merits of the petition for review, and when that is done for the first time in respect to the successor of the Judge who delivered the judgment, the application is made to the successor within the meaning of the section. AZIZ-UD-DIN v. BADAR-UD-DIN.

44. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), sections 624, 626—Application when "made" to the Judge who passed the original decision.

Held, that when a petition for review is presented to the Judge who passed the judgment complained of, and that Judge, instead of rejecting it under section 626, Civil Procedure Code, orders it to be entertained, and the opposite party to be called upon to show cause why it should not be allowed, the application may fairly and reasonably be held to have been "made" to the Judge who passed the original decision, within the meaning of section 624 of the Code. Aziz-ud-din v. Badar-ud-din (No. 134 *P. A subordinate Court is competent to review his judgment on an application put in before an appeal has been preferred against his decree and is not prevented from proceeding upon it by the subsequent presentation of an appeal, but he cannot entertain or deal with any such petition after an appeal in the case has been decided by a superior Court although it might have been put in proper time and is still pending in his Court.

46. Review—Review by some only of several defendants—Power of Court to reverse decision as regards persons not parties to the review—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 544, 623.

One Phusa, a Jain Jat, died childless leaving immovable property which in default of heirs reverted to the proprietary body of the village. A, also a Jain of the same village, claimed to be a collateral of the deceased and brought a suit against all the khewatdars of the village for recovery of possession. The suit was decreed. Among the defendants four alone applied for a review of judgment on the ground that they have discovered the pedigree-table of the Settlement of 1863, which conclusively proves that the plaintiff was not a collateral of the deceased proprietor. The other defendants were neither impleaded in the review proceedings nor did they take any steps to become parties to it. After enquiry the Court granted the review and reversed the decree as to the petitioners without disturbing decree as to those defendants who were not parties to the review proceedings. Thereupon the remainder of the khewatdars appealed to the Divisional Judge urging that the claim of the plaintiff should have been dismissed not only as regards the share of the four petitioners but as regards all the defendants. The Divisional Judge accepted this view and dismissed the whole claim.

Held, that the Divisional Judge had no jurisdiction to reverse the decree of the first Court against the appellants, who being no party to the application for review, nor to the subsequent proceedings, had no locus standi to appeal to the Divisional Judge.

Section 544, Civil Procedure Code, has no application to applications for review; that section applies only to appeals and cannot be applied to reviews by analogy, for there is in effect no analogy between the two.

Held, by the Chief Court, that it was not a case where the proceedings of the lower Court could be revised under section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861 ; but that the petitioner's remedy was a review of the lower Court's judgment. JUSSA SINGH v. NOORA.

34. Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), sections 401, 622—Order refusing application for leave to sue in forma pauperis.

In a suit for partition of the ancestral property of the parties, the lower Court dismissed an application by plaintiff for leave to sue as a pauper on the ground that he was in possession of sufficient property to enable him to pay the Court-fee. The plaintiff applied for revision of this order on the ground that the property referred to by the Court as being in his possession formed part of the ancestral property for partition of which the suit was brought, and being part of the subject-matter of the suit, should not, with reference to the Explanation to section 401 of the Civil Procedure Code, have been taken into account.

Held, overruling an objection by respondent that the present application was not admissible under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code that the enquiry as to whether the plaintiff was a pauper being a judicial proceeding, and the order determining it not being subject to appeal the person against whom the question is decided may apply to the Chief Court for revision of the order on any of the grounds stated in section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Lakhu v. Mussammat Ramu (No. 81 *P. 35. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 622—Application for revision of order rejecting appeal from order refusing to set aside ex-parte decree—"Case" in which no appeal lies.

Held, that an application to the Chief Court to set aside an order passed by a Commissioner rejecting an appeal from an order by a Judicial Assistant refusing to set aside an ex-parte decree is not one which properly falls under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, as that section only applies to cases in which no appeal lies to the High Court; whereas in the above case an appeal would have lain to the Chief Court in the ordinary course, if the defendants had chosen to adopt the remedy of appeal which the law allowed to them from an ex-parte decree, instead of the alternative remedy allowed by section 108 of the Code. Mussammat Sahib Dai v. Jaga Singh (No. 105 *P. 36. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), sections 206, 622—Appeal from amended decree—Rejection of such appeal as barred by time—Application to revise order of rejection.

Upon the application of the plaintiff decree-holder, the first Court, after giving notice to the judgment-debtors under section 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, amended the decree in the suit so as to bring it into conformity with the judgment. The judgment-debtors then brought a miscellaneous appeal (on a Court fee stamp of one rupee) from the amended decree to the Commissioner, who rejected the appeal as barred by limitation. On an application by the judgment-debtors to the Chief Court, under section 622, Civil Procedure Code, for revision of the last named order held, that the defendants' remedy was to bring a regular appeal on full stamp to the Commissioner from the amended decree within the period of limitation and as an appeal would have lain to the Chief Court from the Commissioner's decree on such appeal, an application under section 622 of the Code was barred, and the fact that the judgment-debtors delayed in appealing to the Commissioner's Court till their appeal was barred by time gave them no right to make the present application and conferred no power on the Chief Court to entertain it. 38. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 622—Chief Court's powers of revision—Court acting in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally.

Held, following the ruling of the Privy Council in Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Bakhsh Singh (I. L. R. 11 Calc. 6), that section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code does not authorize the Chief Court to interfere with an erroneous decision on the ground that the Court which passed it has acted in exercise of its jurisdiction illegally.

Where the lower Court has given a wrong decision on the question whether the plaintiff had a cause of action for the relief prayed for, the case falls within the principle of the decision of the Privy Council above cited, provided that the lower Court had jurisdiction to decide and did decide, whether a cause of action existed or not. 64 P R 1885

39. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 622—Chief Court's powers of revision.

Held, that where a Court having jurisdiction over a suit or other proceeding has to consider a plea of limitation and does consider and decide it, but erroneously, the error in the decision is not an irregularity within the meaning of section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, so as to open a door to revision. Rama v. Jowahir (No. 64 *P. 29 P R 1886

41. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 622—Chief Court's powers of revision—Lower Appellate Court passing erroneous decision as to first Court's jurisdiction.

Held, that an appellate judgment deciding, though erroneously, that the Court of first instance had jurisdiction to hear the suit, is not open to revision by the Chief Court where no appeal lies, as the lower Appellate Court cannot in such a case be said to have exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law, simply because it has come to an erroneous decision on a question of jurisdiction raised by an appeal properly preferred to it, and which it was therefore bound to decide, nor could it be said, under such circumstances, that the Appellate Court had acted with material irregularity. Rama v. Jowahir (No. 64 *P. REVISION IN CIVIL CASES—contd.

In a suit by plaintiff to compel the defendant to close certain windows recently enlarged, which the plaintiff alleged interfered with his privacy and caused him inconvenience, the lower Courts, though holding that no recognized customary right of privacy to householders was established, decreed the demolition of the windows.

Held, that as the Courts had virtually decided that the plaintiff had no cause of action, and yet notwithstanding this had given him a decree, they must be held to have exercised a jurisdiction not vested in them by law, which warranted the interference of the Chief Court under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Rama v. Jowahir (No. 64 *P. 43. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 622—Small Cause Court granting new trial without notice to opposite party—Material irregularity—Act XI of 1865, section 21.

Held, that the omission by a Small Cause Court to call on the opposite party to show cause before granting a new trial under section 21 of Act XI of 1865, is not a material irregularity in the exercise of the Court's jurisdiction within the meaning of section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code.

It is, however, desirable and fitting that a new trial should not be granted until the opposite side has been allowed to show cause against it. MAHNA v. HARCHARN SINGH. 102 P R 1886

44. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), sections 566, 622—Appellate Court remanding case under section 566 to Court other than original Court—Court exercising jurisdiction not vested in it by law—Immaterial irregularity.

Held, that a Court of first appeal in remanding a case under section 566, Civil Procedure Code, to a Court other than the Court which tried the case, cannot be said to exercise a jurisdiction not vested in it by law, within the meaning of section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The error (assuming it to be an error) is one of procedure, and the Court at most acts erroneously in the exercise of its jurisdiction, and the irregularity does not afford ground for revision unless it is shown to be material. BHOJAN DAS v. MUSSAMMAT MURADDU. 111 P R 1886

45 Discretion—Error of law.

Per Plowden, J.—It is not every legal error of the subordinate Court that entitles a party to an order from the Chief Court under section 25 of Act IX of 1887. The jurisdiction under that section is one the exercise of which is discretional with the Court, and should not be exercised except to remedy injustice. SECRETARY OF STATE v. JOHNSON. 79 P R 1888

46. Amendment of decree—Appeal—Revision.

REVISION IN CIVIL CASES—contd.

Held, that whether or not an amended decree made in the proper exercise of the power conferred by section 206, Civil Procedure Code, is a new decree for the purposes of appeal (if no appeal has already been made), the mere order which directs the decree to be amended is a separate adjudication and is not a decree, and being an order not specified in section 588 of the Code is not appealable, and therefore is open to revision on the ground of being made without jurisdiction. KHAN SHIRIN v. NASIR KHAN. 101 P R 1888

47. Court acting in the exercise of its jurisdiction with material irregularity.

On an application for revision under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, the ground urged by the plaintiff, petitioner, and found to be correct in fact was that on a date which had been fixed for the production of evidence in the first Court he produced seven witnesses for examination, whom the Court declined to examine on the ground that there was no necessity to do so; and that the Divisional Judge on plaintiff's appeal erroneously overruled the plaintiff's contention that the first Court was bound to examine the witnesses in attendance, under the mistaken view that the date when the said witnesses were present was not specially fixed for taking evidence whereas in reality the date had been so fixed.

Held, that as the erroneous decision of the Divisional Judge in affirming on appeal the decree of the Court below which was open to the objection of material irregularity was the consequence of an erroneous assumption of a fact, to wit, that the plaintiff did not tender his evidence at the time specially fixed for taking it, whereas the record showed he did do so, the decision in question was open to revision under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, read with section 70 of Act XVIII of 1884, on the ground that the Divisional Judge had acted in the exercise of his jurisdiction with material irregularity.

The interpretation put upon section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Amir Hassan v. Sheo Bakhsh Singh (I. L. R. XI Calc. 6), that, so long as a Court has jurisdiction over the subject-matter of a suit, the mere circumstance that the Court decides wrongly is no ground for saying that it has exercised its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity, must, to be precisely understood, be considered in connection with the particular question which their Lordships had to decide, viz, whether the Judicial Commissioner had jurisdiction to set aside the orders of the Courts below from which there was no further appeal to his Court, merely because in his opinion they had erroneously decided a plea of res judicata which arose in the case.

The matter stands in a different light when the wrong decision is the result of an erroneous assumption that a certain law or fact exists which has really no existence. In the latter case the High Court can interfere on the ground of material irregularity. Rama v. Jowahir (No. 64 P. R. 1885), Hari Singh v. Dit Mal (No. 22 P. R. 1888) and Dowlat Ram v. Asa Ram (No. 46, ibid) referred to. SARDAR FAKIR MUHAMMAD KHAN v. KASIM. 105 P R 1888

48. Revision in Civil Cases—Material irregularity—Error in law.

Held, that though a mere error in law in a lower Court is not matter of revision under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, and if a Court apprehending the points at issue and looking at certain documents or certain sections of an Act, necessary to arrive at a decision comes on consideration to a legal conclusion as to the interpretation of such section or the construction of such documents, which conclusion may be held to be bad in law, the power of revision under the above section does not arise, yet where the Court has assumed a fact to exist or has assumed the applicability of a rule or a sections of an Act which does not exist at all or is wholly inapplicable, then there is material irregularity which the Chief Court, in revision, can correct. SHIB DIAL v. JHANDA MAL. 42 P R 1889

49. Arbitration—Arbitrators omitting to examine all the defendant's witnesses, Lower Court overruling plea of misconduct and giving judgment in terms of award—Ground for revision—Material irregularity—Court giving wrong decision upon legal question.

In this case it was objected that the arbitrators did not examine all the witnesses, though they were present. The lower Court found that the arbitrators were not bound to take all the evidence produced, but only so much as they considered necessary for the purpose of justice, and finding no misconduct proved, made a decree in terms of the award. Held, that the decision was wrong, but it was not open to revision as the Court considered the objection, and adjudicated upon it, and the mere circumstance that the adjudication was erroneous was no ground for revision. PIR BAKHSH v. BAWA NIHAL SINGH. 58 P R 1889

50. Compromise—Guardian—Civil Procedure Code, sections 462—464.

When a guardian ad litem compromised a suit without the sanction of the Court in which the suit was pending, and the Court passed a decree on the compromise without making any inquiry as to whether it was beneficial to the minor or not. Held, that the Court committed a material irregularity. the ground that the plaint did not show a cause of action. The second suit was dismissed on the ground that it was barred by section 13, Civil Procedure Code. Held, that this order was wrong, as the plaint in the first suit had been rejected at the first hearing, and section 56 did not bar the institution of a fresh suit. It was then contended that though the order was wrong, this was not a ground for revision. Held, that when there is a misstatement of fact and a misrepresentation of what is apparent on the face of the record there is material irregularity furnishing ground for revision. BASAWA SINGH v. SEWA. 130 P R 1889

52. Revision in Civil cases—Material irregularity—Issues incorrectly framed—Points for determination of appeal incorrectly stated—Facts assumed which did not exist—Contents of document misstated— Res judicata—Effect of Privy Council decision in Raja Amir Hassan v. Sheo Bakhsh Singh (I. L. R. XI Calc. 6).

In a suit not open to further appeal to the Chief Court the lower Appellate Court concurring with the first Court dismissed the suit of plaintiffs, 17 in number, as to certain land in suit, as being barred under section 13, Civil Procedure Code, by a previous decision. In fact one of the plaintiffs had sued some of the same defendants for the same land and his suit had been dismissed merely for want of parties.

Held, that the Chief Court was competent to interfere as a Court of Revision under section 622, Civil Procedure Code. It is the duty of a Court of first instance to frame issues on the pleadings of the parties and to frame them correctly. It is the duty of an Appellate Court to state the points for determination, and to state them correctly.

An incorrect issue or an incorrect statement of the points for determination in an appeal is an irregularity which may be material, and may warrant the exercise of the Chief Court's powers of revision. The misrepresentation of documentary evidence as distinguished from the misconstruction of a document is an irregularity as distinguished from an error of law.

The judgment of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Bakhsh Singh (I. L. R XI Calc. page 6) commented upon. In that case it was not decided by the Judicial Committee that a Court which erroneously decides upon a plea of res judicata does not act illegally or with material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction, and therefore its decision cannot be set aside upon revision under section 622, Civil Procedure Code. The parties to the suit (members of a partnership) executed an agreement to refer certain accounts inter se, and as between the partnership and a certain other person A, for settlement to a private arbitrator. The arbitrator settled the account between the parties and A only. On application by plaintiffs that the agreement be filed, the Court erroneously considering that the effect of settling the parties' account with A was to settle the account inter se, and that therefore nothing remained to be determined, refused to file the agreement. Held, that this order was not open to revision, as the Court did not assume any non-existing fact, but only drew a wrong inference from admitted facts. CHIRAGH v. PIR BAKHSH. 6 P R 1890

54. Material irregularity—Absence of notice of adjourned hearing, effect of—Necessity of due diligence by parties.

A respondent had notice of the day fixed for hearing his appeal. On that day he attended, but the case was not called up. After several adjournments, the appeal was heard and decided in respondent's absence, without further notice to him. The respondent, after the day first fixed, took no steps to ascertain what was being done in the appeal, although he was in Sialkot the day before the actual hearing. The application under section 622, Civil Procedure Code, made more than a month after the hearing to set aside the decree made on appeal without notice to him of adjourned date of hearing was rejected by the Chief Court. 55. Judgments of Courts of final appeal.

District Judges sitting as Courts of final appeal in suits of the nature of small causes are bound to exercise their jurisdiction in a regular manner and to write their judgments, according to the provisions of section 574, Civil Procedure Code. In a case in which the District Judge did not state the true points for determination nor the reasons for his decision, the Chief Court on the revision side, reversed his order and directed a rehearing of the appeal. GANGA RAM v. JAWAHAR SINGH. 72 P R 1890

56. Material irregularity—Court acting in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally—Wrong decision on the question of cause of action—Assignment of decree—Remedy by regular suit.

Held, by the full Bench

(i) that the assignee of a decree (the assignment being in writing) whose application under section 232, Civil Procedure Code, had been refused by the Court, the judgment-debtor having notice of this assignment, had a cause of action against the judgment-debtor, the application and order being made in a case in which the clause added to section 244, Civil Procedure Code, by Act VII of 1888 had no operation.

Quære—As to the proper relief to be granted in such a suit.

(ii). That when a plaintiff files a plaint stating facts which, if true, constitute in law a cause of action, and the Court rejects the plaint, or dismisses the suit, merely on the ground that these facts constitute no cause, the Court fails to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law within the meaning of section 622, Civil Procedure Code. 57. Exercise of jurisdiction not vested by law—Regulation I of 1798.

Regulation I of 1798 applies only to mortgages by conditional sale, and the functions of a District Judge under that enactment are merely ministerial, not judicial. In a case where a District Judge on the application of a mortgagor in mortgages not by way of conditional sale received certain moneys tendered as the amount due on the mortgagee, issued notice to the mortgagee and decided summarily what was actually due.

Held, that the proceedings must be set aside for want of jurisdiction. SANWANT v DYA RAM. 107 P R 1890

58. Material irregularity—Proper issues not settled—Misapprehension of case.

When there had been material irregularity in framing the issues and a complete misapprehension of the case presented for decision by parties to the Court, the Chief Court under section 622, Civil Procedure Code, set aside the decree of the Appellate Court, and returned the case for re-disposal of the appeal after further enquiry, if necessary. 60. Material irregularity—Revision—Appellate Court reversing decree on point not affecting merits.

It may be a material irregularity and ground for revision, that an Appellate Court, in contravention of the provisions of section 578, Civil Procedure Code, has reversed the decree of a subordinate Court merely by reason of an irregularity not affecting the merits or the case of the jurisdiction of the Court.

No appeal lies from an order granting a review of judgment except in the cases set forth in section 629, Civil Procedure Code, 1882.

61. Material irregularity—Grounds for revision.

It is a material irregularity and forms a ground for revision when the lower Courts act upon a misrepresentation of a fact apparent upon the record or the erroneous assumption of a fact, or the application of a rule or a failure to appreciate the true points for determination raised by a general issue, such as one of res judicata or limitation, when such irregularity results in the dismissal of a suit on a technical ground, apart from the merits, which can be shown to be erroneous. The District Judge refused to issue a notice under Regulation XVII of 1806, holding that the mortgage deed propounded was not a mortgage by conditional sale and therefore not within the scope of the Regulation.

65. Execution of decree—Court refusing to execute decree on ground of indefiniteness —Power of Court to make inquiry or take evidence as to meaning of decree—Judge not following opinion expressed by his predecessor on some matter—Revision.

A decree-holder applied for execution of his decree, but the Court refused to execute it on the ground that it could not be ascertained after enquiry what was intended by the decree. On appeal by the decree-holder, the Divisional Judge held that an executing Court cannot go behind the decree itself and that the decree-holder's remedy was to apply to the Judge who made the decree to amend it. The decree-holder accordingly applied to that Judge to amend the decree, but his application was rejected. He thereupon again applied for execution and on execution being again refused, appealed to the Divisional Judge—a third officer—who, after reference to the preceding orders, directed execution to proceed. The judgment-debtor applied to the Chief Court on the Revision side on the ground that the last order of the Divisional Judge ought to be set aside inasmuch as the question whether the decree was capable of execution was res judicata by reason of the previous order of the Divisional Court.

The question having been referred to a Bench, held, that though it might be a ground for revision that the Judge of the lower Appellate Court had re-opened a question on which his predecessor had already expressed an opinion, final as regards appeal, the Chief Court is not bound to interfere on revision when it is found that the lower Appellate Court had jurisdiction over the appeal and exercised it. The Court, not being satisfied that the earlier opinion was correct, dismissed the application. MOHAN LAL v. NANAK CHAND. 16 P R 1894

66A. Sale made in contravention of terms of a compromise—Restriction on alienor's powers of alienation unknown to alienee—Omission by lower Court to frame issue as to alienee's knowledge of such restriction—"Material irregularity."

Held, that an agreement contained in a deed of compromise of a suit, that the promisor shall not exercise his power of transfer of land in dispute except in favour of the promisee is lawful and binding between the parties and enforceable against a person taking from the promisor with notice that he is so bound. The omission to raise and try an issue of fact which if decided in defendant's favour is a complete answer to the claim, is a material irregularity sufficient to warrant revision being granted. JHANDA v. LAKHA. 19 P R 1894

66. Application for revision admitted by Judge in Chambers as a further appeal on ground that there is question of law involved—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 40, sub-section (2)—Objection by respondent at the hearing that the appeal ought not to have been admitted as no question of law was involved.

Held, that when an application for revision has been admitted by a Judge in Chambers as a further appeal on the ground that there was a question of law involved, under section 40, sub-section (2) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, the respondents are not bound by such ex-parte order but are entitled to call it in question and show it was erroneous and that a further appeal did not lie, and was admitted through mistake or misconception.

The Divisional Bench, finding that there was no question of law involved, dismissed the appeal on that ground. FATTEH SINGH v. HARNAM SINGH. 80 P R 1894

67. Application to sue in forma pauperis*—Court issuing notice to defendant without preliminary inquiry—Material irregularity—"Right to sue in such Court"— Civil Procedure Code,* 1882, sections 406, 407, 408, 409, 413.

Plaintiff having applied to the District Judge for leave to sue as a pauper, the District Judge, without making any inquiry under section 406 or 407 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, issued notice to defendant, fixing a date for the parties to give evidence. On the date so fixed, the Court on an objection by defendant that plaintiff was subject to prohibition (c) of section 407 inasmuch as his suit was barred by limitation, rejected the application, for leave to sue in forma pauperis, but without specifying the section under which he acted.

Held, that the irregularity committed by the District Judge, in omitting to proceed under sections 406 and 407 before issuing notice to defendant was a "material irregularity," inasmuch as the rejection of an application under section 407 does not debar the applicant from making another similar application, whereas an order under section 409 is, under section 413, a bar to a fresh application under Chapter XXVI of the Code in respect of the same cause of action.

Held, further that the expression "right to sue in such Court" in clause (c) of section 407 was not intended to refer only to want of jurisdiction in the particular Court in which the application is made but extends to a case where the right to sue is barred by the law of limitation.

68. Suit, institution of—"Plaint presented to the proper officer"—Plaint presented to proper officer within limitation and returned to plaintiff by such officer with order endorsed thereon to present it to Subordinate Court deputed to try the suit. No subsequent presentation within time of limitation—Limitation Act, 1877, section 4*— "Material irregularity."*

Plaintiff on the 25th July 1892 filed his plaint which was on that date admittedly within time, in the Court of the District Judge, Kangra, who endorsed an order thereon that the case be made over to "the Munsif of Kangra" and returned the plaint to the plaintiff that he might himself take it to the Munsif's Court. Plaintiff, however did not present the plain to the Munsif till the 11th November 1892,on which date limitation applicable to the suit had expired. The District Judge on appeal from the Munsif's order decreeing plaintiff's claim dismissed the suit on the ground that the claim was time-barred.

Held, that the plaint having been originally presented to the proper officer within limitation was not liable to dismissal because having been improperly given back to the plaintiff by that officer, it was not again presented to the Court deputed to try the case until the period of limitation had expired and that the District Judge had committed a material irregularity in applying a rule of limitation not contained in any provision of the Limitation Act. 69. Suit for custody of wife—Minors—Reference to arbitrators—Sanction of Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 462, 522—Appeal—"Material irregularity."

Plaintiff, a minor, through his father as next friend, sued for the custody of his minor wife, whose mother was appointed her guardian ad litem. The first Court framed only one issue, viz., whether plaintiff's marriage with his wife was legal and valid, and allowed the matter in dispute to be referred by the respective guardians to two arbitrators, an umpire being appointed by itself in case of a difference of opinion. The arbitrators on the 13th November 1893, filed an award, finding the marriage proved, whereupon the Court, after allowing the usual time for objections, decreed plaintiff's claim. This decree having been confirmed on appeal by the Divisional Judge, defendants preferred a further appeal to the Chief Court.

Held, that though it was doubtful whether an appeal could be said to lie, the defects that were apparent in the proceedings of the first Court were such as to amount to "material irregularity," inasmuch as (a) the Court failed to record an order under section 462 of the Civil Procedure Code, before allowing the case to be referred to arbitrators by the guardian of the minor defendant, and (b) it was not competent to the Court to delegate to arbitrators the question, whether or not a claim for custody of a wife should be decreed, such question, especially when either party is a minor, being entirely one for the discretion of the Court. Plaintiff sued in the Small Cause Court, Lahore, on the allegations that defendant had promised that, in consideration of the sum of Rs. 100, he would either put plaintiff on the track of certain cows which had been stolen from him, or would return him the money; that plaintiff had paid defendant the said sum, but that the latter had neither pointed out the cows nor returned the money, and that, therefore, plaintiff sued him for refund of the same. The Court found that the money had been paid as alleged, and held that plaintiff was entitled to sue for its recovery, as defendant, not having done the service for which he had received it, could not retain money for doing nothing. Defendant applied to the Chief Court for revision, and it was contended, on plaintiff's behalf, that under section 25 of Act IX of 1887, the decree of the Small Cause Court could not be set aside merely on the ground of error of law.

Held, that the scope of section 25 of Act IX of 1887 is wider than that of section 622, Civil Procedure Code, and that the Chief Court when acting thereunder, is competent to correct errors of law made by Judges of Small Cause Courts.

Held, further, that plaintiff's suit was not maintainable on the ground that if defendant had actually received the money, he had committed an offence under section 215, Penal Code, and that, therefore, plaintiff could not make out his case without showing as part of it that he had himself been guilty of an illegality, viz. of abetment of the said offence. Section 203 of the Civil Procedure Code was enacted with the object of exonerating Judges of Small Cause Courts from giving their reasons for findings on simple and uncomplicated questions of fact, but it was not intended thereby to invest such Judges with power to decide difficult questions of law in an arbitrary and off-hand manner, without giving any reasons whatever in support of their findings. A discretion has been given by the said section, but such discretion must be exercised in a reasonable and judicial manner, and, if it has not been so exercised, the Chief Court will interfere on revision. Upon an application to release certain property from attachment, the lower Court declined jurisdiction under the impression that the application before it was barred by authority, and not because it found that the applicant had no case on the merits. No order under section 281, Civil Procedure Code, was passed, and there was no investigation.

Held, following I. L. R. XIII Calc. 90, and I. L R. VII Bom. 341, that the Chief Court had power to revise the order of the lower Court declining jurisdiction.

An application by a duly appointed guardian for custody of the minor was rejected by the Additional District Judge on the ground that the proper course for the guardian would be to bring a civil suit against the respondent if she refused to make over the minor to his custody. The guardian appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that the order of the lower Court was not appealable.

But held, that the said order was open to revision on the ground that the lower Court should have directed the respondent to produce the minor with a view to his being made over to the petitioner, and that in failing to do so, the lower Court failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law. WADHAWA SINGH v. MUSSAMMAT MALAN. 13 P R 1897

74. Advocate and client—Advocate's fees—Suit for money deposited with Advocate—Revision—Finding of fact by Small Cause Court.

Plaintiff sued on the allegation that he had retained defendant as counsel for defending a certain appeal in the Chief Court on the terms that he was to be paid Rs. 50 as his advanced fee and a similar sum as his back-fee on his winning the case; that subsequently he deposited Rs. 200 with defendant, on the understanding that he was to retain Rs. 150 as his back-fee in the event of success, the remainder being the back-fee for another counsel on the same terms; that the said case was lost, and that defendant refused to return the Rs. 150. Defendant, in answer to the claim, admitted his liability to refund the Rs. 50, but pleaded that as respects the balance of the Rs. 150 there was an arrangement between him and plaintiff by which he was allowed to retain it as his advance-fee for filing an application for review of judgment in the case which had been lost; that he was ready and willing to file the said application, but that plaintiff had engaged some one else to do the work. Defendant, therefore, contended that no suit lay for refund of the Rs 150 as he was a barrister. The Judge of the Small Cause Court found that defendant had failed to prove the agreement set up, and decreed the claim less a deduction of Rs. 50, which he allowed the defendant on equitable grounds for the trouble which he might have taken in thinking out the grounds of review, though none had been actually drawn up, and no copy of the judgment of the Chief Court applied for or obtained.

Held, that the award of Rs. 50 must be disallowed, and plaintiff's claim decreed

Where an Appellate Court, without going into the question on the merits which had been decided by the lower Court, and was before the Appellate Court for determination, decided the case on an admittedly erroneous view of a Full Bench ruling of the Chief Court.

76. Suit dismissed for default—Appeal from order of dismissal—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 2, 102—Revision, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 622—Case," meaning of.

Plaintiff's suit was dismissed by the first Court under section 102, Civil Procedure Code, and on the following day plaintiff applied for its re-admission, pointing out that he had been present in the Court premises all day, but had gone to the Bar-room to call his pleader, when his case was called on and dismissed for default. The first Court dismissed the application on the ground that no sufficient cause had been shown for the absence, and plaintiff appealed to the Divisional Judge, who, after an inquiry through the first Court, rejected the appeal on the ground that the case had been called on twice, first at 12 o'clock and again 2 or 2-30 P. M. and plaintiff had only accounted for his absence on the second occasion. Plaintiff appealed to the Chief Court for revision of the order of the Divisional Judge, and it was contended on behalf of defendant that an application for revision did not lie, inasmuch as the order dismissing the case for default was appealable to the Divisional Court, and thence to the Chief Court on a certificate. The questions referred to the Full Bench were (i) whether an order of dismissal for default under section 102, Civil Procedure Code, is appealable as a decree ; (ii) whether the word " case" in section 622 of the Code means the whole case in every instance, or whether a definite portion of a case for which a special remedy is provided in the Code, or specific orders in it for which a separate procedure is prescribed, can form the subject of revision under section 622 ; and (iii) whether plaintiff had shown sufficient cause for his absence.

Held, by the Full Bench (i) that an order under section 102 of the Code is a decree within the meaning of section 2, and, as such, is appealable under section 540 ; (ii) that the word " case " in section 622 does not necessarily, in every instance, mean the whole case, but may mean a particular branch of a case for which an independent remedy or a different procedure, is provided in the Code, and may include an interlocutory order not falling under section 591 ; and (iii) the Divisional Judge committed a material irregularity in not accepting the plaintiff's appeal when he found that plaintiff's absence at the time when his case was dismissed in default had been accounted for, on the ground that plaintiff had not accounted for his absence when the case was first called on. The Small Cause Court gave plaintiff a decree on his account books and the evidence of his book-keeper, who deposed that the books were kept by him from memoranda supplied to him by plaintiff, the entries in the books being made on the days on which memoranda were supplied. The plaintiff did not himself give evidence in support of his claim, nor was his absence from the witness-box accounted for.

Held, that plaintiff having declined to support his claim by the best evidence available was not entitled to succeed. HIRA BHAGAT v. GOBIND RAM. 63 P R 1897

78. Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 40 (2)—Further appeal—" Question of law involved "—Question as to admissibility of evidence—Revision—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 622.

The words " question of law involved " in section 40, sub-sections (1) (d) and (2), do not include every point of law that may arise incidentally in a case, but refer to some question of law similar in its nature to a custom or a question of general interest.

Held, therefore, that the question whether a certain judgment was admissible in evidence to prove adverse possession was not a question of law within the meaning of the said section but merely one of legal procedure incidental to the decision of the question of fact.

Semble : The fact that inadmissible evidence has been admitted in a case would be a ground for revision under section 622, Civil Procedure Code, if the Court had not brought its mind to bear on the question whether such evidence was admissible or not. If, however, the Court has considered the question, but decided wrongly, there would be no relief under the said section of the Code. NUR ILAHI v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, DELHI. 68 P R 1897

Held, that there is nothing in the Civil Procedure Code or in the Small Cause Court Act, 1887, to prevent the Court entertaining a fresh petition under section 25 of the latter Act, after dismissal of a previous petition under the same section.

Held, further, that even if the former order on the previous petition could be held to be a bar to the Court entertaining the subsequent petition, the latter could, and ought to be treated as one for review of judgment, falling under clause (b) of section 623 of the Civil Procedure Code, which is wide enough to include unappealable orders of the Court hearing the application, whatever may be the status of the Court.

The Judge of the Small Cause Court dismissed plaintiffs' suit on the ground that the evidence proved that the written agreement sued upon, which purported to be one for sale of silver, was not a bona fide transaction, no actual interchange of silver being contemplated, but merely an adjustment of profit and loss with reference to a difference in the market rates. Plaintiffs applied to the Chief Court for revision of the order of dismissal on the ground, (1) that there was no evidence to show that delivery of silver was not intended and (2) that oral evidence was inadmissible to contradict the terms of the written agreement, according to which silver was to be delivered.

Held, that as there was evidence on which the Judge of the Small Cause Court might base his finding that the transaction was a wager, that finding should not be disturbed on revision.

Held, further, that the oral evidence was admissible, under the first proviso to section 92 of the Evidence Act, for the purpose of invalidating the written agreement.

Held, that a person acting under a general power-of-attorney is not competent unless specially authorised to prosecute a suit on behalf of a principal who is permanently resident within the jurisdiction of the Court, and that the temporary absence of such principal from the district does not excuse him from the obligation of having to appoint a specially authorised agent to file suits during such period.

Where a Court rejected a plaint, filed under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, by a person who held merely a general power-of-attorney from a principal who, though at the time temporarily absent, was a permanent resident within the jurisdiction of the Court.

Held, that the Chief Court should not interfere on the revision side both on the ground that the suit had been rightly dismissed, and also because the suit being one under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, the plaintiff had not been deprived of his remedy. Where a suit was dismissed as barred, according to the first Court under section 43, Civil Procedure Code, and according to the lower Appellate Court under section 13 of the Code, and it appeared that the lower Appellate Court was fully aware of the nature of the question at issue between the parties and had adequately considered the reasons for its decision on that question.

Held, that whether such decision was right or wrong, there had been no irregularity either in the Court's conception of the facts or in its method of reasoning entitling the plaintiff to a revision of the order under section 622 of the Code. BARU MAL v. AMIR-UD-DIN. 26 P R 1899

84. Question of jurisdiction—Power of Chief Court to consider lower Appellate Court's findings on facts relative to question of jurisdiction.

Semble.—Upon an application for revision under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code on the ground that the lower Courts had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, it is competent to the Chief Court to consider the correctness of the lower Appellate Court's findings on the facts relative to the question of jurisdiction. ASA RAM v. TARA CHAND. 44 P R 1899

85. Interlocutory order — Revision "Cases" meaning of.

On an application to file an award of arbitrators, the pleader for defendants pleaded orally to the effect that the reference to the arbitration was admitted, but that there was no award. After some adjournments defendant's pleader filed written objections, the substance of which was that the reference to arbitration, the meeting of the arbitrators and an award by them were denied. The Court drew certain issues, of which the second was, whether in point of fact there had been a reference, and the remainder whether the reference and award were valid. The evidence for the defence having been duly recorded, the defendant's pleader some time thereafter pleaded that the Court had no jurisdiction to inquire into the matter (No. 21 P. R. 1899, F. B.). The Court held that the objection as to jurisdiction taken at so late a stage was not tenable, and overruled it, directing plaintiff to produce his evidence as defendant had closed his case. Defendant having applied for revision of this order.

Held, that the refusal of the Court to accept the objection as to jurisdiction on the ground that the allegation upon which it was founded had not been made at an earlier stage, and was inconsistent with the oral pleas of the defendant, was, even if erroneous, not one calling for immediate interference by way of revision at the present stage.

From the absence of any provision in the Code for appeals from interlocutory orders, except certain specified ones in which a speedy decision is considered necessary, the inference is that there is to be no interference with the procedure of the lower Courts as long as a "case" is being decided, except on specified grounds, and though the word "case" in section 622 of the Code does not necessarily and in every instance mean the whole case, it must at least mean a particular bench of a case for which an independent remedy or different procedure is provided by the Code. MAHTAB RAI v. KAMAN LAL. 51 P R 1899

86. And section 623—Revision—Second application for revision after decision of first application—Review of order passed on revision—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 622 and 623.

Held, that the dismissal of an application for revision in default of apppearance does not bar the entertainment of a second application for revision, but where an application for revision has been entertained, and an order passed after consideration of the case a second application for revision should not be received, the proper remedy being for the applicant to ask for a review of judgment, which may be had in such a case. 87. Interest—Implied agreement to pay interest—Interest Act, XXXII of 1839—No objection to notice on contract—Promise to pay—Discretion of Court—Revision.

Held, that as it is within the discretion of a Court to allow interest under the provisions of the Interest Act, 1839, the Chief Court will not interefere on revision with the order of a Court disallowing interest, except where there has been an abuse of the discretion. EDULJI & Co. v. McDONALD. 55 P R 1901

88. Revision—Power of Chief Court to revise an order which was ultra vires and without authority.

REVISION IN CIVIL CASES—contd.

Although, as a genaral rule, the practice of the Chief Court is to refuse to exercise its extraordinary powers of revision when the party professing to be injured has another remedy open to him, but in a case where the order complained of was ultra vires and without authority, the Chief Court interfered on the revision side notwithstanding that the petitioner had failed to appeal from a subsequent decree of the Court below based on the petitioner's failure to obey that order. Held, by the Full Bench, that under section 70 (a) of the Punjab Courts Act the Chief Court is not bound to interfere on the revission side even when there is a defect of jurisdiction unless failure of justice has directly resulted from such defect. HANSA v. RAN SINGH AND ANOTER. 36 P R 1902 F. B.

91. Revision—Power of Chief Court to consider lower Appellate Court's findings on facts relative to question of jurisdiction.

Held, that although the Chief Court has power to look into the grounds on which the question of jurisdiction has been decided in order to see if there are grounds for interference on the revision side, this ought to be done only under very special circumstances. Ordinarily the findings of facts on which jurisdiction is decided ought to be accepted. DEVI DYAL v. HARI CHAND. 79 P R 1902

92. Decree on judgment in accordance with an award—Revision.

94. Revision—Chief Court's powers of—Practice—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 70 (1) (a) as amended.

Respondent became surety under section 336, Civil Procedure Code, for a judgment-debtor, and undertook to produce him in Court when called upon, and that he should within one month file an application to be declared an insolvent. The judgment-debtor duly applied to be declared an insolvent, but his application was rejected in default of prosecution after one appearance The decree-holder thereupon applied for the execution of his decree against the surety, which was refused by the District Judge on the ground that the obligation of the surety was discharged. The decree-holder preferred an appeal to the Chief Court, and on the Court's deciding that such an order was not appealable, the decree-holder applied for revision under section 70 (1) (a) of the Courts Act.

Held, following Joti Mal v. Coates (15 P. R 1901), that as the decree-holder had an action against the respondent on the surety bond and the question involved was of considerable importance the matter was not one for the exercise of the extraordinary powers of revision of the Chief Court under section 70 (1) (a) of the Courts Act

95. Revision from a decree in a suit to recover possession under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act—Chief Court's powers of.

Held, that a decree in a suit for the recovery of possession under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act in favour of the plaintiff is not open to revision by the Chief Court, on the ground that the Court below has misapprehended and misrepresented the evidence, oral and documentary, on the record where, on the allegations contained in the plaint, the plaintiff had a cause of action and the Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit, and the errors attributed by the petitioner to the Court below were intrinsic to the inquiry and decision. 96. Chief Court's powers of revision—Practice—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 70.

Held, that it is the general policy of the law and the usual practice of the Superior Courts that the latter should interfere on the revision side in the interests of justice only in those cases where there

97. Arbitration—Decree in accordance with an award—Revision—Civ Procedure Code, 1882, section 622.

Held, that the omission of a Court to remit an award which determines matters not referred to arbitration is not subject to revision, and, although a revision lies against a decree based upon an arbitration award on the ground of material irregularity, yet that material irregularity must have reference to the proceedings of the lower Court and not to those of the arbitrator.

Plaintiffs, whose place of business was at Lahore, filed a suit in the Court of a first class Munsif at Lahore against the defendant, who carried on business at Delhi, for the recovery of Rs. 1,000 by way of damages in respect of a breach of contract. The defendant objected to the jurisdiction of the Court, on the ground that as the contract was to be performed at Delhi the Lahore Court had no jurisdiction. The objection being overruled, the defendant applied to the Chief Court for revision of this order. Held, that such order being an interlocutory order, made with jurisdiction in a suit where an appeal is allowed from the final decree, cannot be revised under section 70 (1) (a) of the Punjab Courts Act. Held, that an order made with jurisdiction under section 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not open to revision by the Chief Court under section 70 (i) (a) of the Courts Act, on the ground that the Court below has misapprehended the facts or erred in law. Held, also, that clause (b) of section 70 being in the nature of a second appeal under the Code of Civil Procedure applies to decrees only.

REVISION IN REVENUE CASES

1887, as affecting claim to occupancy rights.

A lower Court acts with material irregularity in disposing of a plaintiff's claim to occupancy rights without reference to the new Tenancy Act, XVI of 1887.

In the Settlement Record of 1882, a Record compiled when the old Tenancy Act (XXVIII of 1868) was in force, the plaintiffs were apparently rightly recorded as being tenants-at-will, because they were not in 1868 the representatives of persons who had settled in the village with the founders (section 5 (3), Act XXVIII of 1868).

Since 1882, however, the new Tenancy Act has been passed, section 5, sub-section (1) (c) of which is much wider than section 5 (3) of the old Act.

The case remanded to the Commissioner for re-decision accordingly. AZIMULLA v. JEHANGIR KHAN. 16 P R 1892 Rev.

6. Material irregularity—Granting decree for occupancy rights under section 8, Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, on vague and ill-considered grounds.

The lower Courts decreed the plaintiff's rights of occupancy under section 8, Tenancy Act, 1887, on vague grounds and without considering the test laid down in No. 4 P. R. 1875 Rev.

Held, that this amounted to a material irregularity justifying the remanding of the case to the first Court for re-decision, after further inquiry, if necessary. LEKHA MAL v. MUHAMMAD BAKHSH. 17 P R 1892 Rev.

7. Material irregularity — Revision— Section 622, Civil Procedure Code.

The lower Courts refused to consider the defendant's claim to an occupancy status under section 5, Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, their predecessor in interest having been recorded in 1879 as a tenant under section 6 of the Act of 1868 and having taken no steps to claim a higher status.

Held, that this constituted a material irregularity, facts found being no bar to the defendants acquiring the status they claimed under section 5, if they could prove that the present conditions of their tenancy were such as to fulfil the requirements of the Tenancy Act of 1887 in respect of the acquisition of such a status. BAHADUR v. DUL CHAND.

8. Occupancy rights, claim to—Entry in record of summary Settlement—Sanction of Local Government—Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887) sections 5 (1) (a) and 6— "Material irregularity."

In a suit in which plaintiffs claimed occupancy right under section 5 (1) (a) or (c) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, the Assistant Collector framed an issue as to whether they had acquired an occupancy status under any section of the Act and took some evidence. In his judgment, however, he omitted any reference to the claim under section 5 (i) (a) or (c), but held that plaintiffs were entitled to an occupancy status under section 6, because their predecessor in interest was recorded as an occupancy tenant at the summary Settlement before the passing of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1868. This finding was upheld by the Collector on appeal.

Held, that, in the absence of proof that the record of the summary Settlement had received the sanction of the Local Government, the entry in question was not sufficient to confer upon plaintiffs an occupancy status under section 6 of Act XVI of 1887.

But held, further, that the omission on the part of the first Court to consider plaintiffs' claim under section 5 (1) (a) (c) amounted to a "material irregularity," and that the case must, therefore, be remanded for further enquiry and fresh decision thereupon. SANTA SINGH v. HAZARA SINGH. 8 P R 1895 Rev.

9. Revision—Material irregularity.

Held, that the application of a rule of limitation which in fact does not apply to the case at all amounts to a material irregularity. NARINDAR SINGH v. LEHNA SINGH.

10. Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1907, sections 3 (3), 19—Permanent alienation of land—Granting or refusing sanction—Discretion—Appeal.

Held, that an order of a Deputy Commissioner granting or refusing sanction to a permanent alienation under section 3 (3) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, is open to appeal and revision as provided by the provisions of Chapter II of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887. 11. Revision, grounds for—Wrong decision as to res judicata—Financial Commissioner's discretion unfettered.

Held, that a wrong decision as to res judicata is a good ground for revision, if it prevented a case being heard on the merits but the Financial Commissioner's discretion to exercise revisional powers in any case is quite unfettered and the broad principle to follow is to interfere only when a refusal to interfere would result in injustice or failure of justice. Held, that an occupancy tenant who has alienated his rights may recover his tenancy from the landlords after the latter have had the alienation declared void and obtained possession from the alienee, and it is no good answer to such a suit that the plaintiff is not able to show that he is no longer bound by the contract of alienation.

Held, also, that such a suit by a tenant is one for the Civil Courts and not the Revenue Courts to decide.

Held, further, that the Financial Commissioner will not exercise his discretionary powers of revision to correct a defect of jurisdiction unless it resulted in injustice or failure of justice. 1 P R 1911 Rev.

63. Suit by judgment-debtor to have adjustment of decree recognized by decree of Court—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 258.

Held, that no suit will lie by a judgment-debtor against his decree-holder to have an alleged adjustment of a decree out of Court recognized by decree of Court. The plaintiff must take proceedings under section 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, if he wishes the adjustment to be recognized.. KARM SINGH v. AMIN CHAND. 47 P R 1881

64. Suit for an account—Right to sue for an account where parties stand merely in the relation of debtor and creditor.

A suit for an account only lies when the defendant is liable to account to the plaintiff. There must be something more than the mere relation of debtor and creditor before one party can be held entitled to sue the other for an account : the defendant must stand in some other relation to the plaintiff, as, for instance, that of agent, or bailee, or receiver, or trustee, or partner, or mortgagor.

Where therefore the plaintiff was a lambardar who had executed a bond to a money-lender, and made some payments upon it, held, that he was not entitled to sue the latter for an account simply because he considered that the creditor had not carried out the stipulations of the bond in regard to the mode in which the consideration was to have been paid, and that he had not credited all the payments which had been made towards the liquidation of the debt. 65. Suit by creditor impeaching alienation by debtor—Fraud—Act I of 1877, section 42—Declaratory decree.

Held, that a mere creditor who has not obtained a decree for his debt cannot sue to impeach, as being fraudulent and void, a voluntary conveyance by his debtor; (1) because he is not competent to claim a declaration under section 42 of the Specific Relief

Act, until he has a decree for his debt; and (2) because before that decree is made, the only relief that could be sought by him is the relief afforded by a declaratory decree. Mussammat Gangi v. Mehr Chand (No. 86 P. R. 1879), cited. NATHA SINGH v. GURBAKSH SINGH. 10 P R 1882

66. Agent suing in place of principal—Dismissal of suit—Power of Appellate Court to substitute the principal as plaintiff—Act X of 1877, sections 27, 582.

The practice of a gomashta instituting a suit in his own name, describing himself as gomashta of a specified firm, is not a correct practice, as the suit brought should be brought by the person or persons in whom the legal right of suit is vested, and not by agents in their own names.

Quaere, whether the combined effect of section 27 and section 582 of the Civil Procedure Code is to empower an Appellate Court to substitute the principal as plaintiff, on sufficient grounds being shown for such a course. THAKUR DASS v. GOLAM MOHYUDDIN. 20 P R 1882

67. Suit for land allotted in execution of decree—Actual possession—Formal possession—Limitation.

Plaintiffs, having obtained a decree for a share in an estate, applied formally for execution of such decree, and their application having been made over to the Revenue authorities, fields representing their share were divided off to them, the proceedings being duly affirmed, and orders being finally passed that the partition was completed and effect should be given to it in the Patwari's papers. Plaintiffs never having taken actual possession of the fields allotted to them, after more than three years had elapsed, brought a regular suit for the fields allotted to them in the above-noted execution-proceedings.

Held, that such a suit would lie, if brought within 12 years from the date of the close of the execution-proceedings, as formal possession had been awarded to the plaintiff's in the mode in which such possession is ordinarily given in execution of such decrees, and limitation ran from the date of such formal possession. MUSSAMMAT KARIM-NISSAN v. BASHO. 75 P R 1882

68 Suit on decree—Execution.

Where plaintiff obtained a decree for a share in an occupancy tenure, which he never executed, nor did defendant allow him to take possession of the land, whereupon the plaintiff instituted a second suit for the same land after the period within which the previous decree could be executed had expired, held, that the decree being unconditional and giving a relief which the decree-holder could enforce by taking out execution, if the judgment-debtor did not give up possession out of Court, the decree-holder was bound to follow the procedure prescribed by law to enforce the right created by the suit and could not again proceed by action. DASONDHA SINGH v. WARIAM SINGH. 78 P R 1882

69. Suit for declaratory decree—Declaration of right to build a wall—Subsequent obstruction by defendant—Right of plaintiff to maintain a fresh suit for an injunction.

Where the plaintiff sued for and obtained a decree declaratory of his right to build up a wall which formerly divided off his house from the defendant's, and there was no allegation that the defendant had taken possession of the site on which the old wall had stood, held, that a subsequent suit based on the allegation that the defendant had prevented the plaintiff from building up the same wall, and praying for an injunction that the said defendant might be restrained from obstructing him, the plaintiff, in exercising a right which he was declared entitled to exercise by a competent Court, was maintainable; and further, that supposing even that in the former suit the plaintiff had asked and obtained a decree for possession of the site of the old wall as well as for a declaration of his right to rebuild the wall, provided that he was not again suing for possession of the site, which he could only obtain by process of execution, the existence of the previous decree would not be a bar to his seeking a subsequent injunction founded on a distinct and later act of obstruction on the part of the defendant, as such an act would constitute a fresh cause of action, and the only advantage of the previous decree would be, supposing the parties in the two suits to be identical, that the issue as to the plaintiff's right to rebuild the wall would be a res judicata. GHULAM GHOUS v. SHER MUHAMMAD. 111 P R 1882

70. Public road—Obstruction—Damage—

Held, that a civil suit does not lie for an obstruction to a public road or highway unless the plaintiff can show some particular damage to himself personally in addition to the general inconvenience occasioned to the public. Lalu v. Jamiyat Rai (No. 72 *P. Where plaintiff sued on a bound executed by defendant in satisfaction of a decree passed in favour of plaintiff's husband against defendant, held, that the suit was not liable to be dismissed in accordance with the last sentence of section 258 of the Civil Procedure Code because plaintiff had failed to certify satisfaction of the decree to the Court, as the decree having been superseded by a valid contract between the parties, there was no reason why plaintiff should not sue on the new bond. MUSSAMMAT KISHEN DEVI v. UMR DIN. 182 P R 1882

72. Suit to recover money paid out of Court in satisfaction of decree—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 258.

Held, that no suit will lie to recover money paid out of Court in satisfaction of a decree, section 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, as amended by Act XII of 1879, providing that no such payment shall be recognized by any Court unless it has been certified. Karm Singh v. Amin Chand (No. 47 P. R. 1881), followed. ALA BAKSH v. MUHAMMAD SHAH. 11 P R 1883

73. Suit for value of ornaments alleged to have been stolen by defendant—Merger of tort in felony.

The principle that tort merges in a felony, which is recognized in the English Courts as suspending the right of civil action until the party guilty of the felony shall have been prosecuted, is not one which applies in the Mufassil Courts in India.

Held, therefore, that a suit brought to recover the value of certain ornaments which it was alleged by the plaintiff that the defendant had stolen, was one cognizable by a Civil Court. MUSSAMMAT BEGAM v. MUSSAMMAT UMRAO. 26 P R 1883

74. Suit for damage sustained in consequence of defendant's neglect to drain his garden—Sicutero tuo ut alienum non laedas. explained.

Held that a suit for damages, based on an allegation that defendant had neglected to drain his garden so as to prevent water from collecting there and injuring the adjoining property of the plaintiff, is not maintainable, as the owner of property is under no legal obligation to incur expense upon it for the benefit of his neighbours, where it has not been altered in character by his acts or with his permission in such a way as to expose them to any injury. BALDEO DAS v. SECRETARY OF STATE. 30 P R 1883

75. Suit for wager lost and paid.

Held, that an action will not lie to recover money which has actually been lost and paid on a wager. Ram Karan v. Zahira (No. 101 P. R. 1868), cited. KANDARI MAL v. SAVANT MAL. 89 P R 1883

76. Damages, suit for—Plaintiff failing in suit for land because defendant had made over the title-deed to the original donors—Wrongful act—Measure of damages.

Plaintiff sued the defendant for damages on the ground that he had failed in a previous suit to obtain possession of certain land, because the said defendant had kept back the deed of gift on which plaintiff based his title and had made it over to the original donors. Plaintiff had brought the previous case against the donors of the land and the Court had dissmissed the claim, because the deed was not forthcoming.

Held, that the defendant by making over plaintiff's instrument of title to third party, whose interest was clearly adverse to plaintiff, had committed a wrongful act, and was liable for damages: that there was no necessity for proving that the possession of the document originated in a crime, or to enquire how the defendant got possession, the question being whether, after he had got possession of the deed, he could justify his making over the said deed to a party whose interest was adverse to plaintiff, in which he had entirely failed.

Held further, that plaintiff was entitled to recover the full value of the estate by way of damages. KHAN MUHAMMAD v. MORAD BAKSH. 116 P R 1883

77. Suit on hundi which has not been presented for payment.

Held, that a suit cannot be brought to recover on a hundi until it has been presented and payment has been objected to or refused. MALORI MAL v BUTA MAL. 148 P R 1883

78. Compensation awarded to Hindu widow under Land Acquisition Act—Suit by reversioner for apportionment of such compensation—Widow's right to absolute possession—Waste.

Plaintiff, the reversionary heir, sued the defendant, a Hindu widow, for a portion of the sum which had been awarded to her by the Collector as compensation for a house which had been taken up under the Land Acquisition Act.

Held, that the plaintiff's suit as framed would not lie, the interest of the plaintiff in the estate being merely a contingent interest, and it being necessary that the foundation of any suit by him against the widow with reference to her husband's estate should be either that her acts were such as to interfere with his interest in an unauthorized manner, or that her conduct amounted to waste of the estate.

Semble: had the plaint contained an allegation that the defendant was wasting the money or by her conduct manifested an intention of wasting it, this would have given rise to a cause of action to restrain her from waste, and possibly in a suit founded on such cause of action, if the allegation were proved, such directions might be given as to the custody and investment of the money as to protect it from waste. MUSSAMMAT PRAB DEVI v. HARKISHEN DAS. 47 P R 1884

79. Suit by worshippers at Hindu temple to set aside improper alienation of property belonging to the temple—Act XX of 1863.

Plaintiffs, who were residents in the mohalla in which the temple in dispute was situate and supporters of the worship, sued to set aside an improper alienation by the defendants of certain property belonging to the temple.

Held, that the suit was maintainable, the plaintiffs being persons beneficially interested in the maintenance of the worship, and that there was no reason for holding that a suit, which did not relate to property which could have come under the control of Government under Regulation XIX of 1810, and Act XX of 1863, must be brought under the provisions of the latter Act. or that, apart from that Act, the plaintiffs could have no right to sue. Wullee Oola v. Kurreem Bukhsh (No. 81 P. R. 1869), cited. SUKH RAM DAS v. SUNDAR MAL. 75 P R 1884

80. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 258—Suit to recover money paid in satisfaction of decree, but not certified to the Court by the decree-holder.

Held, by the Full Bench, that the language of the last clause of section 258 of the Civil Procedure Code does not exclude a suit to recover the money paid to a decree-holder and not applied in satisfaction of the decree, because he failed to certify the payment to the Court whose duty it was to execute the decree, as the words "any Court" in the above clause are to be construed as restricted to the Court executing the decree, and the Courts having jursidiction over the execution-proceedings as such. Karm Singh v. Amin Chand (No. 47 P. R. 1881), and Ala Bakhsh v. Muhammad Shah (No. 11 P. R. 1883), overruled. Mamu v. Kalu Mal (No. 66 P. R. 1877), referred to. MULA MAL v. RAHMAN. 83 P R 1884

81. Suit for cancellation of condition in Wajib-ul-arz—Provision for partition by mutual consent of proprietors or by order of competent authority (ba hukm sarkar).

Plaintiffs sued to cancel a provision in the Wajib-ul-arz of the village, which provided that the kinds of land last mentioned therein should be divisible "either with the mutual " consent of all the proprietors or by order of " competent authority (ba hukm sarkar)."

Held, that the suit was not maintainable, as it was not for the Civil Court to decide in the first instance whether the land ought to be divided or not, the "hukm sarkar" clearly not being the order of a Civil Court. MEDU v. NIKKA. 100 P R 1884

82. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), sections 316, 318—Suit for possession—Delivery of possession in execution-proceedings—Formal possession—Complete transfer of possession.

Plaintiffs sued to obtain possession of a garden alleging that they had previously been put in possession of it by order of Court under a purchase made by their father in execution of a decree against the defendant, and that they had subsequently been ousted by the defendant. The defendant denied that the plaintiffs had ever obtained possession of the garden. It appeared that the plaintiffs as representatives of the auction-purchaser (their father) had applied to the Court to be put in possession under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, and an order to put them in possession was made and the officer of the Court reported that possession had been given.

Held, that the plaintiffs' suit would lie; that assuming the possession given in the execution proceedings was only formal, it was sufficient to perfect the title which the plaintiffs' father acquired by purchase at the auction sale in execution of decree, and must, as against the defendant, be taken to have operated as a complete transfer of the possession to the plaintiffs. KARAM BAKSH v. NAND LAL.

83. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 11—Cause of action—Suit brought in British territory on liability contracted in foreign territory.

Held, that an alleged liability contracted in foreign territory can form the basis of an action brought against a British subject in a district in which he resides at the time when the suit is brought, provided that the law of the country where the transaction took place between the plaintiff and the defendant recognized it as a transaction attaching liability by the latter to the former, and provided it be not opposed to morality or the law of British India. HARI SINGH v. TUCKER. 4 P R 1885

84. Suit by worshippers at shrine to set aside mortgage by Puj of property belonging to the shrine.

A suit brought by certain Bhabras of Jagraon to have a mortgage by the Puj of property said to belong to a religious institution set aside, held to be maintainable, it being found that the plaintiffs were worshippers at the shrine, and therefore had an interest in seeing that the property which ought to be used for its due support was not diverted to private objects. Sukh Ram Das v. Sundar Mal (No. 75 P R 1884), followed. RAM PARTAB v. KALU MAL.

85. Suit for cancellation of mortgage—Covenant not to alienate.

Plaintiff sued for the cancellation of a mortgage executed by one of the defendants in favour of the other, in contravention of a covenant made by the mortgagor with the plaintiff, by which he bound himself not to alienate the property by sale or mortgage elsewhere, until he had first satisfied the mortgage debt due to the plaintiff.

Held, that the suit as laid was not maintainable, as the later lien created by the mortgagor did not affect injuriously or encroach upon the rights of the plaintiff as prior mortgagee, who had therefore no ground for suing for a declaration that the lien was invalid. Faiz Muhammad Jan v. Kazi Muhammad Amir Jan (No. 10 P. R. 1879), referred to. CHUNI LAL v. BADAR MAL.

86. Cause of action—Suit against representative of deceased agent for account.

ber 1880 without accounting: that the balance on that date in plaintiff's favour was estimated at Rs. 3,700; and that the defendant was the son, and in possession of the property of the deceased S. M. The plaintiff also desired that an account might be taken of the amount recoverable by him, and a decree be made for that amount in his favour.

Held, that the plaint disclosed a cause of action against the defendant, and further, that plaintiff was entitled to have the account taken and to have a decree for the sum found to be the balance due upon the account between him and S. M. as it stood upon the day of his death. SETH CHAND MAL v. KALIAN MAL. 96 P R 1886

87. *Cause of action—Suit by Insolvency Court or Official Assignee for declaration of right to an unexecuted decree obtained by Insolvent—*Locus standi of plaintiff—Duty of Court to attach property of Insolvent outside the jurisdiction.

A suit brought either by an Insolvency Court through its official assignee, or (as it was contended) by the Official Assignee, to have it declared that a decree obtained by an insolvent, which was at present unexecuted, was the property of the Insolvency Court, held not to be maintainable, as in either case the plaintiff had no locus standi.

If the suit were regarded as having been brought by the Insolvency Court, or by the said Court through the Official Assignee, it would not lie, as the Court was not the legal owner of the decree as a trustee for the Assignee.

If the Official Assignee were regarded as plaintiff, still the suit would not lie, as the rules made under Act IV of 1872 (vide Rules 10 and 15) clearly contemplate that the Court should attach the property of an insolvent not within its own jurisdiction, and not that it should come either itself or by its Receiver to the Court as a suitor to be declared a decree-holder. KIDAR NATH v. OMAN PERSHAD. 118 P R 1886

88. Husband's right to maintain a suit in his own name for slanderous imputations against his wife—Special damage.

Held, that there is no rule of law in force in India which prevents a husband suing in his own name for damages for a slanderous imputation against his wife's chastity or modesty, which has produced no special and consequential damage to him; and that an imputation of this kind when published with such particularity and precision, that having regard to time and place, it may well create a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the husband that his reputation is injured and thus inflict on him the pain consequent on such a belief, is actionable per se. 89. Cause of action—Suit by plaintiff on allegation that defendant being the agent of third parties received certain money from plaintiff which he omitted to pay over to his principals—Obligation as between debtor and the agent of the creditor that latter should pay over money received to his principal—Discharge of debtor by payment to agent of creditor.

H. and J., through their agent P., sold certain sleepers to one N. who was in the transaction an agent for his brother, K. N. paid P. the price of the sleepers, but subsequently H. sued K. for the price of the same sleepers, and K. having denied the purchase, a decree was made against him for the amount claimed. This amount was paid into Court by N. to satisfy the decree against K., and N. then sued P. to recover the amount of the decree with interest.

Held, that the suit was not maintainable. All that could be alleged against the defendant was that he being the agent of H. and J. received certain monies from the plaintiff, which he did not pay over to his principals whereby the plaintiff was damaged. There was no allegation of an express contract of the defendant with the plaintiff to pay the money to his principals, and in the absence of an express contract, there is no obligation as between the person who pays a debt and the agent of the creditor, that the latter shall pay the monies received to his principal. Payment to an agent authorized to receive payment of a debt is payment to the principal creditor, and discharges the debtor: thereafter the disposal of the monies received by the agent is a matter in which, in the absence of express contract, the agent is responsible to his principal only. 90. *Suit by minors to set aside decree—*Bona fides of previous guardian ad litem*—Cause of action.*

A suit brought by certain minors to set aside a decree passed against them, in which it appeared from the plaint that the plaintiffs were impugning the bona fides of the person who had assumed to represent them in the previous litigation, held, to be prima facie maintainable, and one in which the Court was not justified in refusing to go into the question whether the transaction impeached by the plaintiffs could be upheld against them, subject to any defence by the defendants not based upon the mere form of the suit. 91. Partition of joint property—Suit for partition of a portion only of the ancestral property—Right to maintain such suit without assent of defendant.

If a sharer in joint property chooses to select a portion of the joint property for partition, and sue for partition of that alone, his suit for partition of such portion cannot proceed without the assent or acquiescence of the defendant. If the latter object, the plaintiff must either amend with the leave of the Court so as to include the whole of the joint property or such less portion as the parties agree to divide, or submit to have his suit dismissed. RIGHT TO SUE—contd.

280, Civil Procedure Code, on the objection of a person not a party to the suit, sued to establish his right to such property. Held, that the suit lay, and that no appeal lay under section 244, as the property was released on the objection of a person not a party to the suit. 93. Suit to contest order under section 133, Criminal Procedure Code—Removal of nuisance.

In a suit to establish plaintiff's right to close a way by building two walls across it, at either end, it appeared that defendant had obtained an order from the Criminal Court, under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code, for the demolition of the walls and the continuance of the way, and that the present suit therefore called in question that order.

Held, that the suit was barred by the penultimate clause of section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code. KHAIR-UD-DIN v. KARAM BAKHSH. 94 P R 1889

94. Suit for damages caused by a Civil action.

Held, that a suit for damages arising out of a Civil action, brought maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause, does not lie.

Notwithstanding the words in section 133, Criminal Procedure Code, 1882 : " No order duly made by a Magistrate under this section shall be called in question in any Civil Court," it is open to a person who claims to be the sole proprietor of land, with reference to which a Magistrate has made a conditional order under the said section treating it as a " public place," which conditional order has, in due course of law, been made absolute under section 137 of the Code, to sue the opposite party in the Civil Court for a declaration of his rights in such land.

96. Right to sue—Suit to contest alienation on ground of relationship—Failure to prove allegations—Enquiry as to plaintiffs' right as ultimate heirs.

The plaintiffs sued on the allegation that they were collateral heirs of S. S. in the fifth degree. The lower Appellate Court while agreeing with the Court of first instance that the plaintiffs had failed to establish any definite relationship to S. S. remanded the suit for an inquiry as to whether plaintiffs were not entitled to sue as the ultimate heirs, being members of the same got as S. S. and therefore presumably descended from a common ancestor, and also being proprietors in the same division of the village. Ultimately, it was decided that the plaintiffs could sue as being of the same got and patti as S. S.

Held that the decree of the lower Appellate Court must be reversed. No distinct relationship to S. S. and no custom entitling them to sue upon the grounds set up on their behalf by the Appellate Court was established by the plaintiffs.

97. Indian Limitation Act, 1877, Schedule II, articles 97 and 115—Suit to recover amount paid out of Court in execution of decree.

The defendant, K. L., obtained a decree against plaintiff for Rs. 2,347, and employed the other defendant K. R. to execute the decree as his agent under a formal power of attorney.

The plaintiff in the present suit alleged a payment of Rs. 900 in cash to the agent on 3rd February 1885.

On 2nd November 1887, execution of the decree was sued out without credit being given for the Rs. 900, and on 28th February 1888 K. L. denied the receipt of the money through his agent and declined to give credit for the amount.

On 22nd April 1889, the plaintiff (in the present suit) sued to recover the Rs 900 alleged to have been paid.

Held, that the suit would lie and was governed either by article 97 or 115, Schedule II of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, and was within time. GANPAT v. KIRPA RAM. 79 P R 1892

98. Right to sue—Habitual worshipper at mosque—Ejectment of trespasser.

In a suit by one who was a habitual worshipper at a certain Muhammadan mosque, of which he was also a neighbour and a supporter or well-wisher, for the ejectment of the defendant from certain land alleged to be attached to the mosque and to have been unlawfully encroached upon, the Divisional Judge dismissed the plaintiff's suit holding that he was not competent to maintain it.

Held, that the suit would lie. Every Muhammadan who has a right to use a mosque is competent to maintain a suit against any one who interferes with the exercise of his such right to use : and by the same analogy every Muhammadan has a right to maintain a suit against persons who commit an injury upon property which has been devoted to the support of a mosque. Held, further, that an auction-purchaser (not a party to the original suit) who has taken no action under section 318, Civil Procedure Code, to recover possession of the property sold to him from the judgment-debtor, is not thereby debarred from maintaining a regular suit for possession of the property, as the two remedies are concurrent.

Plaintiffs, who were the collateral heirs of a sonless proprietor whose power of disposition of ancestral land was liable to be controlled by his heirs in accordance with the customary law of the Province, sued, within twelve years of the death of the said proprietor, for possession of his ancestral land which had been in the possession of strangers for more than twelve years before suit under a gift created by the said deceased proprietor. The question referred to the Full Bench was whether the suit was within limitation.

Held, overruling Nos. 10 P. R. 1890 and 141 of 1892, that the suit was governed by article 144 of the 2nd Schedule of the Limitation Act, 1887, and was within time, inasmuch as it was brought within twelve years of the date when the defendants' possession became adverse to the plaintiff, such date being the date of the death of the donor and no earlier. 101. Hindu Law—Alienation by Hindu widow—Right of collaterals to question such alienation in presence of daughters and their sons—Collusion.

Held, that where the daughters and their sons are held to be the heirs of a deceased male proprietor, the collaterals cannot maintain their action unless they can prove that the abstention of daughters and their sons, who are heirs, were in collusion with the widow, or did not sue for some improper and insufficient reasons. 102. Relinquishment—Surrender of her life interest by widow of a part of her estate in favour of next reversioner—Suit by reversioner in lifetime of widow—Right to sue.

N. died possessed of certain immovable properties, leaving a widow B. who succeeded to her husband's estate, including a mortgagor's interest in the disputed land which was mortgaged by her husband to the defendants during his lifetime for twenty years. The widow relinquished her rights in the mortgaged property in favor of the plaintiffs, who, as the next reversioners, brought the present suit for possession, alleging that the title to possession had accrued in consequence of the widow's act and that the mortgage was without consideration or necessity.

Held, that the suit was not maintainable in the lifetime of the widow. The widow was competent to relinquish her whole estate, and thereby to accelerate the succession of the plaintiffs to the property left by her husband, but that there could not be a valid renunciation of a part of the estate which could give rise to a right of succession in the reversioners to that part.

109. Minor—Settlement on behalf of a Muhammadan minor by his brothers—Competency of minor to repudiate through a next friend such settlement without restoring other party to position he occupied at time of arrangement—Maintainability of suit.

Held, that no suit can be maintained on behalf of a minor to set aside a settlement which has been made on his behalf by his brother during his minority and had been acted upon by the other party thereto, even on the ground that under Muhammadan Law the brothers had no power to contract on behalf of their minor brother, without first restoring that party to the position which he occupied at the time the settlement was made. 112. Consent to action against public charities—Court cannot entertain suit asking reliefs not included in the consent—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 539.

Held, that the provisions of section 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure are express and are to be strictly adhered to, and a Court cannot entertain an action unless it is limited to matters included in the sanction of the Collector.

An action for the removal of a Mahant and that the public be given authority to make a new appointment cannot, therefore, be entertained where the sanction granted was to remove the present Mahant and to appoint a new Mahant in his place, as the subject of the suit was for appointment by the public, whereas the Collector's consent was for an appointment by the Court. 113. Son's right to claim pre-emption on death of his father on a cause of action accrued to the latter in his lifetime.

114. Right of suit—Party without right or interest in subject matter—Maintainability of suit by—Unnecessary trial of issues concerning private affairs of parties.

A testator governed by Hindu Law bequeathed all his real and personal estate in the absence of a son to his widow for life, and after her death to her daughter's son, and in default of such issue it was to revert absolutely to the first taker and expressly desired that neither his brother nor any of his family should under any circumstances inherit or interfere. The testator died and left surviving him his widow and a minor daughter. Some five months later the widow announced the birth to her of a posthumous son. Thereupon the brother of the testator sued for a declaration that the alleged newly born child was not the lawful son of the testator.

Held that as by the terms of the will the plaintiff had no due right or interest of any kind in the estate of the testator, he being neither an immediate nor a prospective reversioner, the suit was not maintainable.

In such circumstances the unnecessary trial of issues concerning private affairs of parties should be avoided, and the Courts must see that unscrupulous persons in plaintiff's position are not allowed to unnecessarily drag into publicity private matters with which the case is not directly concerned. In the present case there was no occasion for taking evidence on the points whether the boy was a supposititious child, or whether the testator and his wife had the capacity to be get a child.

116. Custom—Alienation—Alienation by an adopted son of his adoptive father's property—Locus standi of sons born before the adoption of their father to contest alienation.

Held that sons born before the adoption of their father do not, by the mere reason of his adoption, become members of the agnatic family of the adoptor and have therefore no locus standi to contest an alienation made by their father of his adoptive father's property as being made without necessity or consideration. 118. Right of a female prospective heir to contest alienation by another female.

Held, that a female with a right to succeed to the estate held by another female is competent to control the acts of the latter, provided she establishes—

(i) that she is in fact entitled to succeed on the death of the alienor, and

(ii) that the alienor is holding only a limited estate resembling that of a widow,

25. Attachment and sale of immovable property in execution of decree—Private alienation of property after attachment and sale, but prior to confirmation—Confirmation of sale—Title of alienee against the auction purchaser—Suit by the alienee to recover possession from the auction purchaser—Limitation—Limitation Act, 1877, Schedule II, article 12 (a).

In the course of certain execution proceedings the property in dispute was attached, and on the 4th December 1899 sold by auction to defendant subject to confirmation. On 7th March 1900, prior to the confirmation, the judgment-debtor paid into Court the amount of the decree and the sale was set aside and attachment withdrawn. Against that order the defendant (auction purchaser) filed an appeal, which having been accepted, the sale was confirmed by the order of the Appellate Court, dated 22nd May 1900. On 26th August 1901 the plaintiff brought a suit for possession of the property against the auction purchaser alleging that he had purchased it from the judgment-debtor on 20th February 1900 and that out of the consideration money paid by him the decree had been paid off. It appeared that no action was taken by the judgment-debtor under section 310 A of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Held, that the private sale of the property to the plaintiff while it was under attachment and in fact had been sold subject to confirmation to the defendant, was void by virtue of the prohibition contained in section 276, Civil Procedure Code, as against the defendant, and further the suit having been brought more than one year after the confirmation of the sale was barred by article 12 (a), Schedule II of the Indian Limitation Act.

26. Sale in execution of decree—Material irregularity—Mistake in proclamation as to place of sale—Evidence—Court not limited to irregularities specifically mentioned in the application to set aside sale—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 287, 311.

Where property under attachment had been expressly ordered to be sold on the premises and the proclamation issued under the authority of section 287 of the Civil Procedure Code, advertised the sale to take place at the Court-house, while as a fact it was actually conducted on the spot and was found to have been sold for an inadequate price.

Held, that the mistake in the sale proclamation as regards the place of sale was a material irregularity sufficient in itself to justify a Court to set aside the sale under section 311 of the Civil Procedure Code. Such an irregularity even in the absence of any direct evidence on the point might well be presumed to have caused substantial injury by keeping away the bidders, although there may not be direct evidence connecting the irregularity with the inadequacy of price obtained.

Held, also, that an error in sale proclamation might be considered even if it may not be specifically mentioned in the application provided that it is patent on the record and the other side have had an opportunity to rebut it if they had wished to do so. DUNI CHAND v. ATMA SINGH. 132 P R 1906

28. Sale in execution of decree—Effect of sale when not set aside either under section 310 A. or 311*—Competency of executing Court to allow time to judgment-debtor to raise amount of decree after such sale—Civil Procedure Code,* 1882, sections 305, 310 A. 311.

Held, that where immovable property has once been sold in execution of a money decree the executing Court has no authority to allow time to the judgment-debtor to enable him to raise the amount of the decree by a private transfer of the property or otherwise as provided by section 305 of the Code of Civil Procedure; and if such a sale is not set aside either under section 310 A or 311 of the Code the Court has no option but to confirm the sale as provided by section 312. SALE—contd.

"at the rate of Re. 1-9-0 per cent. per mensem, if the compensation is not received "from Government, I will pay the money "out of my other property."

Held, that upon its proper construction the deed was a complete conveyance of the vendor's interest in the land and, that upon its execution and registration the plaintiff, vendee, became vested with the title which the vendor had in the property sold, the non-payment at the time of sale of the bulk of the purchase money making no difference in this respect.

Held, further, that inasmuch as it was understood that the title was defective and liable to be defeated by the action of Government certain precautions were taken to protect the vendee from loss, but that the provision accordingly made for refunding the portion of the purchase money and payment of compensation if the title could not be assured as agreed upon, was for the benefit of the vendee alone and could not be taken advantage of by the vendor in order to avoid the sale. 14. Assignment of immovable property by husband to wife in lieu of dower—Sale.

15. Sale—Suit by vendor for declaration of right—Non-payment of purchase-money—Sale complete without payment of purchase money—Burden of proof.

Where a plaintiff, who had professed to make over as sold before a Revenue Officer certain property which had been previously mortgaged to the defendant, in consequence of which action on his part mutation had been effected, subsequently filed a suit for a declaration of right disputing the genuineness of the mutation proceedings. Held, that the plaintiff was bound to establish his case affirmatively, the onus probandi being upon him, either by proving that he was personated before the Revenue Officer or that in fact he never admitted the transaction before him.

Held, also, that the mere fact of non-payment of purchase money would not annul a sale if it had already been made. Sale of immovable property for an ascertained price, part payment of which had taken place or been deferred by arrangement, is complete and cannot be avoided by the parties on account of the alleged non-payment of the purchase money.

Held, that, although title in property sold can pass without payment of consideration, no title will pass where there is proof of an intention in both the parties that ownership should not pass until payment of consideration, and the subsequent conduct of the parties to the sale is relevant in order to shew whether the parties intended ownership to pass independently of the payment of consideration or not. 55 P R 1911

The Settlement was afterwards extended by Government to 1880. The question between the parties therefore was whether the lease expired in 1873 or would run on to 1880. Held that, looking at the intention of the parties, the lease was one for ten years only, and expired in 1873. SETTLEMENT AWARD.
1. Suit for recovery of land lost, by summary order at Settlement, in equalization of shares. The lower Courts held that the claim could not be heard in the regular Courts, because (1) it would lead to the Courts being inundated with similar claims; and (2) because a Settlement award of this sort, coram populo, and not appealed against in the Settlement Department, must be taken to have been accepted by the parties, and not liable to be set aside except on proof of objector's involuntary absence, minority, or other very cogent reason. Held, in appeal, that no considerations of expediency or policy could over-ride the claims of equity; and that a suit to set aside a Settlement award, where, as in this case, the parties most interested were not consulted or informed of what was being done, would lie, and must be heard in the regular Courts, even though no appeal were made in the Settlement Department. SETTLEMENT OFFICERS.

—Powers of Settlement Officers under Board's Circular 8 of 11*th February* 1852, to make grants of zamindari in Khana Khali or Government estates—Sanction to Settlement—Ratification—Estoppel.

By an order of the Settlement Officer of the Umabala district, dated 24th March 1852, one D. was granted the zamindari of Raiyanwala, and his name was directed to be entered in the proprietary column in the Settlement papers. In pursuance of this order the subordinate Settlement officials recorded D. as proprietor of each field or plot in the village, inculding two plots now in dispute. The Settlement Officer was acting under the authority of Revenue Circular No 8, dated 11th February 1852, of the Board of Administration, which authorized Settlement Officers to grant the zamindari or proprietary rights in Khana Khali or Government estates to private persons.

It did not appear that the Settlement officer had his attention drawn to the fact that, although the entire village of Raiyanwala belonged to Government, there were portions of it which were in the possession of the Canal Department, and part of it occupied by the bed of the Western Jamna Canal. All such portions including even the bed of the canal, were recorded as the property of D. in pursuance of the above order.

It was found that the two plots in dispute formed part of the land then in possession of the Canal Department, and that they had been in possession prior to the grant to D. and had continued in possession up to the present date, and had all along used the plots for canal purposes. In 1860 certain letters passed between D's representatives and the Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner of Umballa. The Deputy Commissioner heard that negotiations were going on for the sale of D's estate. He pointed out that they would not be allowed to sell the farms of certain villages which had been held by D., and the terms of which had not then expired, as these were not transferable; and that as regards the villages held by D. in proprietary right, they must sell to the resident cultivators, who had the right of pre-emption. The cultivators were unable to purchase, and eventually D's representatives sold the village of Raiyanwala to plaintiffs, on which dakhil kharij or mutation of names took place.

Held, by FIZPATRICK, J, that the grant of the zamindari did not inculde the two plots in dispute, which were looked upon as part of the canal.

Per SMYTH, J., that the Settlement Officer exceeded his authority in granting the zamindari without reserving to Government the plots in dispute as the Circular of the Board of Administration referred only to lands which were used for agricultural purposes, or which might by reclamation or otherwise be used for such purposes, and did not include lands held by Government for public purposes.

Per Curiam. That the Government in sanctioning the Settlement of the Umballa district did not ratify all the acts of the Settlement officer, including the grant of the entire village of Raiyanwala; and that plaintiffs had failed to show any acts or admissions on the part of the officer of Government since the date of the grant which would have the effect of estopping Government from contesting plaintiff's claim. SMALL CAUSE COURT. JURISDICTION OF.

1. A Court of Small Causes may take cognizance of a suit for damages for breach of betrothal contract restricting its enquiry and award to any pecuniary loss which the plaintiff has necessarily sustained. The mere fact of a plaintiff's having mixed a claim to recover expenses incurred, with one for damages in respect of injured feelings, is not a ground for dismissing both. The plaint should be amended so as to limit it to the former, if the plaintiff is willing to abandon his claim in respect of the latter. IN RE A REFERENCE BY JUDGE, SMALL CAUSE COURT, DELHI.

2. Mortgage.
The plaintiff cannot enforce in the Small Cause Court his lien on the land, but if he chooses to sue for the debt in the Small Cause Court, abandoning his claim over the land, he is at liberty to do so. 50. Army Discipline and Regulation Act, 1879—Amenability of soldier in active military employ to jurisdiction of Civil Courts in claims under thirty pounds—Lahore Fort, jurisdiction of Small Cause Court, Lahore, over—"Municipal limits."

Held, that the provisions of the Army Discipline and Regulation Act, 1879, do not oust the Civil Courts of their jurisdiction over a defendant, merely because he is a soldier of Her Majesty's regular forces in active military employ, and the claim against him is under thirty pounds. Soldiers of Her Majesty's regular forces are amenable to be sued in the ordinary Civil Courts, after notice in writing has been given to them or left at their quarters, irrespective of the amount of the claim; but they cannot be taken out of the service or compelled to appear in person where the debt does not exceed thirty pounds, and in carrying out execution, the exemptions embodied in proviso (1) of section 138 of the Act must be recognized.

Held further, that as the Fort of Lahore lies within the geographical area defined by Notification No. 2777, dated 25th October 1867, as constituting the boundaries of the Municipality of Lahore, it must be held to be within "municipal limits," and therefore within the territorial jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes, Lahore, as declared in Notification No. 615, dated 21st February 1876. A suit brought to recover the value of certain fruit alleged to have been wrongfully taken by the defendants in which the defendants pleaded that the trees from which the fruit had been taken were on shamilat land of which they were joint owners with the plaintiffs, and that the trees also were joint property held to be one of the nature cognizable by Courts of Small Causes, and in which no second appeal lay to the Chief Court; and that the fact that the plea of the defendant raised a question incidentally as to the exclusive right of the plaintiffs to the trees did not affect the nature of the suit.

Held further, that the above claim was one which at the time of the passing of the Small Cause Court Act (XI of 1865) would have been heard in the ordinary Civil Courts of the province and not by the Revenue officers of Government, and that therefore it did not fall within the provisions of section 6. cl. (4) of the said Act. JHANDOO v. KARIM BAKHSH. 5 P R 1882

A suit to recover the hide and flesh of a dead buffalo, valued at Rs. 10, based on a custom by which the plaintiffs, as the chamars of the taraf were entitled to appropriate the dead animals, held, to be one of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court, in which a further appeal was barred by section 39 of Act XVII of 1877.

Held, further, that the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court was not excluded by section 6, Clause 4 of Act XI of 1865, by reason of the claim being one for which, in 1865, a suit might have been brought before a Revenue officer, as being a suit for the perquisites of a village officer, as the circumstance that the right of the chamars to hides of dead animals was provided for in the Administration-paper, did not constitute them village officers within the meaning of Financial Commissioner's Book Circular No. XLVI of 1860. Ganda v. Gangoo (No. 68 *P. Defendants pleaded that the land was common over which they had grazing rights, &c., and denied the alleged partition.

Held, that the suit was one of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court under section 6 of Act XI of 1865, and one in which therefore no further appeal would lie, and that the facts that the plaintiff set forth the title on which his claim to damages depended in his plaint, and that the defendants contested his right to exclude them from grazing on the land, did not alter the character of the suit. Umar v. Karim Bakhsh (No. 75 *P. In a suit for Rs. 15, the value of certain trees in which plaintiff claimed to have a half share, and which, it was alleged, the defendant had cut and carried away without the plaintiff's permission, held, that the suit as laid was one for the value of personal property, and as such was cognizable by a Small Cause Court under S. 6 of Act XI of 1865, nor did the circumstance that defendant's plea may have raised a question of title alter the original character of the suit, and therefore a further appeal was barred under the proviso to the last clause of section 39 of Act XVII of 1877. Umar v. Karim Baksh (No. 75 of 1877), and Jhandoo v. Karim Baksh (No. 5 *P. 66. Suit for share of birt—Damages—Test of jurisdiction of Court—Act XI of 1865, section 6.

Plaintiff sued on the allegation that, as a widow of the defendants' cousin, she was a joint owner of the family estate, which comprised the right to collect birt from the family jujmans, that some years ago an arrangement had been come to by the members of the family as to the division of the birt, and that under this arrangement a sum of Rs. 320, which the defendants had wrongfully kept back, was payable to the plaintiff.

Held, that the suit was one for damages cognizable by a Court of Small Causes under section 6, Act XI of 1865, inasmuch as the jurisdiction of such Court rests on the immediate form of relief prayed for, and not on the real points of law or fact on which the dispute ultimately rests, Babu Khan v. Gahi (No. 38 *P. 69. Suit for proceeds of house taken up under the Land Acquisition Act—Damages—Act XI of 1865, section 6—Second appeal.

Plaintiff sued for possession of a house, alleging that as a nephew of the deceased owner he was entitled to succeed in preference to the daughter of the deceased. It appeared that when the suit was filed, the house in question had already been taken up under the Land Acquisition Act, and had therefore ceased to be property about which a suit could be brought. The lower Appellate Court therefore directed that the plaint should be amended, and the case re-heard as an inheritance case for the cash sum representing the house which had disappeared under the operation of the Land Acquisition Act, the Court being of opinion that the claim was dependent solely on the law or custom of inheritance, exactly as it would have been if the house was standing, and as such was not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes.

Held, that the suit must be regarded as one to enforce the liability of the defendant who had received compensation under the Act to pay the same to the plaintiff who was entitled to it, and as such the claim, notwithstanding that the question of title might have to be enquired into incidentally, must be regarded as one for damages within the meaning of section 6 of the Small Cause Court Act, and being of the value of less than Rs. 500, a second appeal would not lie. Mussammat Nurbhari v. Anwar Ali (No. 8 *P. Plaintiff claimed the return of certain jewels valued at Rs. 70 alleging that he had deposited the jewels in payment of his share in a contract, in which the defendant had joined him as a partner with a one-third share : that for one month plaintiff remained a sharer, when, disputes having arisen, arbitrators decided that plaintiff should pay Rs. 10 for losses and retire : that defendant agreed to return the jewels, but would not now do so ; hence the plaintiff's claim. Defendant denied that the partnership had been dissolved, or that any settlement had been come to, or that he had pledged any jewels of plaintiff.

Held, that the claim as laid by plaintiff raised no question of partnership, but was for moveable property or the value thereof, and was cognizable by the Small Cause Court. KHADIM HOSSEIN v. ABDUL GHANI. 35 P R 1886

72. Suit for contribution—"Contract"—Act XI of 1865, section 6.

Plaintiff, a non-proprietor in a village, sued the defendants, one of whom was lambardar and the other a proprietor, to recover Rs. 10, the value of the skins of certain animals which had belonged to plaintiff and had died in the village. Defendants pleaded that according to the custom of the village they were authorized to secure the skins for the mochis and chumars of the village.

Held, that the suit as brought was of the nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court, and one in which the appeal from the Munsif's order lay to the Subordinate Judge and not to the Divisional Court, though had the suit been one by the lambardars or the mochis to enforce the custom, the case would have been different.

83. Subordinate Judge on appeal in small cause refusing to decide question relating to immovable property—Necessity for decision of all material issues.

Plaintiffs, the proprietors, sued to recover Rs. 100 damages from defendants, who were tenants, because the latter had trespassed on a certain part of the banjar which the plaintiffs had reserved for themselves as their own grazing ground. The first Court having given plaintiffs a decree, the defendants appealed to the Subordinate Judge, urging (as they had urged in the first Court) that the plaintiffs were not authorized to reserve this rakh because they (defendants) being occupancy tenants had a right to graze over the whole of the banjar land. The Subordinate Judge held that as the case was of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court, he had no jurisdiction to decide a question as regards land, and dismissed the appeal.

Held, that the order of the Subordinate Judge was not maintainable, as the fact that the case appealed to him was of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court did not take away from him the jurisdiction vested in him to deal with all questions of civil rights that were brought up before him in the appeal, and which it was necessary to adjudicate on for the purpose of deciding the appeal. The present suit for rent was accordingly instituted in the Small Cause Court.

Plaintiffs sued in the Small Cause Court at Delhi on the allegations that on the 7th December 1895, they wrote to the defendant to buy certain goods at Bombay and to despatch them by railway with all possible speed to Delhi; that other letters and a telegram were sent to him for this purpose; that on the 23rd December he replied promising to send the said goods within two days, but that they did not in fact reach Delhi till 11th January 1896, when they were no longer required. Plaintiffs refused delivery and sued for recovery of Rs. 200, which they had remitted to defendant as an advance to make the purchases with expenses and damages, in all Rs. 234-11-6. Defendant pleaded that the Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit inasmuch as the whole cause of action arose at Bombay. For the plaintiffs it was contended that the goods were at defendant's risk until they reached plaintiffs' hands; that plaintiffs had not indicated any particular railway to which the goods were to be handed over in their letter and could not recover them from the railway; that in reality the transaction should be treated as one for the sale of goods as plaintiffs did not know who were the actual vendors of the goods, and that, in any event, the contract was made in Delhi as it was not complete until the defendant's acceptance of plaintiffs' offer was communicated to them at that place.

Held, that the Small Cause Court at Delhi had no jurisdiction to try the case, which was in reality a suit against an agent for an account of money received by him as such for his principal in the course of the agency business.

Although an offer made by letter does not become a contract binding against the promise until acceptance thereof is communicated to the promisor, the communication of such acceptance does not make any change in the place where the contract is made, but only affects the time of its coming into force.

Held, therefore, that the plaintiffs' proposal having reached defendant at Bombay and having been accepted at that place, the contract between the parties was made at Bombay. MUHAMMAD SHAFFI v. KARAMAT ALI.

After decision by that Munsif an appeal was preferred to the District Judge and decided by him.

Held, that the action of the District Judge in sending the case to the Additional Munsif amounts to transfer within the meaning of section 25, Civil Procedure Code, the Additional Munsif must be deemed for the purposes of this suit to be a Court of Small Causes under the last clause of that section, and this decision was therefore not open to appeal.

11. Suit for share of offerings at shrine—Money had and received—Defendant's plea raising question of title—Test of jurisdiction.

Plaintiff sued on the allegation that from ancient times he had a right to a certain share in the offerings of a certain shrine; that the defendant (who was the manager of the shrine) had not paid this due for a stated period, and that according to accounts a sum of Rs. 30 was due to the plaintiff for which the suit was accordingly brought. The distributing Darogah having also been impleaded as a defendant, both defendants, while admitting plaintiff's right, threw the responsibility of non-payment on the Pujaris of the temple who were accordingly impleaded and they then contended that the money claimed by the plaintiff was not due as of right.

Held, that the suit as laid being one for " money based on the ordinary count for " money had and received," was cognizable by a Small Cause Court under Act XI of 1865, and although the Pujaris by their plea had raised a question of title that circumstance would not alter the original character of the suit, the jurisdiction of a Court depending on the immediate form of the suit as embodied in the plaint, and not on the collateral questions of law or fact which may be raised by the pleadings.

Held, that a suit based upon an alleged breach of contract by a Government Railway Company to deliver goods entrusted to them in the ordinary way as agents of Government for conveyance to a specified place cannot be rightly decribed as a suit concerning " an official act, " such as is contemplated by article 3 of the 2nd Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887.

Before a suit can be held to fall under article 3, the plaintiff must be able to allege some particular act of some particular official, which has given rise to the suit, and such act must not be a mere, omission or neglect of duty such as any private individual might be guilty of, but must be some definite act purporting to be done by the official under the authority of his office and reasonably falling within the scope of such authority.

Plaintiff sued for the recovery of Rs. 300 damages for certain acts of trespass committed by defendant to his immovable property, which, according to the plaint, consisted in breaking down, or causing to be broken down, some boundary pillars and "diverting a water-course." The suit was instituted in the District Court, and decided by a Munsif in plaintiff's favour. Defendant appealed to the Divisional Judge, who held, on plaintiff's objection, that the case was a small cause, and returned the appeal for presentation in the District Court, which set aside the proceedings of the Munsif for want of jurdiction and directed the plaint to be returned to plaintiff.

The alleged water-course consisted, apparently, of a drain, and defendant's act, which was complained of, amounted to an encroachment on the bank of the channel at a place where it ran between the parties' estates, or was an attempt to push it further towards plaintiff's property. It was not contended that there was any attempt to deprive plaintiff of the use of the water of the channel or to dispute his right to it.

Held, that inasmuch as plaintiff's claim did not relate to any injury to the right in water, but was for an encroachment on the land over which the water-course runs, the claim was one cognizable by the Small Cause Court, and did not fall under article 35 (i) of the Small Cause Court Act of 1887. Plaintiff sued on the allegation that S.S. a pujari of Darbar Sahib at Tarn Taran had died leaving, inter alia, a share in the charhawa (offerings) and in the income of a jagir attached to the Darbar Sahib, that the plaintiff was the adopted son and heir of the deceased, that defendant No. 1 was the manager of the Darbar Sahib who had collected the offerings and income, that defendant No. 2 was the brother of the deceased who claimed to be his heir and that the share of profits and income amounted to Rs. 800 up to date of suit. The first Court decreed Rs. 657-6-10 against defendant No. 1 which decree was upheld by the Divisional Court on appeal.

Held, that the suit was in the nature of small cause and as the value of it was less than Rs. 1,000 no appeal lay under section 70 (1) (b) of the Punjab Courts Act.

Held also, that the lower Appellate Court had not ignored or placed a perversely erroneous interpretation upon any evidence cited, and that a mere misinterpretation of documents or error in law was no ground for interference on revision under section 70 (1) (a).

Plaintiff sued on the allegations that he and defendants Nos. 4—8 were co-sharers in certain land: that defendants Nos. 1—3 in Sambat 1949 forcibly cut and carried away certain reeds which grew upon the said land, and of which the total value was Rs. 741-11-0; that plaintiff's share was Rs. 296-10-9, and that as defendants Nos. 4—8 would not join plaintiff in the claim, they had been impleaded as defendants. The defendants Nos. 5—8 admitted the claim, but defendants Nos. 1—3 contested it. The Munsif having decreed the claim in part, defendant No 2 appealed to the District Judge, and on his appeal being rejected, applied to the Chief Court on the Revision side, on the grounds that the suit was either one cognizable only by a Revenue Court under clause (k) of section 77 (3) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, or an unclassed suit over Rs. 100 in value and, as such, excluded from the cognizance of the Small Cause Court by article 11 or article 31 of Act IX of 1887.

Held, that inasmuch as plaintiff's co-sharers were merely nominal defendants, and the real defendants were alleged to be trespassers, having no proprietary right in the land, the suit was not one "by a co-sharer in a holding for a "share of the profits thereof" within the meaning of clause (k) of section 77 (3) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, and further that the suit did not fall under clause (n) of the same section, as there was no allegation that defendants Nos. 1—3 occupied the land and cultivated it, but they forcibly took from the lands certain portion of spontaneous growth and that the suit was cognizable by the Civil Courts.

Held, further, that the suit being for damages for the wrongful removal of the produce of immovable property, and not for the enforcement of any right to or interest in immovable property, was not excluded from the cognizance of the Small Cause Court by article 11 of the 2nd Schedule of Act IX of 1887.

Held, also, that the suit was not excluded from the cognizance of the Small Cause Court as being a suit "for profits of immovable "property belonging to the plaintiff which "had been wrongfully received by the defendants" within the meaning of article 31 of the 2nd Schedule of Act IX of 1887.

The final clause of article 31 of the 2nd Schedule of Act IX of 1887 was intended to apply only to "suits for mesne profits of immovable property" in the strict and technical sense of the expression, and the test of the applicability of the article is not so much whether the defendant has received the profits "under some claim of title," as whether he has received them as a person in wrongful possession, it being immaterial whether he has any bond fide claim of title to the land or not.

Plaintiff sued for Rs. 328 as compensation for damage caused by the defendants to plaintiff by wrongfully ousting him from land which he alleged he was entitled under a lease to cultivate for one year, the measure of damages being the profit which he could have made by such cultivation. The title of plaintiff as lessee was put in issue.

Held, that the suit was one cognizable by a Small Cause Court. DAL SINGH v. BHUPA. 80 P R 1896

3. Suit for jagir income retained wrongfully by one of several sharers—Course of appeal.

Plaintiff sued to recover his share of certain jagir income which had been retained by one of several brothers who had been taking their shares in a family jagir by groups, the amount retained being in excess of the defendant's right and claimed by plaintiff as really due to him in order to make up the amount falling to him as representative of one of the said groups.

Second Schedule, article 11—concld.

Held, that plaintiff's claim was in reality one not for damages but for the profits of immovable property wrongfully retained by defendant, and that such claim amounted to one for an account falling within the category of suits for account within the meaning of article 31 of the Second Schedule to the Small Cause Court Act, 1887.

Held, therefore, that the suit was an unclassed suit and that the appeal from the order passed by the Munsif lay, under clause (c) of section 39 of Act XVIII of 1884, to the Divisional Judge. HUSAIN KHAN v. SAADAT KHAN. 2 P R 1900

Plaintiff in his plaint alleged by implication that he held a lease under Government of the grazing rights over a certain parade ground, and (apparently) that defendant entered into an agreement with him under which he was allowed to graze cattle on the land, and became liable to pay for so doing the sum of Rs. 7-13-0.

Held, that the parade ground, of which plaintiff held a lease not being an "estate" as defined in section 3 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887, the suit though one for money due on account of grazing dues did not fall under clause (o) of section 77 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, and was cognizable by the Civil Court.

Held, further, that if plaintiff's allegation was merely that he held a lease of the parade ground, and that by virtue of such lease and apart from any agreement, he was entitled to demand certain dues from all persons grazing cattle on the land, the suit was one for dues payable to plaintiff "by reason of his interest in immovable property" within the meaning of article (13) of the second schedule of the Small Cause Court Act, 1887, and as such excepted from the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court. Held, that the suit being instituted after 1st July 1887, was not cognizable by a Small Cause Court, as it fell under article 20 of Schedule II of the Small Cause Court Act of 1887.

Held, further, that the suit clearly lay, as the property released was released on the objection of a person who was not a party to the suit, and no appeal against the order of release lay as against him under section 244, Civil Procedure Code. DEVI DITTA v. MIRAN BAKHSH. 63 P R 1889

Held, by the Full Bench that a suit for damages sustained by plaintiff on account of his having been kept out of possession of two-thirds of a house purchased by him at an auction sale by the defendant (who was owner of the remaining third), and prevented by her from access to it for twenty-five months, did not fall within the purview of clause 31, Schedule II, of the Small Cause Court Act, 1887, and was of a nature cognizable by Courts of Small Causes. Held, that the suit was cognizable by the Civil and not by the Revenue Court, as, even assuming that " arhat " is a village cess within the meaning of section 77 (j) of the Tenancy Act (which was doubtful) that clause must be construed as applying only to suits brought against the parties liable to pay such cess.

3. Specific performance involving liability for life—Specific Relief Act, 1877, section 21 (g).

The defendant executed and registered agreement by which he agreed with plaintiff's father that he would bring about cohabitation between plaintiff (his daughter-in-law) and her husband (his son) and would also treat her well and promised, in case he failed to do so, to provide maintenance and residence in future for the term of plaintiff's life. The defendant having faild to perform the first covenant, plaintiff instituted the present suit for specific peformance of the second covenant of the agreement. It appeared that plaintiff's husband being an adult and there being no ancestral property in defendant's hands, there was no liability under the law on him to maintain or provide a residence for the plaintiff.

Held, that under the circumstances of the case, and as it would be opposed to the terms of section 21 (g) of the Specific Relief Act, the Court would not decree specific performance of the contract but, as the agreement was voluntary on the part of the defendant, the plaintiff was entitled to an adequate compensation by way of damages for the breach of the conditions undertaken to be performed by the defendant. Section 12.

1. And sections 21 and 24—Specific performance of an agreement to execute and register a deed in favour of a third party—Personal bar.

Plaintiff sued defendant for pre-emption of a shop. An agreement was made between parties that they should unite in gifting the shop to a dharmsala, and a petition describing the terms of the compromise was submitted to Court and the suit withdrawn. Defendant subsequently refused to carry out the agreement. Plaintifl sued for specific performance of the agreement to execute and register a deed of dedication in favor of the dharmsala. The defendant pleaded (i) that the agreement as embodied in the petition to Court was inadmissible in evidence for want of registration ; (ii) that specific performance of an agreement cannot be enforced in favour of a person who could not recover compensation for its breach, and that the plaintiff in this case could not recove compensation, a third party being the beneficiary under the agreement, and the only person damaged by its breach ; and (iii) that a suit for special performance of an agreement to register did not lie.

Held, (i) that the agreement did not require registration. It did not of itself purport or operate to create, declare, or assign any right, title or interest, to or in, immovable property ; and (ii) that the suit for specific performance of the agreement to execute and register the deed of dedication was maintainable. Section 24, Specific Relief Act, deals with objection not derived from the nature of the contract, but objections personal to the plaintiff, and there is nothing in the law to prevent suit lying for specific performance of an agreement to register an instrument which has yet to be executed, a suit distinct from a suit to compel registration of an already executed deed of which the registration is compulsory. possession—Undue influence—Vendee vendor's surety—Specific Relief Act, 1877, sections 18, 22.

Held, that under section 18 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, a sale of a reversionary right of succession, though at the time of sale it does not effect a transfer of property, gives rise to a right which the Court will enforce when the inheritance falls into possession.

From the mere fact that at the time of sale the vendee was the vendor's surety for keeping the peace, an inference cannot fairly be drawn that the former was in a position to exercise undue influence over the latter in respect of the sale.

When a person pays cash for the purchase of a reversionary right, the Court in considering whether the price was inadequate, will have regard to the fact that the right will not come into possession for an indefinite time, and, in certain cases, may never come into possession, and will not release from his obligations a vendor who has made the bargain with his eyes open, merely because the bargain has proved to be a bad one. 1. Arbitration—Reference to, made out of Court during pendency of suit—Specific Relief Act, 1877, section 21—Effect of.

2. Contract to refer controversy to arbitration—Refusal to perform contract—Bar to suit.

In a suit brought by plaintiff against defendants alleging a partnership between the parties which had been dissolved, and asking for the affairs of the dissolved partnership to be wound up, defendants pleaded, in bar of the suit, a written agreement between plaintiff and the principal defendant under which they agreed to refer to the arbitration of one M. the question as to what was due to or by either party on the partnership account. It appeared that this agreement was executed at M.'s house and made over to him then and there to take action upon, but that nothing further came of this submission. Defendants relied upon the final clause of section 21 of the Specific Relief Act in support of their plea.

SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT (I OF 1877)—contd.

Held, that the plea failed, first because it was not proved with sufficient definiteness that plaintiff refused to go on with the submission to arbitration, though the defendants wished it to proceed; secondly, because a refusal to carry out a submission to arbitration once fully made is not a "refusal to perform the contract to refer" within the true meaning of section 21 of the Specific Relief Act, 1887. KARAM CHAND v. RAM DAS.

3 Specific Relief Act, I of 1877, section 21, (last) clause—Suit based on agreement containing a clause for reference to arbitration—not barred, unless defendant proves that plaintiff refused to submit to arbitration.

In a suit based on a registered agreement containing a clause "If any dispute arises between the parties regarding this agreement it shall be settled by master N. B .... and his decision shall be binding on the parties." Defendant raised a plea that the suit is barred by section 21 of the Specific Relief Act.

Held, that the defendant, on whom the onus lay, had failed to prove that plaintiffs had refused to perform the contract to refer the matter to arbitration before the present suit was instituted and that consequently the last clause of section 21 of the Specific Relief Act did not operate as a bar to the plaintiff's suit. 25 P R 1911

—And sections 12, 20—Specific performance of contract—Discretion of Court—Decree of lower Court reversed on respondents' cross-objections—Civil Procedure Code, section 561—Appeal from part only of decree.

One D. D. having alienated his rights in a certain shop to one T. R., defendant was about to sue the latter for pre-emption when it was agreed between them that T. R. should sell his rights to defendant for Rs. 2,000. Thereupon defendant entered into an agreement with plaintiffs to the following effect; that defendant should pay Rs. 350, and plaintiffs the balance of the said Rs. 2,000 through defendant, to T. R.; that plaintiffs should bear all incidental expenses; that thereafter plaintiffs should be put into possession of three-fourths of the shop, one-fourth remaining with defendant, and that, in the event of any breach of the said agreement, the party in default should pay the other party Rs. 500. A question having arisen subsequently as to what sum should be entered in the sale deed as consideration for the three-fourths part of the shop, the deed of sale was not executed, and the parties separated. Plaintiffs thereupon instituted the present suit, and alleged that defendant had given them possession of three-fourths of the shop and had subsequently dispossessed them. They prayed that they might be restored to possession and that defendant might be ordered to execute a conveyance in their favour, the latter portion of the prayer being inserted in the heading of the plaint, and not (presumably by an oversight) at the end of it. The first Court gave plaintiffs a decree in the terms of their prayer, but the Divisional Judge, on appeal, though finding all the facts in plaintiffs' favour, modified the decree of the first Court by granting them a decree merely for the Rs. 500, on the ground that there had been no complete constructive possession of the shop by plaintiffs and because the suit was not one for specific performance. From this decree defendant appealed to the Chief Court and plaintiff filed cross-objections under section 561, Civil Procedure Code. For defendant it was contended that the said cross-objections were not maintainable, on the ground that defendant had appealed only against a portion of the decree of the lower Appellate Court.

Held, overruling the objection, that the cross-objections were maintainable under section 561 of the Code.

Held, further, without considering defendant's appeal, that plaintiffs' cross-objections must be allowed, on the ground that the suit as laid was for specific performance of a contract which, under the circumstances, was a proper contract to be specifically enforced, and none the less so because a sum was named in it as the amount to be paid in case of its breach by the party in default, the fact that in this case the party in default was not willing to pay such sum being an additional reason for specifically enforcing the said contract.

According to section 22 of the Specific Relief Act, jurisdiction to decree specific performance is discretionary, but the discretion of the Court is not arbitrary, but sound and reasonable, guided by judicial principles and capable of correction by a Court of Appeal. Plaintiff sued for cancellation of a bond to the extent of Rs. 1,000, alleging that he had been induced to execute the bond in question (which was for Rs. 1,300, and recited the consideration as being Rs. 1,100 on account of an old book debt, and a present cash advance of Rs. 200) on defendants giving plaintiff a solemn oath in the village temple that if he executed a bond for the above sum they would pay plaintiff's debts amounting to Rs. 1,000, the difference being made up of a cash advance of Rs. 200, and a book debt of Rs. 100, and that the defendants had not fulfilled their promise.

Held, that the allegations put forward by the plaintiff, assuming them to be true, entitled him to relief under sections 39 and 40 of the Specific Relief Act ; that the agreement was in consequence of defendants' failure to perform their promise within a reasonable time (section 46 of the Contract Act) not enforceable at their option, though it continued to be enforceable by plaintiff by way of a suit for damages for breach of the agreement under section 73 of the Contract Act, and thus became a "voidable contract" within the meaning of section 2, clause (i) of the same Act ; but although enforceable by the plaintiff in the way above mentioned, the plaintiff was not bound to adopt his remedy on the contract, because the breach he complained of went to the entire consideration, and as there would be a reasonable apprehension that if the bond for Rs. 1,300 were left outstanding it might cause him serious injury, the plaintiff was entitled under sections 39 and 40 of the Specific Relief Act to have that portion of the bond adjudged voidable which had become unenforceable by the defendants.

Held also, that evidence of the oral agreement above-mentioned was admissible in the present case under section 92, proviso 3 of the Evidence Act, as if the plaintiff's statement was accepted as true, the alleged oral agreement constituted a condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation qua the item of Rs. 1,000 under the bond.

The Chief Court, however, held on the facts (upholding the judgment of the lower Appellate Court) that plaintiff had failed to discharge the onus which lay upon him of proving the oral agreement alleged to have been made by the defendants. Gurditta v. Azam (No. 122 *P. 2. Declaratory decree—Cancellation of instrument—Balance entered in account book professing to have been struck by a certain person—Written instrument—Threat of civil suit—Reasonable apprehension of injury—Discretion of Court.

Plaintiff having received information that a balance was entered in defendants' books as struck by him (plaintiff), sued for a declaratory decree that the entry was a forgery. The first Court going into the merits gave the plaintiff a decree. The Divisional Court dismissed the suit as unmaintainable under section 42, Specific Relief Act. On appeal to the Chief Court it was contended on behalf of plaintiff (i) that the suit was maintainable under section 39, Specific Relief Act, the alleged entry being a written instrument and threat of civil suit by defendant, whenever it may suit his convenience to bring it, being sufficient to cause reasonable apprehension of injury to plaintiff, and (ii) that the Appellate Court ought not to have refused relief by a mere exercise of discretion after the first Court had gone into the merits.

Held, that it could not be said that an entry of a balance, binding as an acknowledgment was not a written instrument and that a suit did not lie to cancel it. Each case, however, must be judged on its own merits, and a suit allowed only if the possible injury were very serious and its apprehension very reasonable. Held, also that the first Court having gone into the merits (although it would have exercised a proper discretion in rejecting the suit in limine) and come to a finding in plaintiff's favour, the plaintiff was entitled to a consideration of the merits by the Appellate Court. GAUSA v. GANGA RAM.

3. And section 40—Plaint, construction of—Joint holding—Separate possession and enjoyment—Partition, proof of.

The plaint set forth that plaintiff and S. were co-sharers in a joint khata, plaintiff's share being two-thirds and that of S. one-third ; that S. by a deed of sale, registered on the 8th June 1880, sold to the father of the defendants certain specific fields ; and that, inasmuch as the holding was joint, S. had no power to sell the said fields. Plaintiff therefore prayed for a declaration that the said deed should be declared void as against himself, and that he was owner of two-thirds of the joint holding and he further prayed to be placed in possessien of his share or for any other relief the Court might think fit to grant.

Held, that the suit was one, not for cancellation of a deed under section 39 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, but for a declaratory decree under section 40, to the effect that notwithstanding the acts of the defendants, the holding was still joint and plaintiff's share in it two-thirds.

Held, also, that the mere fact that each co-sharer in a joint khata has dealt with specific portions thereof is proof that portions of the khata have been separately possessed and enjoyed, but does not amount to proof that the khata has been divided, nor does a purchaser of specific land in such khata become thereby a co-sharer in it. Where the facts found were that the plaintiff when within 39 days of being sui juris, sold some land for Rs. 400 to the defendant who was not aware that the vendor was an infant but was deceived and acted in good faith.

Held, that plaintiff was bound in equity to refund the purchase money under section 41 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, as a condition precedent to obtaining a decree for possession of the land.

Held also, that the circumstance that sections 64 and 65 of the Contract Act do not apply to the facts does not exclude the application of section 41 of the Specific Relief Act and the rule of equity therein contained. BALAK RAM v. DADU. 76 P R 1910

Held, by the Full Bench, that section 42 of the Specific Relief Act does not allow of a suit for a declaration that a plaintiff, who alleges no title is in possession of certain property, and has the benefit or is entitled to the benefit arising from the fact of such possession, as against the defendant who is also asserted to have no title. (defendant No 2), sued for a declaration that a marriage between her and the first defendant which admittedly took place with the usual ceremonies, but with the consent only of the girl's maternal grandfather, was null and void.

Held, that the suit must be dismissed on the ground that the decree sought for, even if given, would be inoperative as regards the persons it would profess to affect, as it would not make the question of the validity of the marriage a res jduicata in any future suit between the co-defendants themselves, and was therefore not one which the Court should grant under section 42 of the Specific

6. Right of distant collaterals to question alienation by widow in presence of daughter's sons—Right to sue—Declaratory decree.

Plaintiffs, the collateral heirs of one "A" in the tenth remove sued to set aside an alienation made by the widow. The defendants contended that the plaintiffs had no right to sue, as they were not the nearest reversioners, the daughter and the daughter's sons of the deceased being the persons presumptively entitled to succeed if they survived the widow. The pedigree table prepared at Settlement showed that in the course of many generations there was not a single instance of a daughter's succession to sonless proprietors. The Wajib-ul-arz and the Riwaj-i-am also clearly excluded the daughter from succession to her father's estate.

Held, that without finally deciding whether daughters and daughter's sons were by custom excluded from succession among Sindu Jats, the tribes to which the parties belonged, the plaintiff's position was sufficiently well established by the evidence to entitle them to maintain the suit as the nearest reversioners. 7. Suit for declaration—Consequential relief—Objection to hearing of appeal.

Plaintiff, alleging to successive mortgages to him by the defendants, sued for a declaration that the defendants could not redeem the property without paying off the debt due on the second mortgage. On the date the suit was instituted, the amount due on the second mortgage had already become due. Defendants contended, inter alia, that the suit did not lie as consequential relief was available. While defendant's appeal was pending in the Chief Court, they also sued for redemption of the property and paid off the amount of both mortgages. At the hearing of the appeal, it was objected for plaintiff-respondent that the defendants having paid up the amount due on the second mortgage, there remained nothing to decide, and that the appeal should not be allowed to proceed.

Held (i) that the defendants were entitled to have their appeal heard; (ii) that the suit for a declaration was maintainable, there being no further appeal arising out of the cause of action sued upon, i. e., the refusal to recognise the second mortgage. Recovery of the money due was only an alternative relief which the plaintiff was not bound to enforce. JODHA AND OTHERS v. BUDHA RAM. 35 P R 1890

8. Declaratory decree—Plaintiff alleging title as well as possession, asking for declaration as to possession only—Judicial discretion.

The plaintiffs sued, alleging that they were owners and in possession of certain land; that two deeds of sale were executed by them in 1877 and 1879, purporting to convey portions of the said land to the defendant; that the defendants never got possession under the said deeds, as the full consideration money was never paid by him; that notwithstanding this fact the defendant had succeeded in obtaining dakhil kharij from the Revenue authorities, which was calculated to cause injury to the plaintiffs, though it had not ousted them from actual possession; and the plaintiff, therefore, paid for a declaratory decree that they were in possession of the entire land, and that the mutation in the defendant's favour would not affect their rights of possession. The plaint was silent on the question as to with whom the ownership of the property legally rested.

Held, that the suit as laid had been rightly dismissed. Assuming it to be correct that a plaintiff who alleges title as well as possession cannot be allowed to ask for a declaration as to his possession only, there being a further dispute between parties as to the title, the suit would not lie.

But in any case, the proper decree for a Court to make upon a claim framed in the above manner, and leaving open the question of title, would be one declining to exercise its judicial discretion by making any such declaration, the effect of which would be to leave the real matter of dispute between the parties undealt with and undisposed of. 9. Hindu Law—Custom—Succession of adopted son to share of birt*—Panjzati Brahmans of Amritsar city—Suit for declaratory decree and for a sum of money—Specific Relief Act (I of* 1877), section 42, proviso.

Plaintiff, one of the sons of R. K., sued the other descendant of R. K. and of D. for a declaration that he was the adopted son of N. C., a brother of R. K. and D. and as such was entitled to succeed to N. C.'s one-third share of the family birt and also for a money decree for one-third of the birt alleged to be in the hands of defendants at the time of the institution of the suit. The parties were Panjzati Brahmans of Amritsar city. The first Court found that plaintiff was in fact the adopted son of N. C., and gave him the declaratory decree prayed for, and also a money decree for part of the amount claimed. On appeal by one of the defendants, the plaintiff was informed by the Divisional Judge that he could not in the same suit ask for a declaratory decree and for a money decree for birt. Plaintiff thereupon elected to proceed with his claim for a money decree for a birt only. and the Divisional Judge confirmed the decree of the first Court as a whole. On appeal to the Chief Court, it was contended on behalf of the appellant that the suit having been reduced in the lower appellate Court to one for a money decree for birt only became a Small Cause, and that neither of the lower Courts had jurisdiction to try it.

Held, that having regard to the proviso to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, the plaintiff was entitled to institute the suit as laid and, as laid both courts had jurisdiction to try it.

Held, further, that plaintiff's election to proceed for the suit for a money decree only having been forced on him by a ruling or expression of opinion by the Court, plaintiff was not bound thereby. BHAGAT RAM v. SHIV DATT. 141 P R 1894

Plaintiffs sued for a declaration that, after the death of Mussammat J. who was at the time in possession of the property, with a widow's interest, they were entitled to succeed to it. Their suit was dismissed by the Divisional Judge, on the ground that the widow had not done any act or made any alienation of the property which might raise an apprehension of injury to plaintiffs' rights there being no allegation that any denial of their rights was made before the institution of the suit.

Held, that the suit had been rightly dismissed. MUHAMMADI v. MUSSAMMAT JIWANI. 42 P R 1898

11. *Deed of grant, construction of—*Adhlapi tenure—Declaratory decree.

According to the terms of certain deeds of grant, executed more than forty years before suit by the father of defendant in favour of plaintiffs' ancestors, portions of a large tract of waste land were conveyed to the grantees on condition of their breaking up the waste, bringing it under cultivation and constructing embankments for storage of water, it being provided that on fulfilment of these conditions one half of the area in each case was to become the property of the grantees. In the Revenue papers the latter were in each instance shown as proprietors, half-and-half, of the land. Plaintiffs, descendants of the original grantee, sued for declaratory decrees on the allegations that they were respectively full proprietors of the lands shown as their property in the Revenue papers, but that they had hitherto paid to the defendant mahsul or batai in respect thereof, and that these payments were purely voluntary and were made simply because the defendant was the hereditary chief. It appeared that by arrangement between the parties, the defendant paid the Government demand in respect of the lands in cash and realized from plaintiffs in kind. The declarations prayed for were to the effect that plaintiffs were not bound to make such payments in future.

Held, that according to the terms of the deeds of grant and the entries in the

Revenue papers, plaintiffs were adhlapidars and full proprietors of the lands concerned.

Held, further, that as plaintiffs were full proprietors of the said lands, the arrangement whereby they allowed the defendant to come between them and Government, realizing from them in kind and paying the Government demand in cash, was purely voluntary one, terminable by plaintiffs at their pleasure.

Held, finally, that as plaintiffs' liability to pay mahsul or batai was in dispute, and as defendant alleged his right to levy it and to continue the existing practice, defendant was "interested to deny" plaintiffs' right to terminate these payments, and that as circumstances prior to the institution of the suit clearly proved defendant's intention to enforce his claim to them by some means or other, plaintiffs were entitled to sue for declaration under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877. 12. Suit for declaration of title—Adverse entry in Revenue papers—Cause of action—Limitation Act, 1877, 2nd Schedule, article 120—Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887, section 45—Secific Relief Act, 1877, section 42.

Plaintiffs sued for a declaration of proprietary rights in certain land upon the allegation that defendants were taking advantage of an entry in the Revenue papers to endeavour to oust plaintiff from the said land. It appeared that the Revenue authorities when making the entry in question, more than six years before suit, had included the area in dispute in defendants' estate, but that neither plaintiffs nor defendants were parties to the action of the Revenue authorities. For defendants it was contended that plaintiffs had no cause of action apart from the entry in question, and that the suit, having been instituted more than six years after the making of such entry, was barred under article 120 of the Limitation Act, 1877.

Held, having regard to the plaintiffs' allegations and the circumstances of the case that plaintiffs had, with reference to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, and section 45 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887, a cause of action which accrued within the period of limitation and would be entitled to a decree if they prove their allegations. 13. Attachment—Property liable to be attached—Cause of action—Form of plaint for declaration that a judgment-debtor had a mortgage on certain property—Plaint—Relief claimed—Specific Relief Act, 1877, section 42.

Plaintiffs in execution of a money decree against one Gurdit Singh, deceased, who had a mortgage on the land belonging to defendants, attached those rights, whereon the defendants objected that they had redeemed the land from mortgage and that no representative of the deceased judgment-debtor had been placed on the record. The objections were disallowed by the first Court, but on appeal the District Judge reversed the decision, and the attachment was removed on the ground that mutation had taken place, and no person was recorded as a mortgagee. Plaintiffs then sued the defendants, the successful objectors, and asked for a declaration that the mortgage on the land had not been removed; they also asked for any other relief which under the circumstances alleged the Court might think them entitled to. The first Court found the redemption not proved and decreed the claim. The Divisional Judge was disposed to accept this finding on the merits, but dismissed the claim on the ground that the suit did not lie. He held that suit was not one under section 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure, as the defendants' objections did not fall under section 278 and as plaintiffs were not claiming to establish a right to any property or a declaration that the mortgage rights were liable to attachment in execution of their decree, nor were the defendants contending that the mortgage rights if they existed were not liable to attachment for that purpose. He was also of opinion that section 42 of the Specific Relief Act was not applicable as there was no dispute as to plaintiffs' title to any legal character or to their right to any property, and plaintiffs did not even allege that they had any right over the land owned by the defendants and could not say who was vested with the alleged right, the original mortgagee being dead without any heirs. He considered that the dispute was not whether the plaintiffs were entitled to attach the mortgage rights, but whether as a matter of fact those rights exist, and this could not give rise to a cause of action.

Held, that as the object of the present suit was to establish that there was no redemption and that the property of the objectors was still under mortgage and was liable to attachment in execution of plaintiffs' decree to the extent of the mortgage interest, it must be treated as one falling under section 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and as the right of the (mortgagee) judgment-debtor in the land is an interest in the land and is property, and the plaintiffs assert their right to recover their decree from it, which defendants denied, plaintiffs are entitled to sue for a declaration under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act. Held, also, that the actual form of the suit is of little consequence. The relief really claimed on the case set up by the plaintiffs is to be considered, and as the Code of Civil Procedure does not deal with forms of suits, the substance and merits of the case should be kept in view and not merely the words in the plaint.

16. Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), section 42, proviso—Declaratory suit brought under direction of Revenue Court under section 98 (1) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, XVI of 1887.

The plaintiffs were the brothers of one Buta Khan, deceased, who, by his will, left his landed property to his brothers and sons in certain proportions. Upon Buta Khan's death mutation was effected of the property entirely in favour of the sons and widows. The plaintiffs were in possession of only a small area of 12 kanals 19 marlas in one village, and were in respect of this recorded as tenants-at-will holding under the sons. The sons got notice of ejectment issued in regard to this land. The brothers then sued in the Revenue Court to contest the notice of ejectment, and the Revenue Court passed an order under section 98 (1) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, requiring the brothers to bring a civil suit for the purpose of determining the validity of the will. The brothers then brought the present suit for a declaration that the will is valid, and that the defendants have no right to oust them from the 12 kanals 19 marlas of land in their possession. The lower Courts held that the suit was barred under the proviso of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, plaintiffs not having included in their suit a claim for possession to their shares according to the will in the portions of the estate of which they were at present out of possession.

Held, that the cause of action was the notice of ejectment, and the relief sought was a declaration that the will was valid and that the plaintiffs were not liable to

Held therefore, that the suit was not barred under the proviso of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877. ALI GAUHAR v. SARDAR KHAN. 81 P R 1909

17. Specific Relief Act, I of 1877, section 42, proviso—Land in possession of tenants—Further relief — Discretionary powers of Court to allow amendment of plaint.

Held, that the fact that the land in dispute is in possession of tenants who hold under defendants in no way entitles the plaintiff, who is out of possession, to bring a declaratory suit. In such a case plaintiff is able to seek further relief than a mere declaration of title within the purview of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877.

Held also, where the Courts below have refused to exercise in favour of the plaintiff their discretion to allow an amendment of the plaint after a very full consideration of the circumstances of the case, and the consequences of such refusal are in no way serious, the Chief Court should not interfere with that discretion, where it was not exercised arbitrarily or without the Courts knowing all the facts of the case and applying their minds to them. 18. Section 42—Consequential relief—Suit or declaration that plaintiff is real owner of a decree obtained by defendants.

Held, that in a suit for a declaration that plaintiff is the real holder of a decree obtained by defendants against a third party and praying also that the decree be transferred to the plaintiff, the latter prayer is mere surplusage and may be disregarded—the result being that no consequential relief has been sought in the plaint and a ten-rupee Court fee stamp is adequate.

Held also, that it is for the lower Court to decide whether the plaintiff could seek further reliefs which would bring the proviso to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, into operation. GANESHI LAL v. BENI PERSHAD. 1 P R 1911 peculiar circumstances of the case justified the Chief Court in dealing with it on the revision side.

Held also, that plaintiff's claim to a decree declaratory of their so-called right as heirs of one Buta to realize birt could not be recognized by a Civil Court, the so-called right not being property within the meaning and for the purpose of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877.

By the terms of the instrument under consideration, the owners of certain shares in two villages leased a portion of such shares to certain persons for a term of 11 years in consideration (1) of the previous payment by such persons to the lessors of a lump sum of Rs. 5,900 (the receipt of which was acknowledged in the instrument) being, as expressed in the instrument, at the rate of Rs. 536-5-11 per annum; and (2) the payment by such persons of the Government demand at the rate then paid till the term of the lease expired.

Held, per Plowden, Smyth and Elsmie, JJ., that the instrument in question was a lease falling under the provisions of article 39 of the 1st Schedule of the Stamp Act of 1879.

Held further, that the sum of Rs. 5,900 paid as above was of the nature of a fine or premium, and was not the less of that nature because the rate per annum at which it fell, when distributed over the entire term of the lease, happened to be stated in the instrument.

Held also, per Smyth and Elsmie, JJ. (Plowden, J. dissenting as to this) that, with regard to the provision in the lease that the lessees should pay the Government demand at the rate then paid till the term of the lease expired, the sums so to be paid periodically by the lessees during the continuance of the lease being certain in amount, were of the nature of rent, and would not be less of that nature because the parties had agreed (which was not clear from the instrument), that the said sums were to be paid by the lessees, not to the lessors direct, but on their account to the Government or the person appointed to realise the Government demand in the village on behalf of the Government: that therefore the lease in question was granted for a fine or premium of Rs. 5,900 in addition to a rent reserved, viz. the Government demand at the present rate, and therefore fall under clause (d) of the article above cited.

Per Plowden, J—The instrument referred to fell under clause (c) and not (d) of article 39 of the Stamp Act. Held, by the Full Court, that section 50 of the Stamp Act does not apply to the case of an instrument of any of the classes excepted in the first proviso to section 34 of the Act which has been erroneously admitted in evidence by a lower Court, but in such case the Court could proceed under section 33 of the Act, and impound the instrument. On a reference by the Financial Commissioner, Punjab, under section 46 of the Stamp Act, held, that a receipt given by an advocate or pleader for money paid for service in litigation falls within the definition of "receipt" given in section 3 (17) of the Stamp Act; and that a receipt given by an advocate for money so paid is not necessarily exempt from duty as being a "payment of money without consideration" within the meaning of article 15 (b), Schedule II of the Act, as such payment does not cease to be "consideration" for the purposes of the Stamp Act, merely because of the formal incapacity of an advocate to enter into an enforceable agreement providing for payment of remuneration for advocacy. Mukdum Shah Ali Mahomed v. Plowden (No 20 *P. Indian Stamp Act, II of 1899, section 5, articles 40 (b) and 57 (b)—Deed of mortgage executed by mortgagor, mortgagee and surety—Stamp duty leviable on such instrument.

An instrument purporting to be a deed of mortgage in consideration of the loan of Rs. 2,000, was executed by three parties (1) mortgagor, (2) surety for the due fulfilment of the obligation, and (3) the party making the loan; and it bore a stamp of Rs. 10 as a mortgage deed within the meaning of article 40 (b) of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899. On presentation before the Sub-Registrar at Peshawar a question arose, whether it should not in addition bear a stamp of Rs. 5 as falling also within the provisions of article 57 (b). On a reference by the Revenue Commissioner North-West Frontier Province—

Held, that the instrument in question was properly stamped, inasmuch as the subject-matter of the agreement was but one, viz., the repayment of the amount of the advance, and the mere fact that there were two contracts embodied in the instrument, the one by the mortgagor and the other by the surety, in respect of this matter, could not bring the instrument within the purview of section 5 of the Stamp Act. drawn at Nowshera on Messrs Cox and Co. of London, on cheque forms bearing impressed stamps of the value of one penny, which it was alleged were dishonored by the drawees on presentation. Plaintiff alleged that the cheques were endorsed with defendant's signature, and sought to make defendant liable on the ground that he was an acceptor or drawee in case of need.

Held, that inasmuch as the cheques were for amounts exceeding Rs. 20 in value and were executed in British India after the 1st April 1879, they were, by section 5 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1879, chargeable with a duty of one anna, and as they were not duly stamped they were not admissible in evidence. Section 7.

—Indian Stamp Act (I of 1879), section 7—Instrument relating to same matter but embodying distinct contracts—Stamp duty—Promissory Note comprising separately written undertakings by two promisors to pay debt in equal shares.

Plaintiff sued A. S. and M. on a Promissory Note bearing a stamp of one anna. The note was to the following effect: "The compliments of A. S. and M. to K." (the plaintiff), "Rs. 1,440-3-0 are due on "account of past Promissory Notes. This "money we shall pay you. This note is "written on a stamp of one anna in the pre-"sence of K. R. R. N. and T. D. on 22nd "Magh 1946.—S. by A. S."

There was no attestation of the witnesses named in the note, and though the note purported to be on behalf of A. S. and M. only the signature of A. S. was affixed below. Beneath the signature of A. S. were added the following words:—

"I. M. wrote a Promissory Note on account "of Mr. H. P.: that will be paid without "objection. Written by M. Half of the "amount of the above note is truly due by "me." To these words the signature of M. was affixed.

The first Court held that there were in reality two documents, each of which should have borne one-anna stamp, and that inasmuch as the second which bore M.'s signature was not separately stamped, it was inadmissible in evidence, and passed a decree for the full amount claimed, together with interest, against A. S. alone. Plaintiff appealed to the Divisional Judge, who held that there was only a single document; that M.'s writing above his signature related to the same matter as A. S.'s portion, and that a single stamp was, therefore, sufficient. M. appealed to the Chief Court, and it was Held, agreeing with the Divisional Judge, that the note was sufficiently stamped.

The test under section 7 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1879, is whether the instrument comprises or relates to several distinct matters. If it does, the fact that all such matters are grouped together, and the instrument is signed at one and the same place by all the executants, will not save it from being chargeable with the aggregate duty payable in respect of all such matters. If, on the other hand, the matter is single, the fact that the several executants signed separately, and wrote separate endorsements reciting their liability, will not multiply the duty. Nor is it material that the instrument comprises distinct contracts, provided that such contracts relate to the same matter. MUSA v. KAHAN. 102 P. R. 1895

When a document is admissible in evidence under section 34 of the Stamp Act, 1879, section 65 of the Evidence Act, 1872, does not allow, and therefore section 91 expressly forbids, secondary evidence of the document to be given. Whether there is a cause of action independent of the instrument upon which independent evidence may be given, depends upon the question whether plaintiff can allege any contract as the basis of his suit which is not the contract reduced to the form of the document excluded from consideration under the aforesaid provisions of law.

6. Contract— Novation —New contract reduced to writing, but inadmissible in evidence—New contract not duly completed—Suit based on formed contract.

On the 22nd Bhadon Sambat 1948, balance was struck by defendant in plaintiff's favour for Rs. 1,800, and subsequently defendant received from plaintiffs two sums, one of Rs. 300, the other of Rs. 400, making up a total of Rs. 2,500 and Rs. 125, paid on account of interest. To a suit by plaintiff based on this account, defendant pleaded that subsequently to the striking of the balance, plaintiff had agreed, in writing, to take the amount due to him in ten years with interest at 4 annas per cent payable annually, and that in the face of the said new contract for the discharge of defendant's liability, plaintiff's present suit on the old balance and subsequent advances would not lie. It was admitted that the document embodying the alleged new contract was insufficiently stamped, and was inadmissible in evidence, and that no evidence aliunde could be given of its terms. It was further found by the first Court, and accepted by the Chief Court, on appeal, that the plaintiff did in fact take the document in question, but that he did so without fully considering its nature, and that immediately after he came to know of its defects, he insisted on a proper bond on a sufficient stamp being executed, which the defendant refused to give.

Held, that the alleged new contract set up by defendant could not be successfully pleaded in bar of plaintiff's claim because (a) the new contract having been reduced into the form of a document, inadmissible in evidence, could not be proved, much less operate as a discharge of the former contract, and (b) assuming that the factum of the new contract could be proved, the naked promise to pay the old debt in ten years at a reduced rate of interest was not sufficient to extinguish the old liability.

Held, further, that in any case plaintiff was entitled, on defendant's refusal, to give a proper security for the debt, to treat the old contract as snbsisting, and to sue on the same. UDHO SHAH v. HIRA SHAH. 71 P R 1897

SUCCESSION ACT, 1865.

Sections 46, 48.

Will, validity of—Power of Court acting under Act V of 1881*—Succession Act* (X of 1865), sections 46, 48, *Illustrations—Lower Court refusing to grant probate of will to executor, but granting letters of administration without the will annexed to testator's representative—No appeal by executor—*Locus standi of party interested in will to appeal against grant of letters of administration.

One A. K. propounded a will and applied, as executor, for probate to the District Judge, and the appellant, who was the representative of one of the legatees under the will, the legatee himself being dead, supported the application for probate. The application was opposed by the widow of the testator's deceased son, who also applied for letters of administration without the will annexed. The lower Court disposed of both applications, and, after drawing up issues, inter alia, as to the effect of the will if proved, as to how far it was valid, and as to what property it might or might not affect, held the will not proved, and granted administration to the said widow. The deceased legatee's representative appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that it is competent to a person, who is a party to the proceedings in the lower Court and interested in having a will propounded and maintained as a will, to appeal against the grant of letters of administration without the will annexed, even if the executor does not appeal and abandons his application for probate.

Held, further, that the only question to be tried by the lower Court was whether the will propounded was the will of the testator, the Court being competent to consider not merely whether the document had been executed by him, but whether he was in a state of mind competent to exercise his testamentary power, and whether it was his own voluntary act. The effect of the will, if proved, how far it was valid, and what property it might or might not affect, were not properly before the Court.

The principles underlying sections 46 and 48 of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) are of universal application in dealing with testamentary dispositions. Mussammat Bali v. Mussammat Hussain Bibi. 55 P R 1894

Revocation of will—"Burning, tearing or otherwise destroying"—Appeal from decree passed by Judge in Chambers—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 9.

The deceased testator, on the 2nd February 1892, executed a will, duly attested, in favour of his wife, the present appellant, and died on the 24th February 1898, leaving him surviving his wife and five sons and five daughters, aged from five to thirty years. About three years before his death, the deceased wrote the word "cancelled" across both sides of the half sheet of paper on which the will was written, and drew several lines in ink through his signature and the signatures of the attesting witnesses in such a manner as to make it extremely difficult, if not impossible, to decipher those signatures and impossible for the signatures to be identified as his and the witnesses, even, if the names could be deciphered. The Chief Court on the evidence found that the deceased intended thereby to cancel the said will absolutely, and to die intestate. It was, however, contended on behalf of appellant that the will had not been duly revoked as provided by sections 57 and 58 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865.

Held, on a consideration of the facts and the authorities, that the obliteration of the signatures constituted a destruction of the will within the terms of the Act, and that such destruction having been effected by the deceased animo revocandi, the said will had been duly revoked.

become useless and inoperative through circumstances"—Dissensions between co-executors—Indian Succession Act (X of 1865), section 234 (4)—Court referring question to arbitrators.

Held on an application under section 234 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, by one of two executors, for revocation of a probate previously granted to both that the expression that "the grant has become useless and inoperative through circumstances" in clause (4) of the section did not apply to a case where the allegation was that the two executors appointed by the will, to whom probate had been granted, found it difficult to work harmoniously in concert.

Semble: that though under section 261 of the Act the proceedings in contentious cases are to take as nearly as may be the form of a regular suit, according to the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code the Court before whom an application under section 234 of the Act is instituted has no jurisdiction to delegate the decision of the question raised to arbitrators, even with the consent of the parties. 2. And section 264—Letters of administration—Grant by District Judge—Jurisdiction of Chief Court to extend the original grant—Just cause for revocation of grant.

Held, that the Chief Court has no jurisdiction to amend a grant of letters of administration granted by a District Judge so as to give it operation beyond the local limits of such District Judge's jurisdiction.

Held, further, that where the attorney for an executrix and the District Judge know that effects of the testator existed in British India, outside the Punjab, and in spite of this the one applied for probate, and the other granted letters of administration, not with the will, but with a copy of the will annexed and the will was not filed as prescribed by section 259 of the Succession Act, the proceedings to obtain the grant were so defective in substance as to furnish a just cause for revocation of the grant. 2. Section 282—Distribution of assets—Priority—Mortgage lien—Interest on claim secured by decree.

In July 1876 B. took out letters of administration of the estate of O'C. deceased. The largest creditor was B. himself, who held a lien on a life policy, which represented almost the entire assets of the deceased. B's claim was, however, under a decree which carried no interest. The remaining creditors contended that B. was only entitled to his pro rata share under section 282, Act X of 1865, and also that he was entitled to no interest on his claim.

Held that the only claims to priority intended to be excluded by section 282 were claims on the ground that the debt is a speciality debt, and on other grounds ejusdem generis, and therefore, that B. was entitled to be first paid.

Held, further, that B's claim being based upon a decree which did not provide for the payment of interest, he was not entitled to interest on it. DIALU MAL v. BRYAN. 11 P R 1878

A decree-holder died leaving a widow: she did not take out a certificate under the Succession Certificate Act, 1889, but made an assignment in writing of the decree to N. L.

N. L. proceeded to attach property of the judgment-debtor, who objected that N. L. had no title to execute the decree on the ground that the widow had not obtained a certificate under the Act of 1889 to collect debts due to her husband.

Held, that that the objection was well founded. Assuming that the widow was competent without a certificate to assign the debt, she could only assign effectually what right she herself had. She had not the right to execute the decree unless and until she had applied to the Court under section 232, Civil Procedure Code, for execution of the decree under a transfer by operation of law from the deceased decree-holder. An application by the widow could not be granted unless she produced a certificate under the Act of 1889, section 4 of the Act, prohibiting the Court from acting on an application of the kind without the production of a certificate. In a suit brought to recover certain money due on account of a balance struck by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff's father the plaintiffs had not obtained a succession certificate. Held, that no certificate was necessary, as the plaintiffs were suing for a joint Hindu family property by right of survivorship.

Semble.—Act VII of 1889 does not require a Court to dismiss a plaintiff's suit where a certificate should have been but has not been obtained. Section 4 only enacts that in the absence of the certificate a decree shall not be passed. There is nothing to preclude the Court from staying proceedings and directing the plaintiffs to take measures to procure a certificate.

Plaintiff therefore prayed for recovery of a sum of Rs. 3,192 and costs with a lien on the property mortgaged and recoverable by auction sale, and that defendant No. 1 be made personally liable for the amount of the decree and future interest. For defendants it was contended that the suit must fail by reason of the non-joinder as co-plaintiff of the deceased mortgagee's other son and co-heir, the latter being equally interested with plaintiff in the mortgage-deed.

Held, that inasmuch as, according to the authorities, the relief sought in the present suit could not have been granted in its entirety without a certificate under Act VII of 1889, the certificate-holder, who represented the estate qua the particular debt just as fully as an executor or administrator, was entitled to sue alone without impleading the other heirs of the deceased mortgagee. Held, that under section 16 of the Succession Certificate Act, 1889, plaintiffs, as holders of a certificate entitling them to collect any part of the debt due to the deceased, were competent to sue for that part, and that the suit as laid could proceed. SHIB RAM v. MUHAMMAD SHAH.

The plaintiffs sued for a declaratory decree that an alienation by a childless proprietor would not affect their reversionary interests in the land, the subject of the alienation: the grantor was alive and no consequential relief was prayed for.

The alienation challenged by the plaintiffs purported to be for Rs. 1,300: the value of the land calculated at 30 times the revenue was Rs. 770.

Held, that no further appeal to the Chief Court was competent in the absence of an application to the Divisional Judge for a certificate under section 40, sub-section (1) (d), Punjab Courts Act, 1884, the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction being less than Rs. 1,000 and both Courts having concurred in decreeing the claim.

The suit as brought, though it fell within the description of claim mentioned in No. II of the Rules issued under Part II of the Suits Valuation Act, was subject to the proviso to that Rule, and as the subject of the alienation impugned was land as specified in section 3 of the Act, and was valued for purposes of jurisdiction at 30 times the revenue, or Rs. 770, according to the rules made under that

A suit for possession of land by a mortgagee by conditional sale, who claims to have foreclosed is mortgage under Regulation XVII of 1806, is a "suit for the possession of land" falling within clause V, section 7, Court Fees Act, 1870, and is not a "suit by a mortgagee to foreclose the mortgage" falling under clause IX of the section, suits for foreclosure of mortgages being unknown in the Punjab, where foreclosure takes place as a ministerial and not a judicial proceeding under the Regulation of 1806.

For purposes of jurisdiction under section 3, Suits Valuation Act, 1887, the value of the subject matter of such a suit is to be calculated at thirty times the revenue assessed upon the land in accordance with the rules made under the Act—Punjab Government Notification No. 255, dated 4th March 1889 (Chief Court Book Circular VII of 1889).

3. Suit for pre-emption of reversionary rights in land—Value of suit—Course of appeal—Rules framed by Local Government under Suits Valuation Act, 1887—Rule No. 2—"Land."

Plaintiffs sued for pre-emption of reversionary rights in a half share of certain land held by three widows on a life interest, and alleged that, though the deed of sale stated the purchase-money to be Rs. 7,000, only Rs. 2,900 passed. They, therefore, prayed for a decree on payment of the proper price, and for purposes of jurisdiction valued their suit in the plaint at Rs. 3,804-6-0, being thirty times the jama. The first Court found that Rs. 2,900 only passed, but that the proper market price of the land was Rs. 7,000. The suit was, however, dismissed as premature.

Held, that the appeal lay to the Divisional Court. The suit being for the acquisition of a contingent interest in land, and not for possession or for a present interest, the rules framed by the Local Government under section 3 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, were not applicable, and the test of jurisdiction was to be furnished by the value set forth in the plaint, which was not shown to be above Rs. 5,000. SUITS VALUATION ACT, 1887—contd.

section 7 (v) (e)—Suits Valuation Act, 1887, sections 3, 8.

Held, that in a suit for posssesion of a house the value for purposes of jurisdiction should be the same as the value for purposes of Court fee which, under section 7 (v) (e) of the Court Fees Act, 1870, is the market value of the house.

Held, further, that under the circumstances of the present case the value of the suit for the purpose of jurisdiction was the value of the house as found by the District Judge, viz., Rs. 5,000, and that it was not competent to the plaintiff to assign an arbitrary value, viz., Rs. 8,000, to the subject-matter of the suit.

Punjab Courts Act, 1888, section 40, clause (a)—Suits Valuation Act, 1887, section 4. Valuation of subject-matter of suit in the Appellate Court.

In a suit for the possession of land the value of which under the Rules framed under section 4 of the Suits Valuation Act was less than Rs. 500, both the lower Courts concurred in decreeing the claim. The defendants thereupon, without obtaining a certificate for appeal, appealed to the Chief Court alleging that the market value of the land was over Rs. 1,000, and that an appeal lay under the second branch of clause (a) of section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act.

Held, that the decree of the Divisional Judge confirming the decree of the first Court, which decreed the plaintiffs' claim to proprietary possession of land, which claim, valued according to the Rules framed under section 4 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, did not amount to Rs. 1,000 in value, was a decree which did not fall under the second branch of clause (a) of section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1888, being a decree in which the claim to, or question respecting, land was identical with the subject-matter of the suit, which was excluded from appeal under the first branch of that clause, because the value of the suit did not amount to Rs. 1,000. The plaintiffs in their plaint valued the relief sought as follows:—

	Rs.
(1) Removal of defendant from the office of mahant	1,000
(2) Declaration of plaintiffs' right to appoint a successor	500
(3) Enforcement of the provisions of a will	1,000

or Rs. 2,500 in all.

The District Judge having found, on a preliminary objection raised by the defendant, that the value of the property attached to the institution in question was Rs. 2,53,037-13-11, directed the plaintiffs to file additional Court fees, and upon their refusal to comply with such order rejected the plaint under section 54, Civil Procedure Code.

The plaintiffs thereupon appealed to the Divisional Judge, who returned the memorandum of appeal for presentation to the Chief Court, holding that, though he would have had jurisdiction looking only at the claim as valued in the plaint, his jurisdiction had been taken away by the District Judge's decision that the true valuation was Rs. 2,53,038.

Held, that this view of the law was untenable, and that the appeal should be returned for presentation to the Divisional Judge. The suit being other than any of those referred to in section 7, paragraphs

v, vi and ix, and paragraph x, clause (d) of the Court Fees Act, and the value for the computation of Court-fees and for purposes of jurisdiction being the same by virtue of section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887; and such value being determinable according to the amount (in this case Rs. 2,500), at which the relief sought was valued in the plaint or memorandum of appeal, the Divisional Judge had jurisdiction to entertain the plaintiff's appeal notwithstanding that the District Judge had decided that the true value of the relief sought was in excess of Rs 5,000. The suit having been dismissed by the Additional District Judge and the Divisional Judge on appeal, plaintiff filed a further appeal in the Chief Court Held, that under section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, the value of a suit of this nature as determinable for the computation of Court-fees and the value for purposes of jurisdiction was the same, and that under section 7 (iv) (d) (e) of the Court Fees Act the amount of the Court-fee payable was to be computed according to the amount at which the relief sought was valued in the plaint.

Held, therefore, that the value of the suit being Rs. 130, no further appeal lay to the Chief Court.

1. Suit by mortgagee for possession—Suits Valuation Act, 1887—Value for purposes of jurisdiction.

The ruling in No. 1 *P. Plaintiff sued in the Court of a Munsif of the 3rd class with powers up to Rs. 100 only, for a perpetual injunction, and in the plaint valued the suit at Rs. 35.

Held, that inasmuch as the valuation of a suit for a perpetual injunction has, for the purposes of jurisdiction, been fixed by the rules of the Chief Court, sanctioned by Government, at a sum between Rs. 100 and Rs. 500, the Munsif had no jurisdiction to try the suit, and that the defect of jurisdiction was not cured by section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, which is limited to cases of "over-valuation or under-valuation" in which the valuation depends on the discretion of the parties or the Court. 4. Surety, liability of, under section 336, Civil Procedure Code, 1882—Application by judgment-debtor within one month to be declared insolvent—Application returned by Court as defective—Release of surety.

One R. D. having obtained a decree against B. S. and R. S. and having applied for the arrest and imprisonment of B. S. one T. S. offered security under section 336 of the Civil Procedure Code, which was accepted, the condition of the bond being that B. S. should apply within one month, under section 344 of the Code, to be adjudicated an insolvent otherwise the surety undertook to produce B. S. on any date fixed by the Court, or if he failed to do so, to be responsible for payment of the decree with costs. Within one month B. S. put in an application under section 344 of the Code, but the application was returned by the Court for an alleged defect and B. S. was ordered to file another application within one week. No further application having been filed and the case having been struck off, B. S. and T. S. were summoned to appear on a certain date. T. S. alone appeared on the date fixed, and offered to produce B. S. on a specified date, but as he failed to do this, the Court ordered execution to issue against T. S.'s property. T. S. applied to the Chief Court for revision, and it was Held, that inasmuch as B. S. had applied within one month under section 344, T. S. was released from his obligation, it being no concern of the surety's that the Court returned the application of the judgment-debtor for an alleged defect therein.

TANK—CHIEF OF.

Chief of Tank—Succession—Inheritance—Family custom—Primogeniture—Right of junior members of the family.

On the death of a Chief of Tank the question arose whether by a family custom the entire estate descended to the Chief for the time being as head of the family and by virtue of his Chiefship or devolved according to the general custom of Jat agriculturists in the Punjab to be held jointly by the sons or their issues in equal shares, each having the right to claim partition. It was proved that the succession to the Chiefship went always in the line of primogeniture except in one instance in which the eldest son was set aside on the ground of insanity and that with the Chiefship went the ownership of the land of the ilaqa.

Held, that the whole estate known as Tank proper belonged to the Chief for the time being who was both ruler and proprietor, and that succession devolved upon the eldest son of the Chief, the other members of the family being entitled to maintenance only. 1. Small Cause Court suit—Munsif trying case withdrawn from Small Cause Court—Finality of order of Munsif—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, section 25.

Plaintiff filed his suit as a Small Cause Court case in the Court of the District Judge at Hoshiarpur, with a note that it was triable by the Small Cause Court, but as the Judge of that Court was related to one of the parties it should not be sent to him. It was accordingly sent to an additional Munsif without Small Cause Court powers, by order of the District Judge. After decision by that Munsif an appeal was preferred to the District Judge and decided by him.

Held, that the action of the District Judge in sending the case to the Additional Munsif amounts to transfer within the meaning of section 25, Civil Procedure Code, the Additional Munsif must be deemed for the purposes of this suit to be a Court of Small Causes under the last clause of that section, and his decision was therefore not open to appeal.

9. Plaintiff, a tenant with rights of occupancy, sued the defendants, the proprietors, for the value of a tree and some grass cut and taken from the land in plaintiff's occupancy. In the wajib-ul-arz of the village in which the land was situated, it was recorded, that a tenant with rights of occupancy might cut down trees, with the consent of the landlord, for certain specified purposes; but there was no mention of the right of the proprietor. Apart from the wajib-ul-arz, there was no evidence of custom. In previous suits between the parties, the proprietors had failed to prove their asserted right to enter upon the land and cut trees, &c. Held, that without the consent of the plaintiff, the defendants were not entitled to enter upon the land and take therefrom trees and grass growing upon it. KALIAN DAS v. BUTA. 61 P R 1873

10. The wajib-ul-arz expressly allowed tenants with rights of occupancy to cut trees and use them for their fields, but said nothing about the right to cut for roofing houses. Held, that the general custom being to allow such tenants to cut trees for roofing their dwelling-

11. Held, that the general rule is that an hereditary cultivator can only cut trees for agricultural purposes and repairs of his house, and the proprietor cannot, unless empowered so to do by the wajib-ul-arz or custom, cut down, without the tenant's consent, trees on the land in the occupation of the cultivator. The parties belonged to a village in the Jullundur tahsil. The tree in suit, which was cut by the landlord (defendant), was standing in the courtyard of the house of the occupier (plaintiff). Held, that the plaintiff had no property in the tree and could not sue for its value. TRUST—concld.

4 Trust—Revocation — Condition—Payment of amount due to trustee.
The plaintiff being indebted and unable to manage his estate, made over the same to his mother by a deed of trust in order that she might manage it for him and pay off his debts, granting him maintenance at a fixed rate during the time she held the land. There was no provision as to when the trust was to terminate, Six years after the deed, but before all the debts had been paid off, plaintiff sued to redeem the property, and offered to pay the amount which might be found due from plaintiff to defendant. The lower Court dismissed the suit, holding that plaintiff could not sue till all the debts had been paid off.
Held, that there was nothing in the deed to prevent the plaintiff revoking the trust after he had satisfied the claims of the trustee. I. L. R. 8 Cal. 887, distinguished. SARDAR RANDHIR SINGH v. RANI LACHMAN KOUR. 133 P R 1889

5. Charitable trust—Oral gift of immovable property creating charitable trust—Trust of immovable property—Indian Trust Act, 1882, section 5—Locus standi of third parties to contest gift.

Held, that a gift of immovable property creating a public charitable trust does not fall within the purview of the Trust Act, 1882, and that therefore it is not essential that it should be in writing signed by the author of the trust or the trustee and registered.
The invalidity of a trust is a matter which concerns the creator of the trust and his heirs, creditors, trustees and beneficiaries, and not those who are mere debtors of the donor; the latter can only contest the donee's title, but as soon as that is established their defence as to the locus standi fails.
Held, also, that where a gift does not require a writing for its validity, and is upheld by the donor in Court, third parties cannot contest the donee's title.

Held, that where the author of a trust on failure of its objects sues to recover trust property in the hands of a trustee for his own use and not for the purposes of the trust, section 10 of the Indian Limitation Act is inapplicable.
Such a suit being a suit to reconvey trust property to the settler the limitation applicable is that prescribed in article 120 and will commence to run from the date of the failure of the object of the trust. GULZARI MAL v. KISHAN CHAND. 132 P R 1907

23. Valuation of suit—Suit for pre-emption of land—Value of relief sought—Finding of Court exceeding its pecuniary limits of jurisdiction, effect of—Suits Valuation Act, 1887.

A pre-emption suit was filed in the Court of a Munsiff of the first class for recovery of possession of agricultural land. Its value for purposes of jurisdiction, as laid by the rules in force under the Suits Valuation Act, was Rs. 644. The Munsiff whose jurisdiction was limited to Rs. 1,000 gave a decree on payment of Rs 4,038. On objection being taken to the jurisdiction of the Munsiff to pass a decree for that amount,

Held by the Full Bench that the actual value of the land in suit being clearly in excess of the pecuniary limits of the Munsiff's jurisdiction, he was not competent to pass a decree in the case but should have returned the plaint for presentation to a Court with jurisdiction. MUHAMMAD AFZAL KHAN v. NAND LAL. 16 P R 1908 F. B.

24. Valuation of suit—Suit for pre-emption of land—Effect of actual value exceeding the value as fixed by the Suits Valuation Act, 1887.

Held that under the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, the value for purposes of jurisdiction in suits for possession of land, where the subject-matter is a definite portion of a revenue-paying khata, is thirty times such portion of the revenue as may be rateably payable in respect of that portion. 25. Jurisdiction—Valuation of suit—Suit to establish right to attached property—Claim against judgment-debtor for declaration of title—Value of subject-matter—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 39.

Held by the Full Bench that for the purposes of jurisdiction the value of a suit of an unsuccessful claimant under section 283, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, to obtain a declaration that certain property was not liable to attachment as the property of the judgment-debtor where the latter resists the claim on the ground that the property was his is the value of the property attached and not the amount of the decree. 26. Suit for redemption—Value for purposes of further appeal—Punjab Courts Act, 1884, section 40 (b).

Held, that for purposes of section 40 (b) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884, the value of the suit for redemption is the sum found by the First Court to be payable on redemption, and the fact that the lower Appellate Court on appeal had reduced that sum does not alter the value of the property involved in the decree.

Further held, that the amount found due to the mortgagee for repairs is included in the jurisdictional value of the appeal. KISHEN CHAND v. TAJ-UD-DIN. 23 P R 1909

27. Valuation of suit for possession of immovable property against tenant—Suits Valuation Act, VII of 1887, section 8—Court Fees Act, VII of 1870, section 7 XI (c, c).

Held that under section 7 XI (c, c) of the Court Fees Act, VII of 1870 (as amended by Act VI of 1905) the value for purposes of Court fees of a suit for possession of immovable property by a landlord against his tenant is a year's rent, and following 50 *P. 9. Warranty—Sale of beer by brewer to retail dealer—Implied warranty of soundness—Warranty ceases when beer despatched—Presumption against purchaser who delays to complain—No objection can be taken after breaking bulk—Estoppel by acts of purchaser.

Plaintiff, a Brewery Company, sold to defendants who were wine and beer merchants, a number of casks of beer, which were despatched from Murree early in February 1869, and reached the defendants at Meean Meer about the middle of March following. In April, after a dispute between the parties about the dishonoring of a bill of exchange, the defendants informed the plaintiffs that of the beer delivered 24 hogsheads and 3 kilderkins were unsaleable, and that they were in that condition when they reached Meen Meer. The defendants had advertised the consignment generally as being very superior beer. A portion of the alleged bad beer the defendants had bottled off, as not being unsound but only very indifferent, in the expectation that it would sell at least at low prices. Some of the beer so bottled was sold by the defendants, but it was returned to them by the purchasers as undrinkable. In an action for the price of the 24 hogsheads and 3 kilderkins, the defendants pleaded that the law implied in such a case a warranty that the beer should be saleable when delivered, and should remain so for a reasonable period after delivery to admit of a resale, that the beer either was bad when it was delivered, or had become so before such reasonable period had elapsed, and that on those grounds the defendants were not liable for the price Held, that by warranty implied by law the plaintiffs were bound to supply wholesome and merchantable beer to the defendants, but that the plaintiffs were not responsible for any deterioration in the quality of the beer that necessarily took place between the date of despatch and the date of delivery, and that there was no implied warranty that the beer should keep good for any period after delivery. Held also, that if a purchaser who complains of a breach of warranty, do not challenge the quality of the article without delay, the presumption against him is that the warranty is complied with; and that if he break bulk or make use of the article, he is barred from raising any objection to it. Found also, that the delay on the part of the defendants in complaining, their doing so after quarrelling with the Company, and the fact that they had advertised the consignment as of a superior quality, left them no reasonable ground for refusing to pay the price of the beer in dispute. A was convicted under section 408, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to fine and imprisonment. The Deputy Commissioner did not realize the fine by sale of A's movable property under section 61, Criminal Procedure Code, but ordered that all A's assets should be paid into the treasury, and advertised his property for sale, At the sale B purchased a house and garden. Held, that a suit by A against B for possession of the house would lie, as the Deputy Commissioner had no right to sell the house, and B, although a bona fide purchaser, could have no better title than the Deputy Commissioner had. Where the purchaser of immovable property knows at the time of purchase that a third party professes to have the proprietary right, he buys the disputed title at his own risk, unless the vendor covenants to the contrary; and if the third party makes good his title and ousts the purchaser or deprives him of the benefit of his bargain, the latter cannot recover the money paid or claim relief from his vendor. The rule of caveat emptor applies to the purchaser of immovable property; and after the transaction is completed, the purchaser has no redress for defect of title unless the vendor has covenanted for title. 13. Sale—Ownership—Transfer of.

Held, that in the absence of any intention common to both parties to a sale that the ownership shall not pass until the deed of sale has been registered and delivered to the purchaser or until possession has actually been given, the accomplishment of these conditions is not essential to the completion of the sale, and the ownership of property passes on the execution of the deed of sale. VENDOR AND PURCHASER—contd.

Where plaintiff brought his suit for cancellation of a deee of sale, on the allegation of a sale for Rs. 400, to be paid ten days after the execution of the deed, and a refusal to pay;

Held, that these allegations, even if proved, would not entitle plaintiff to have the sale set aside, at least without proof that it was mutually agreed that, in default of payment, the sale should be void.

Held, further, that in this particular case plaintiff had failed to prove his allegations; that as he had not revealed the real truth of the transaction, it was impossible to determine whether the plaintiff was entitled to the relief sought or to any other relief, and that, therefore, his suit must be dismissed throughout. Where an instrument purporting to be a transfer of property has been executed by one person in favour of another, without consideration, for a fraudulent purpose known to both, but possession has not been delivered.

Held, that the apparent purchaser cannot succeed in a suit for possession.

16. Suit by vendee for possession of land sold—Contract of sale—Completion of sale—Non-payment of purchase-money—Condition precedent—Presumption from terms of deed—Mortgagee in possession—Declaration of title.

Defendant 1 executed a deed of sale in favour of plaintiff, which stated that the land mentioned therein had been sold to plaintiff, the consideration money received by the vendor, and possession delivered to the purchaser. The land was in the actual possession of defendant 2 as mortgagee. The deed was registered the same day, defendant 1 admitting receipt of the purchase-money before the Registering officer, and making over to plaintiff the receipt given by that officer for the deed. Two days afterwards the vendor petitioned that the deed might not be given to plaintiff till the purchase money was paid, but finally, when transcription of the deed in the registration books had been completed, it was delivered to plaintiff. Subsequently defendant 1 executed another sale of the same land in favour of defendant 2, the mortgagee, which was registered, and dakhil kharij was effected in defendant 2's favour.

The Lower Courts found as a fact that plaintiff had not paid the purchase-money, and the lower Appellate Court therefore held that the sale was incomplete, and dismissed plaintiff's suit for possession as owner of the land sold.

Held, that the transaction passed beyond the stage of a mere contract for sale, and that the ownership of the land passed to plaintiff, notwithstanding non-payment of the consideration money, at latest when the receipt for the deed was made over to the purchaser.

It is competent to the parties to determine in the contract for sale that ownership shall not pass until some future time or the happening of some event, but there is no rule of law that a sale of immovable property is not complete, and the ownership does not pass, till the purchase-money is paid.

The execution of a deed of sale which purports to be a present transfer of property in possession, with possession to the purchaser, for a consideration acknowledged to have been received, raises a presumption that the ownership is intended to pass immediately; and this presumption gains additional force when the vendor does at the same time every act in his power to register the deed and procure delivery of it to the purchaser.

Held, also, that plaintiff was entitled to a declaration of his title as owner, though he could not succeed in his suit for possession ainst defendant 2, a mortgagee in possesion with a prior title, whom plaintiff had t offered to redeem. ABBAS ALI SHAH v. R BAKHSH. 132 P R 1879

17. Completion of sale—Non-payment of consideration—Transfer of ownership.

Where a deed of sale of immovable property purported to transfer the property for a consideration acknowledged to have been received, and the deed was duly registered, and the vendor applied to the revenue authorities to effect mutation of names in the purchaser's favour and there was nothing to show, although it was found that the payment of the consideration money had not been proved, that it was the intention of the parties that the ownership of the land was not to pass until after the payment of the consideration, held, that the transaction had passed beyond a mere contract of sale, and that as a decree for immediate possession could not be given, the property sold being a share of a joint undivided estate, the purchaser was entitled to a decree declaring that, on condition of payment of the consideration money, he is the owner of the vendor's right, title, and interest in the property described in the deed of sale. Abbas Ali Shah v Pir Buksh (No. 132 *P. other, and the transferee believing in good faith that he is absolutely entitled thereto has planted or sown crops on the property and is subsequently evicted therefrom by a person having a better title, he is entitled to such crops if they are growing on the property at the time of his eviction, and a fortiori, according to the same principle, if he has received possession of the produce of the crops before his eviction, he is entitled to retain it. 19. Vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money—Recital in deed of full payment—Subsequent advance on strength of deed by third party without notice of lien—Priority—Destruction of vendor's lien by acceptance of security for unpaid balance—Intention of parties.

The general principle as to the lien of a vendor of an estate in regard to unpaid purchase-money is, that where a vendor, in compliance with the contract for the sale of an estate, executes a conveyance thereof, but the purchase-money is wholly or partially unpaid, then, notwithstanding that on the face of the conveyance it is expressed to be paid, or that a receipt for it is endorsed thereon, the vendor has a lien on the estate for the money remaining due to him. But this general principle is subject to a restriction where third persons have subsequently advanced money to the purchaser bona fide and without notice of the vendor's lien, on the strength of the deed of conveyance. In the latter case the vendor loses his lien so far as such third person is concerned.

The mere taking of security for the unpaid purchase-money will not destroy the vendor's lien: the question depends upon intention, which must be gathered from all the surrounding facts, the nature of the security, and the expressions and conduct of the vendor. If the security was substituted for the consideration money, the lien ceases to exist: but if the lien was intended to be reserved, the taking of an additional security would not destroy it. ALLIANCE BANK OF SIMLA v. WALSH. 66 P R 1883

20. Sale to plaintiff without notice of former sale—Refund of purchase-money—Caveat emptor—Fraud.

Plaintiff having been deprived of some land purchased by him, at the suit of one M. who had purchased the same land more than two years before him, sued his vendors to recover the price paid.

Held, that if the vendors sold to the plaintiff keeping back from him the fact of a former sale, in which one of them took part, this would be a fraud upon the plaintiff which would render the doctrine of caveat emptor inapplicable, and would give the plaintiff an equitable right to recover the money obtained from him by fraud. Hira Nand v. Mahia (No. 90 *P. 21. Rival purchasers—Suit for possession by prior purchaser—Defendant pleading inter alia a right of pre-emption in the property sold—Validity of such plea—Cross suit.

Plaintiffs, who were the purchasers under a registered deed of sale of certain land of which the defendants were mortgagees, and of which they had also taken a registered deed of sale subsequent to the plaintiff's deed and containing express mention of the prior conveyance to plaintiffs, sued the vendor and the mortgagees to recover possession of the lands conveyed to them, alleging a previous tender at the proper time of the mortgage-money to the mortgagees and a refusal by them to accept the tender which allegation was not traversed. The mortgagees in their answer challenged the validity of the plaintiff's conveyance and relied upon the conveyance to themselves, and subsequently two of them raised a plea that they were entitled to a right of pre-emption over the lands conveyed at the market value.

Held, that such plea was no answer to the plaintiffs' suit, and was therefore inadmissible, the proper course being for these defendants to bring a cross suit to enforce the right claimed. Wazira v. Shadi Khan (No. 67 *P. 22. Contract—Fraud—Fraud between vendor and purchaser, effect of—Contract Act, 1872, section 19.

The defendant, a horse-dealer, sold a mare to the plaintiff which he knew had a cracked hoof. He filled up the crack with some substance in such a way as to defy detection. Shortly after the purchase the mare having to walk a short distance was found to be lame and on enquiry being made the defect was discovered. The plaintiff brought an action to avoid the purchase on the ground of fraud and to recover damages, held, that he was entitled to avoid the sale and recover back the purchase-money from defendant.

Held, that a personal covenant of indemnity in a deed of sale under which a vendor guarantees his title in the property conveyed solely to the original vendee and in which he agrees to indemnify that vendee if disturbed by adverse claims cannot be held to enure for the benefit of a pre-emptor who succeeds in obtaining a decree for possession by pre-emption. 25. Vendor and purchaser—Agreement to sell to B—Subsequent sale to C with notice of original contract—Suit for possession by B—Priority—Penalty mentioned in contract no bar to specific performance—Specific Relief Act, 1877, sections 20, 27 (b).

A having entered into an agreement to sell certain property to B subsequently sold it under a registered deed to C, who had notice of the original contract to sell to B. Thereupon B brought a suit for possession by specific performance of his agreement. Held that B was entitled to possession. And that the title of C, though based on a registered deed, was ineffective against B, and did not afford a valid defence, his purchase having been with notice of the original contract.

Held also, that in such cases a party should not be allowed to evade specific performance merely because the agreement provided a penalty to be paid on default. HUKAM CHAND v. NIKKA SINGH. 15 P R 1908

26. Vendor and purchaser—Covenant for title—Pre-emption—Decree for pre-emption against purchaser—Right of purchaser to recover from vendor the loss sustained by him in the transaction.

The defendant sold to plaintiff a house which she had herself purchased a few months previously and covenanted for title and further contracted that "agar koi digar dawedar paida hoga to mazhara zimewar hai." Shortly after this sale one A brought a suit for pre-emption against the original vendee and the parties to the present suit and obtained a decree for possession. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant to recover the loss sustained by him in the transaction.

Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover upon the covenants not only the deficiency between the price paid by him and the price decreed to be paid by the pre-emptor for the property but also the costs incurred by him in defending such suit.—KHONMON BIBI v. SHAH MALI. 111 P R 1908

The parties were Hindu Girths of the Kangra District. The land in dispute was situate in mauza B., and was self-acquired by one A., who had migrated from N., the village of his origin.

A.'s son K. died sonless leaving a widow who gave the land to her daughter's sons.

The plaintiffs, residents of N., were descendants of an ancestor of A., and claimed the land.

Held, that the true issue arising was whether the plaintiffs were by custom heirs to the deceased in respect of land, held by him in a different village; and that the burden of proof was on the plaintiffs.

The plaintiff was uncle's daughter's son of A., the last male representative of R., to whom the land in suit had originally been gifted by one of the village proprietors. The defendants (the proprietors of the village) were Jats of a different got. The lower Courts, finding that there was no custom embracing the issue exactly in point, gave the plaintiff a decree on the ground that he was entitled to succeed by Hindu Law.

Held, by the Chief Court, that Hindu Law was not applicable to the case, the customary rule which governs the devolution of ancestral land among Hindu exogamous Jats being well ascertained; and that the plaintiff, not being in the line of ekjaddis or even of rishtedars of the last holder, was not an heir of the deceased in respect of his land, and that the onus, which had not been discharged, lay upon him to show a better title than that of the village proprietors who were in possession.

A. (the deceased owner) was a Hindu Jat, and among Hindu Jats, being exogamous, the customary rule of succession to ancestral land is well established. She appointed one Sirdar M. trustee, or mutawali, with directions to divide the net income into five equal shares between herself and the four beneficiaries, and, after her death, into four shares among the beneficiaries and their heirs in accordance with Muhammadan Law. The said deed further defined the powers of the mutawali, provided for the appointment of a successor on the death of the said Sirdar M. and prohibited and declared invalid alienations of any kind which might be made by the beneficiaries. 2. Custom—Right to take watercourse through another village—Construction of Wajib-ul-arz, Mauza Kakki, Bannu District.

Defendant, with the previous permission of the Collector of the District, made a canal through the lands of mauza Kakki, and in that village through some lands belonging to plaintiff who thereupon sued for an injunction to restrain defendant from using the said canal, and for possession of the land taken up by it. The entry in the Wajib-ul-arz of the village was to the following effect:—" Agar kisi dusra gaun ke malik " hamare rakh men vial jadid nikalna chahen " to unse ivzanah liya jawega, aur Sarkar " ko harwakt ikhtiyar hai ke jahan chahe " hamare rakh men vial jadid nikale basharte " ke hamko ivzanah mile."

Held, that the meaning of the entry upon its proper construction was that the Collector of the District, as representing the Government, had power to give permission to the owners of another village to take a watercourse through mauza Kakki, the owners of the latter being entitled to claim compensation for such user from the owners of the former, and, found, that the said entry embodied the custom subsisting in the district.

Held, therefore that defendant having obtained the consent of the Collector was entitled to construct the watercourse in question, plaintiff being entitled to claim compensation therefor but not to stop the user of the watercourse, of which the construction had been already completed until payment of such compensation.

Held, further, that the agreement embodied in the said entry was reasonable, and probably the only one which could effectually secure the engagement of the customary rights of irrigation under the circumstances of the tract in question, and none the less so because the Collector was therein made the arbiter in such matters. WATER RENT.

When plaintiff claimed water rent, and produced evidence that up to the period for which the claim was preferred he had always received the rent,—Held, that such evidence did not warrant the Court in passing a decree for the rent without further enquiry, and that the defendant should be allowed to dispute the plaintiff's title to demand the rent. It being admitted that the father of plaintiff's

WATER-WAY.

Easement—Rights to water-way—Non-user for two years preceding suit—Limitation Act, XV. of 1877, section 26.

Plaintiff sued to establish his rights to use a water-way for the rain water of his roof. It was found that the roof had fallen more than two years previous to the suit, and the lower Courts therefore dismissed the claim under section 26, III (b) of the Limitation Act, on the ground of non-user for two years preceding the suit.

Held, per curiam, that plaintiff had not lost his right.

Per BRANDRETH, J.—Because there was no sufficient abandonment of any kind to create a non-user on plaintiff's part, nor any attempt at denial on defendant's part.

Per RATTIGAN, J.—Because mere non-user of an easement for a time, if the circumstances of the case are not such as to indicate an intentional abandonment of the former rights, is not, even if such non-user extend beyond two years, sufficient to destroy that right. CHURRUT SINGH v. SIMBOO.

9. Presumption of undue influence—Bequest.

Plaintiff sued to set aside a bequest of a house made by the widow of his deceased brother. The facts were that at the time of making the bequest the woman was eighty-four years of age, was on her death bed, and had only the defendant (in whose favour the bequest was made) near her. Defendant had for some time attended upon the old woman, and supplied her with food, &c. The lower Appellate Court (reversing the order of the Original Court) dismissed plaintiff's claim; upon which an appeal was preferred to the Chief Court on the following ground:—"that the Court of first "instance was fully justified under all the "circumstances attending the bequest, in "setting it aside at the plaintiff's instance; "the donation being voluntary, made by a "very old woman eighty-four years of age, "in her death sickness, without advice, and "in the absence of her own relatives, to "the donee who stood towards her in a "position of which undue advantage might "readily be taken." Held, by the Chief Court, that the case was not one in which undue influence could be presumed. KIRPA v. TIRUTH. 50 P R 1872

10. Capacity—Soundness of mind.

R. D. on his death-bed executed a will in favour of the mohunt of a religious institution. A writer was sent for, and on his arrival R. D. was unconscious, he revived, and the writer proceeded to draft the will, R. D. dictating at the request of G. one of the bystanders, who seemed anxious that the will should be made. Before the writing was finished, R. D. again fainted, but again recovered his consciousness when the dictation was proceeded with, and R. D. directed G. to affix his (R. D's) seal to the instrument; R. D. himself also sealed the will. He died shortly after this. It appeared that R. D. had not till his last moments taken any steps to make a transfer of his property for the benefit of the religious institution, but he had said that, as he was childless, he would make over his property to the mohunt and go on a pilgrimage. Held, that R. D. was not in a state to attend to important business, and that the will must be set aside for want of capacity. MOHUNT RADICA DAS v. BHUGWAN DAS. 7 P R 1874

11. Validity of will—Nature of proof—Testator dying shortly after will.

In determining whether a testator was in such a mental condition as to be capable of making a valid disposition of his property by a testamentary instrument, the circumstance that he was on the verge of death is one to be considered, but the mere fact that the testator died shortly after making his will is not of itself a sufficient ground for invalidating a will otherwise valid. Proof that the testator knew what he was about, and intended to make the disposition of property contained in his will, is essential. MUSSAMMAT JISI BAI v. POKHUR MAL. 51 P R 1882

12. Construction of will—Devise to defendant if child born to testator was a daughter—Birth of male child who died the same day—Defendant's right to succeed in preference to nearest collaterals.

In a suit by the nearest collateral heirs of a deceased occupancy tenant to obtain possession of the occupancy tenure, the defendant relied upon a will which provided that in the event of a son being born to the testator, whose wife was pregnant at the time of the execution of the will, such son would succeed as heir, but that if the child that happened to be born proved to be a daughter, the defendant in that case would succeed to the testator's occupancy rights and other property. It appeared that a male child was born alive, but that he died the same day.

Held, that the defendant was not entitled to succeed under the will, as the devise in his favour was only to take effect if no male heir was "born" to the testator: the very fact of such an heir being born alive was sufficient to vest the estate in him and to constitute him the propositus from whom descent should thereafter be reckoned. ALA BAKHSH v. MUHAMMAD SHAH. 181 P R 1882

Attestation by witnesses is not required by law in the case of a will made by a Hindu in the Punjab.

Held, that in absence of any declaration by a testator of an intention to revoke a prior will, the mere preparation by his direction of a document, which if executed would operate as a revocation, but which was never executed

by him, cannot be regarded as amounting to a revocation. RAM NARAIN v. DYA RAM. 27 P R 1883

14. Nuncupative will—Strong and satisfactory proof requisite.

The party who rests his title on a nuncupative will, is bound to make out very satisfactorily (1) the execution of the will with full details of the surrounding circumstances as to place and time, and (2) to prove with the utmost precision, the exact words on which he relies. MUSSAMMAT CHUNNI v. JAGGAN NATH. 15 P R 1890

15. Muhammadan Law—Nuncupative will—Form of words—Intention.

M. A., a Muhammadan, on various occasions said that R. S. was his son, and was malik and waris of his property, both during his life and after his death. It did not appear that on any of the occasions on which these expressions were used it was understood that M. A. was, by using these words, making a disposition of his property by way of bequest.

In a suit between the lineal descendants of M. A. regarding a house situate in Amritsar City, R. S. (who was a grandson of M. A.) contended, inter alia, that he was entitled to succeed to one-third of the house under Muhammadan Law in consequence of the nuncupative will made in his favour.

Held, that the alleged will was not established. An oral is as valid as a written will by the Muhammadan Law, but in both cases there must be an intention to bequeath.

If the words ascribed to M. A. had been written in a formal document, there might have been no difficulty in holding that there was a bequest, but in that case there would have been clear proof of a definite act intended to operate as a bequest. The repetition on several occasions of the words ascribed to M. A. militated against the view that he did on any one of such occasions intend to make a bequest. MUSSAMMAT NATHO BEGAM v. RAHIM SHAH. 55 P R 1891

16. Hindu will—Attestation—Indian Succession Act, 1865.

A will made by a Hindu residing in the Punjab does not require to be executed in conformity with the provisions of section 50, Indian Succession Act, 1865: the will may be perfectly valid although not executed conformably with that section. MUSSAMMAT SUNIYA v. MANI RAM. 74 P R 1891

17. Will, construction of—Principles of construction—Bequest to Hindu widow as malik—Presumption as to nature of bequest to Hindu female.

Although in construing a will, the Court should endeavour to gather the intention of the testator from the words actually employed by him, it is quite legitimate (subject to the express terms of the will) in construing the will of a Hindu with reference to a bequest in favour of a female to take into consideration what are known to be the ordinary notions and wishes of

Hindus with respect to the devolution of property. Ordinarily, their ideas are repugnant to giving a female a power of alienation over immoveable property, especially if it is ancestral and it may, therefore, be properly presumed, in the absence of clear indications to the contrary, that a devise of such property to a Hindu female does not confer an estate of inheritance, but only a life estate or a widow's estate as understood by Hindu Law. Nor is it a necessary result from the use of the term malik in respect of a Hindu female to whom a bequest is made that she should be considered the absolute owner of the property so bequeathed to her.

Applying the above principles of construction to the terms of the will in the present case, the Court held that, as the words used by the testator on the whole admitted of the interpretation that it was intended to give merely a life estate or a widow's estate to the female devisee such interpretation should have preference. RALLIA RAM v. MUSSAMMAT VED KAUR. 27 P R 1898

18. Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, sections 3, 7—"Will or other instrument"—Nuncupative will—Appointment of minor's heir as guardian of property.

Held, that the provisions of section 7 of the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, do not apply to nuncupative wills.

Held, further, that inasmuch as a minor's heir is peculiarly interested in the good management of the property to which he hopes to succeed, there is no objection to the appointment of such person as guardian of the minor's property as distinct from the minor's person. AMIN CHAND v. PHAGU MAL. 54 P R 1898

19. Among Awans of the Talagang tahsil of the Jhelum District, the power to transfer ancestral property by will does not exist. GHULAM MUHAMMAD v. ABBAS KHAN. 22 P R 1899

20. Will—Construction—Bequest to aulad Meaning of the expression aulad.

Held, that in a document like a will the word aulad should be construed in its popular sense, and that the plain meaning of the word comprises both male and female issue.

Mussammat Rakhi v. Mussammat Fatima, (89 P. R. 1892), distinguished. Kirshnarao Ramchandra v. Benabai (I. L. R. XX Bom. 571) referred to. MUSSAMMAT DHAN DEVI v. MUSSAMMAT MALAN. 114 P R 1900

21. Will—Bequest to trustees with a direction that it should be used for charitable purposes—Uncertainty of the object—Bequest void.

Held, that a bequest of property by a Muhammadan testator for such charitable objects as the trustees should think proper or for some such purpose as that the testator should obtain eternal bliss therefrom does not create a trust as the subject-matter is not clearly or definitely indicated and the trust is therefore void by reason of uncertainty of its object. SHAHAB-UD-DIN v. SOHAN LAL. 75 P R 1907

WILL—contd.

22. Will—Legacy—Specific or demonstrative—Failure of funds pointed out—Non-ademption of demonstrative legacy—Succession Act, 1865, sections 137, 140.

A bequeathed his hereditary jagirs to his son, and directed that out of the income of those jagirs his grandson would receive from the legatee Rs. 1,000 a year.

Held that the legacy to the grandson was demonstrative, and as such would not fail merely because the jagir was not legally chargeable with such payment.

Demonstrative legacies do not fail if the particular fund, though in existence, could not, by reason of some provision of law of which the testator was apparently in ignorance, be charged with the payment of the legacy in question. BHAGWAN DAS v. RAM DAS. 109 P R 1908

23. Will — Execution of—Testamentary capacity—Testator's illness—Undue influence—Evidence—Burden of proof.

Held, that the onus of proving the testamentary capacity of the testator lies on those by whom the will is propounded.

Held also, that when the evidence produced is found to have discharged that onus, such evidence is not displaced by mere proof of serious illness and of general intemperance of the testator.

Held further, that circumstances of the character that there was motive and opportunity for the exercise of undue influence by the relatives who attended the testator at the time of his illness and that some of them benefited by the will to the exclusion of other relatives of equal or nearer degree sometimes suggest suspicion and would lead the Court to scrutinise with special care the evidence of those who propunded the will, but in order to set the will aside there must be clear evidence that undue influence was in fact exercised or that the illness of the testator so affected his mental faculties as to make them unequal to the task of disposing of his property.

24. Custom—Will of self-acquired property in favour of some sons to exclusion of another son—Validity of, among Arain agriculturists of tahsil Kasur, Lahore District—Riwaj-i-am—Onus probandi.

Held, that plaintiff, on whom the onus probandi lay, had failed to prove that by custom his father, a Lahore Arain agriculturist, who had become dissatisfied with him and separated from him, giving him his share of the family estate as it then stood, was incompetent to bequeath his remaining estate with its subsequent self-acquired accretions to his other sons. 25. Incompetency of Hindu adoptive father to bequeath any part of the family property after adopting a son.—Bhabra Jains of Kaithal, Karnal District—Hindu Law.

Held, that among Bhabra Jains of Kaithal in the Karnal District the adoption of a collateral in the 4th degree is valid by custom.

Held, also, that the result of an adoption is to make the adopted son a co-parcener with Withdrawal of suit—Withdrawal of suit without permission to sue again—Subsequent suit filed on a different title not in existence at date of former suit—Compromise—Compromise of suit by guardian ad litem without sanction of Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 373, 462.

In 1898 L, a Bakhari Sayad of the Chiniot tahsil in the Jhang District, executed and registered a deed of adoption whereby he adopted G. Shortly after the execution L. died and his nephew S brought a suit against G. under the guardianship of his natural father N. for cancellation of the deed of adoption. This suit was subsequently compromised by the plaintiff and N. and under the compromise the plaintiff was allowed to receive a two-thirds share and G. a one-third share in the property left by L Leave of the Court had not been obtained under section 462, Civil Procedure Code, but the deed was filed in Court with an application that the suit might be consigned to the record room, which was granted. Plaintiff and N. then appealed to the Revenue authorities for mutation of names in accordance with the terms of the compromise. In the course of the proceedings N. died, and on the presentation of the widow of L., the Collector ordered the mutation in respect of the two-thirds to be effected in the name of the widow and in respect of the remaining one-third in the name of G. Subsequently the plaintiff instituted the present suit against G. and the widow of L. who was in possession of two-thirds, for possession of the entire property left by L. and in the alternative for a declaration that the deed of adoption in favour of G. was ineffectual as against his right. confessed judgment, but on behalf of G. it was contended—

(i) that the suit was barred under the provisions of section 373, Civil Procedure Code;

(ii) that the compromise effected by N. was not binding on the minor, inasmuch as N. had no power under Muhammadan Law to give away a large portion of the minor's property, and also because leave of the Court was not obtained to the compromise as required by section 462, Civil Procedure Code.

Held, (i) that the subsequent suit being clearly based in the main on the terms of the compromise and the real relief sought being possession according to its terms, was not barred by section 373 of the Code of Civil Procedure except in so far as it called in question the validity of G.'s adoption;

(ii) that under the Muhammadan Law N. being the natural guardian, was competent to give away a portion, as the whole of the property was in imminent danger of being lost to the minor.

Omission to obtain leave of the Court under section 462 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not make the compromise void ab initio but voidable at the instance of the minor if the equities of the case so require. The settlement in the present case being advantageous and for the benefit of the minor, and having been acted upon by the parties and the restitutio in integrum being impossible, was valid and binding on the minor.

3. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, sections 159, 198—Witness—Summoning and attendance of witnesses.

In a suit for pre-emption where the only question to be decided was that of the price of the subject-matter of the sale, the plaintiff on the day fixed for the hearing applied for coercive process against one of the vendees who had been summoned as a witness for him, but had failed to attend, the Judge observed that as the vendee was the leading man in the district he should not be compelled to appear in Court, and that his evidence would be unnecessary and, after examining one of the vendors and hearing the arguments, recorded an order that the case was closed and that the judgment would be delivered on a certain day.

Held, that the omission to summon the vendee was a substantial error in procedure. Under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure the plaintiff had the absolute right of summoning any witness he named to give evidence in the Court, and that the Judge had no power to fetter the plaintiff's discretion, and was therefore bound to take coercive measures against the vendor and to give every assistance to the plaintiff for securing the attendance of his witness. ZAILDAR.

1. Appointment—Election system.

Held, that the rules as to appointment of Zaildars do not imply that the election system shall be followed with any precision, but it is within the Deputy Commissioner's discretion to disregard the majority of votes, if personal fitness or services to the State more than counterbalance the greater popularity or influence evidenced by such majority. KARM SINGH v. JOWALA SINGH.

8 P R 1880 Rev.

2. Selection of zaildars—Votes how to be taken.

Held by the Financial Commissioner, that, in selecting zaildars, votes should be taken not by the Tahsildar, but by the Deputy Commissioner, or by one of his Assistants specially deputed for the purpose, and as far as possible in the zail itself.

Moreover, votes should only be taken once, the practice of calling for alternative votes being unnecessary, and a plan which should not be resorted to. NARAIN SINGH v. HIRA SINGH. 6 P R 1885 Rev.

3. Principles governing appointment of—Tribal representation.

On the death of the zaildar of the Madhepur zail in the Nakodar tahsil of the Jalandhar district, an election was held by the Superintendent of Settlement, under the orders of the Settlement Officer. The election resulted in the majority of the headmen of the circle voting in favour of the appellant, the son of the deceased zaildar. On this, the Settlement Officer recorded his opinion that, as the chief tribe in the circle were Rains, and the appellant, who belonged to that tribe, had obtained a majority of votes, he should be appointed. The Deputy Commissioner, however, held a second election, at which the majority of votes were given in favour of the respondent, a Hindu trader, and he was accordingly appointed zaildar by the Deputy Commissioner, whose order was upheld on appeal by the Commissioner.

Held by the Financial Commissioner, that as 28 out of the 29 villages of which the Madhepur zail is composed, are owned by Muhammadans, among whom men of the Rain tribe largely preponderate, and as one of the objects of appointing zaildars is to secure, through the elected or selected zaildars, a tribal representation of the chief agricultural classes in the circle, and the appellant had, in the first instance, been chosen by a large majority of votes of the headmen to represent them, he had the best claim to the post, and was better fitted than a Hindu trader to represent the headmen of a circle composed almost entirely of men of the Rain tribe.

The appointment of zaildars is not determined by the results of the election alone in any case, but by the combined results of the votes of the headmen of the circle, the personal fitness of the candidate, and the services rendered by him to the State. ALI MUHAMMAD v. BURA MAL.

4. Succession—Grounds for determining selection—Personal fitness—Minor not eligible.

Held by the Financial Commissioner, that the office of zaildar is not hereditary, and the holder of the post should always be able to perform the duties of the office in person and not by deputy. Personal fitness is one of the points on which stress is laid in the rules, and a minor cannot be held to be personally fit for the post. FATAH DARYA v. HUSAIN SHAH. 1 P R 1886 Rev.

5. Rules governing appointment of—Selection how to be determined.

In a case relating to the succession to a deceased zaildar, it appeared that the result of the voting was that appellant secured 25 votes, representing a jama of Rs. 10,393; while the respondent only got 19 votes representing a jama of Rs. 7,357. The latter, notwithstanding, was appointed zaildar by the Deputy Commissioner, who considered him the more influential man of the two, though he gave no reasons for this opinion.

Held by the Financial Commissioner, that as there was a large preponderance in favour of the appellant both in the number and in the weight of the votes and he had also a far larger stake in the zail, and, further, appeared to be probably better fitted for the post than the respondent, he was entitled to be appointed as zaildar. Karm Singh v. Jowala Singh No. 8 P. R. 1880 Rev. referred to. SABHA CHAND v. SADHA RAM. 4 P R 1886 Rev.

6. Removal from office—Grounds for such removal—Succession—Rule to be adopted where votes are nearly equal.

Held by the Financial Commissioner, that a zaildar, when once appointed should only be removed from his post for misconduct or neglect of his duties. To remove him after performing years of good service, solely on the ground of old age, or because an accident disables him from performing the duties of his post, is a very harsh measure. In such cases he should be allowed to carry on his duties by deputy.

In deciding questions of succession to zaildarships, the same rule should be applied as is applied in disposing of disputes relating to succession to chief lambardarships, viz., that when votes are nearly equal, and in all other respects the rival candidates for the

13 P R 1886 Rev

7. Rules to be observed in appointment of.

Held, by the 2nd Financial Commissioner, that in appointing zaildars every care should be taken to exclude men who by character and influence are not fitted to discharge properly the duties of the post, and also those who are believed to have obtained votes in an improper manner.

Though the rules which govern the appointment of zaildars do not expressly lay down that a zaildar must either reside in his circle or own land in it, or hold the office of a lambardar in it, it was the undoubted intention of Government that persons appointed to the post of zaildar should be selected from among the landowners of the zail to which they are appointed.

Selection to the post of zaildar should ordinarily be made from among the lambardars of the circle; but in exceptional cases, and for sufficient reasons, a candidate who is a landowner, though not a lambardar, may be appointed. SHER SINGH v. CHANDA SINGH.

8. Disqualification of pleader for post of zaildar.

Held by the 2nd Financial Commissioner that the duties of the two offices of zaildar and pleader cannot with due regard to administrative convenience be properly discharged simultaneonsly by one person. GHULAM NIAZ KHAN v. ACHAL SINGH. 3 P R 1887 Rev.

11. Zaildar—Dismissal—Opportunity of being heard.

On a judgment of a Sessions Court the Sessions Judge recorded his opinion that a zaildar and a lambardar were unfitted for their offices; the Sessions Judge had neither of the men before him either as an accused person, witness or otherwise.

The Collector on a perusal of the judgment of the Sessions Court dismissed the two men from their respective offices, and the Commissioner upheld the order on app[eal].

Held by the Financial Commissioner that the obiter dictum of the Sessions Judge did not exonerate the Collector from making a separate enquiry, and giving the officials in question full opportunity of explaining or defending their conduct by evidence or otherwise. In the matter of the DISMISSAL OF BARKHURDAR, ZAILDAR. 11 P R 1891 Rev.

12 Zaildars—Hereditary claims, other things being equal.

Although no right to the office of zaildar arises from the fact that the claimant is related to the former holder of the office, yet it is equally true that such relationship is no disqualification.

If among the claimants it were found that the man who was selected as having the strongest claim on the recognised grounds were also son of the late holder of the office, a Collector might very fairly feel confirmed and supported in his choice.

The dictum that appointments should as far as possible not be of a hereditary character disapproved.

13. Rule No. 167 of Rules under Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887—Hereditary claims.

Upon a vacancy occurring in the office of zaildar in a zail in which the Jats formed two-thirds and the Awans one-third of the agriculturists, it appeared that among the nineteen claimants was one R. R., the son of the late holder. It was admitted that R. R. was personally as fit as the best of the other claimants, and that he worthily represented the Jats. The Commissioner, however, appointed one A. B., an Awan to the post, on the grounds that the Jats had held the zaildari for many years, that as far as possible every class of the community should be given a fair chance of occupying these rural offices, and that so far from the fact of R. R. being the son of the late holder constituting a point in his favour, it should be considered as against him.

Held, following Attar Singh v. Bhagel Singh 3 P. R. 1892, Rev. that under the circumstances of the case, R. R. had a preferential right to be appointed.

Application for zaildarships should not be encouraged. RALLA RAM v. AMIR BAKHSH.
